TOO STRANGE NOT TO BE TRUE;

A TALE,

By LADY GEORGIANA FULLERTON,

Authoress of "Bilen Middleton," "Lady Bird." &co.,

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

"Truth and fiction are closely blended in this tale, and in the appendix will be found the material fromwhence some of its incidents have been drawn. as also the narrative which has furnished its groundwork.

Those who are sometimes glad to turn away for a while from the beaten roads of history, and to tread the byways of romance; who love truth which resembles fiction, and fiction which follows closely in the footsteps of truth, may, perhaps, find some little interest in this story of the last century."

the activity and excitement prevailing in the other theatres of war, are weary of the tedium, and from camp to camp and corps to corps; and if it be efore the close of the week, should weather favor we shall have news of "marching orders" in verity. I'he rebels evidently anticipate a speedy movement

PRIBADLINESS OF OPPOSING SOLDIERS. Still, although both armies are aware that they must shortly engage each other in perhaps the ercest contest of the war, it is singular to observe what an entente condiale exists between the pickets. of the loyal press of the North, that reconciliation. between the two people will return with the return of peace. If the men whose chief business it is to shed each other's blood can play the part of friends upon the eve of the battle, how short-lived, after all, must be their animosity, who never meet each other wherewith to fight their battles! CRESATION OF PICKET SHOOTING.

Another evidence of friendly feeling between the two armies is found in the fact that picket shooting, in the 6th Corps, and, to a great extent, is all the other corps, has become a thing of the past.

Retween the 6th Corps pickets and the enemy this amicable feeling is most observable; perhaps for the reason that the opposing lines are here quite closs together, in some places being less than a stone sthrow apart. Such cold, raw nights as these it stone's throw apart. Such cold, raw nights at these it is necessary for the pickets to kindle a fire, and firewood in some places is rather a scarce article. At such times negotiations are entered fitto between the combatants, generally in this form: "Say, Yanks, want some wood!" "Yes; got any over here to spare, Johnny?' "We haint got any just now, but we're gwine to cut a tree of you 'uns, don't fire on us 'uns and we'll give you 'uns haif." It'is only necessary to enter into this little parley. When the tree happens to flourish on the "neutral ground" between the picket lines, in a spirit of reiprocity, whenever our troops out down a tree Johnny" generally gets his half.

When a rebel attempts to desert in daylight, given us the warning, "Lay down, Yanks, we're floing to fire!" But the great majority of desert-ers come over at night, and the rebel pickets, for the purpose of general intimidation, and not with the remotest idea of ever killing any particular chap, keep up a pretty considerable "popping" of musketry after dark. This, how ever, is not the regular picket-firing that used to prevail, for their shots seldom reach our lines, and our men rarely reply. Lee will trust none but his veterans on picket now, and the veterans are not slow in turning the opportunity to good account. At the rate they are coming in Lee will have no

The Philadelphia Press, in an article eulogistic of General Butler, says:

"When the events of these turbulent years are written in history, it will be said of Butler that he broke the slave-letter with the word 'contraband."

It is nothing against General Butler to say, as we do on the very best authority, that the "contraband" idea was not original with him. It was advanced and argued, and the term made use of, in a letter to the New Jork Tribune, written from Fortress Monroe some time before General Butler reached there, and before the subject engaged his attention. Subsequently the question of the status and treatment of refugee negroes was the subject of conversation on the ramparts of Fortress Monroe, when a young lieutenant in the regular army, since dead, made what we believe was the very first speech, lasting about half a minute, in favor of the "contraband" idea, as it was afterwards adopted. - There is such a spirit of fairness in the following article from the New York Sun, of Friday, in deprecation of the assaults upon Vice President Andrew Johnson, that we transfer it to those columns. The Sun is not of Governor Johnson's way of thinking, and yet it does not hesitats; turday, the 4th instant, to give him credit for those ever-to-be-remembered services and shortfices which have made his name so conspicuous in the annals of these sad and stirring and tolerant mind it is much. It is used here by every lady who can afford it, from the Walmut-street beliedown to the phinant and pretty store girl of Eighth street, who, I imagine, influences much of the trade in our retail stores. The Queens of Petrolla, who, after all, are the originators of all the fashions here, use this, universally. M. Eugene 'Jouin, a wiry little Frenchmez, first brought it into notice here. Eugene is a sort of Magnanimous Guasimodo, but with a rare love of the beautiful, since he has given to femininity the 'Email de Paris.'

1800 * COORDER SON THE RESERVE OF THE RES

$2,765,448 69 844,599,521,92 The stock market was dull yesterday, the sales foot-ing up a smaller amount than for some days. The con-tinued depression in the sold market quite unsettled all prices. Holders of produce and merchandise evidently feel a little blue over the prospect before them; but it does not follow, after all, that they could have done any better, if they had foreknown the course of events Washington's Birthday in London.

The dinner in honor of the 133d anniversary of Vashington's Birthday came off on the 22d, at St. James' Hall, as projected. It was an entirely private affair of about one hundred guests, male and female, no reporters being present, and no English guests except half a dozen specially invited. Off. Morse, our consul, presided, and Mr. Adams honored the festivity. Here is a list of the teasts and those who responded to them, after which I shall offer a few observations: "The Memory of Washington," Mr. Adams. "Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States," Mr. James Beale, an Englishman. "The Queen," Mr. Parker, of Boston. "The Union," the Rev. Mr. Haynes, of New York, and Dr. Wilkinson, an Englishman. "The Military and Naval Forces of the United States," Dr. Richardson, an Englishman. "The Press," Mr. Bergh, United States Army. "The Ladies," Mr. Curtis, of New York. The chairman introduced-the teasts in an appropriate manner, alluding very effectually to recent events in the United States, and especially to the aboiltion of slavery and constitutional amendment, which was perhaps what some present hardly bargained for, of which heieafter. Mr. Adams