Mr. MELSON. of New York, could not consent to the conclusions of the select committee, and made remarks in extennasion of Mr. Field's offence, invoking the excise of charity in the case.

Mr BEAMAN, the chairman, said the committee were instructed not only to report the facts and circumstances of the case, but what order should be taken by the House. If it had not been for the intervention of third parties death might have been produced, and the assault was proceeded by violent and offencive language, and bullying and intimidation, to deter Judge Kelley from the performance of his official duty. The question was not whether Mr. Field was a loyal man or a rictous man, but whether he had committed the offence charged, about which there was no doubt. A reprimand was the least punish ment they could inflict.

Mr. CUX, of Oblo, had no objection to the reprimand proposed. No doubt the Speaker would properly perform that duty, but he was opposed to excluding Mr. Field from the privilege of the floor.

Mr. BEAMAN said the latter did not go so far as the gentleman supposed

Mr. JOHNSON of Maryland, presented the memorial of the Maryland Legi-lature remonstrating against the authorization of a new railroad between Washington City and New York.

Mr. MORGAN, of New York, from the Military Committee, reported a bill so to amond the act granting pensions to discharged soldiers as to give a pension to all soldiers discharged in consequence of wounds received in battle or on picket duly within two years of the date of their enlistment.

This act was deemed necessary in consequence of a decision of the Auditor that picket duly did not come within the meaning of the law granting pensions to those wounded in battle

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE REBELLIOUS STATES.

The House resumed the consideration of the bill providing a government for States subverted or over-thrown by the rebellion.

Mr. EDGERTON, of Indiana, concluded his remarks from yesterday in opposition to the bill. He said the people want peace, and the public welfare demands it. The time of peace is near at hand if we exercise proper wisdom; and look to reason rather than force. He argued that conclination is, the only basion, which peace can be made without degradation and dishonor. He condemned ultra Abolitionism, and commanded the peace policy of the Chicago Convention.

Feveral gentlemen who had prepared speeches were allowed to print without reading them in the House.

The FPEAKEE caused to be read the official report of Gez. Gilmore announcing the surrender of Charleston. The news was applicated in all parts of the House.

A SUESTITUTE OFFERED.

Mr. ASHLEY, of Ohlo, reported a substitute for the original bill. He said he had given to this subject special attention. During the last session, the Committee on the Rebellious States, of which he was a member, reported a bill which passed both Houses, but failed to meet the searction of the President. Since that time it had been his earnest desire to conclisicated gamlemen who were opposed to the original bill, and, if possible, to secure a united vote; and against his better judgmen and conviction he consented to a compromise by providing for the admission of Louisiaus, Arkaness, and Tennessee.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

- The London Times of January 31st has a stilled and sensational editorial on the capture of Fort Fisher and the failure of General Butler in the previous attempt. It shows its usual knowledge o geography by locating Lowell in Connecticut. Thus The order to this officer to return to his place of residence in peaceful Connecticut was a rebuke under which a soldier must keenly suffer." There is fame for General Butler! All his life long he has been representing Connecticut! The candidate for Governor, the hero of the rescue of Washington in April, 1861, the Military Governor of New Orleans, the "Beast" of Southern chivalry and the boast of Ward Beecher and the Fifth-avenue élite of New York, now retires to his home in peaceful sticut! Where is Parton? Where are Mitc ell and Colton? When did Prussia join the Zoll" verein? Verily, we think General Butler ought to send his compliments and his card to the Times, with the "at home" underscored—Lowell, Massachusetts. The writer of the Times, editorial comes nearer truth and showing a glimmering of sense when he says, in connection with the other topic, the fall of Fort Fisher; "Thus, after long and isborious exertions and an expense equal to that in-curred in many European wars, the Federals may be said to have almost succeeded in shutting in their

Falconer and Chatterton. The demonstration that took place was of a kind that few could understand who are not aware of the esteem in which a veteran favorite is held by the London public. Three short pieces, strongly cast, constituted the principal part of the entertainment in point of time; but the distinctive display of the occasion was a no piece, enti-titled "Paul Bedford at Home," in which Mr. Buckstone officiated as master of the ceremonies. The stage was occupied by an assembly which, we may almost say, embraced the whole of the histrionic profession, and this was faced by a dense body of spectators, which apparently comprised the whole population of London. Mr. Buckstone's office was Foster,

BROOKLYN, Feb. 4, 1865.

MY DEAR MR. GARRISON: I have had the Liferator sent to me free for several years, on the principle, I presume, that I needed it. So long as I was in a state of nature, I consented to have a free gospel preached to me. But, as I have made up my mind, at length, that slavery is an evil and ought to be abolished, I suppose I can find no good reason for taking the Liberator without paying for it. And yet confessedly the machinery for collecting this branch of the nation's income is imperfect and undergoing change. And with what patriotic cheerfulness and acquiescence the people pay this tax to preserve their nation and to maintain democracy. Department, from Sir William Armstrong, the well-known English gunmaker, in which he urges this Government to imitate the example of France and Russia, by manufacturing his guns. To this piece of scientific impertinence, Capt. Upon these guns was found an inscription, setting forth that they were a present from Sir William Armstrong to Jeff

MR. DAVIS ON THE REBELLION.

Mr. DAVIS, of Maryland, from the present condition of affairs, argued that by the 4th of July next armed rebellion will have failed to lift its brazen front. His object, as expressed in the bill, was to prevent the States now inrebellion from coming here next December dictatorially clamoring for the admission of their Representatives and twenty-two senstors. The President should treat those who hold power in the South as they deserve—strip them of their emblems of authority, and expel them from the Executive mansion, should they there intrude. As to Louisians, that State was reorganized by the bayonets of General Banks and the secret letter of the President. He wished to prevent the rebels from awesting in here next December and becoming the masters. In this connection he referred to a substitute offered by Mr. Wilson, providing that notenators and Representatives shall be admitted to seats in Congress until a law shall have been passed declaring that a proper government has been re-established.

Mr. WILSON inquired what there was in the pend-— This Commonwealth, as stated in the last message of Governor Curtin, has commenced proceedings against the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company, an organization which, however they may have violated the law, was the first to develop the oil regions of Pennsylvania. It is understood that one of the charges against the road is that it has built branches without any authority. There is a bitter antagonism in the northwestern counties declaring that a proper government has been re-established.

Mr. WILSON inquired what there was in the pending bill to prevent the Senate and Bouse of Representatives from the Southern States?

Mr. DAVIS replied that the two houses are the ultimate indges as to who shall be admitted, being governed, according to the Constitution, by the qualifications and returns. He wished by this bill to stop the raising of the question in advance. Provisional governors are now appointed by the President without law, and what he proposed was that they should be appointed in pursuance of the law and confirmed by the ensiel. Judges were appointed in Louisiana without law by the President. His object was to restore the least. Judges were appointed in Louisiana without law by the President. His object was to restore the least. Judges were appointed in Louisiana without law, but this was what some gentlemen object to doing. If this bill be not passed, what was the alternative? The President, with the bayonet, remains in power without law in the premises. He (Mr. Davis) was attempting to lay down the law, but some gentlemen bere prefer arbitrary will to the written law of the land. Ten years ago, when he first came to Congress, this was a Government degenerate to arbitrary will to the open he set the Covernment degenerate to arbitrary will to the vice who have rebelled against the Constitution and laws will, like the Prodigal, return, asking forgiveness on their liness.

The tax which it is in contemplation by Congress to impose upon crude and refined petroleum is occasioning considerable stir among the dealers in that article. Delegations have reached Washington, it is reported, from various cities to urge the repeal of the tax. The ### The star of the star of the repeal of the tax. The stax on crude oil is placed at 6c per gallon (equal to about $2 40 per bbl.) This new burthen, it is feared, will seriously depress the business, and especially restrict the export demand, which is not affected by the tax as now levied, and remitted in case of shipment to a foreign port. As there is no special provision made for drawback in this case, the additional cost of 10c per called a star of the content of the cost of th gallon on the exported article must bring the coal oil now being extensively manufactured in Great Britain, at a cost not exceeding 250 per gallon, in gold, largely in competition with our domestic product in all European markets, and, it is thought, with a chance of superseding the latter altegether. Such a result would involve the gravest consequences to our great oil pro-ducing interest, which has already absorbed such a vast amount of capital, and which is largely dependent upon a foreign market for its profits. Hence it behooves our legislators in Washington to act upon this subject with the greatest caution, lest they kill outright the goose which lays the golden eggs.

The latest proposition before Congress is to exact the payment of duty on petroleum, whether exported or not, with a view to compel foreign consumers to contribute to the wants of the Trassury. But the difficulty in the way of this project is, that with the additional cost of 30c per gallon for refined oil, or even half that sum, foreign consumers would not take it at all, and their market would be lost to us forever. Besider, as such a measure would be equivalent to the levy of an export duty, it is doubtful whether it could be consummated without a formal amendment of the Constitution.
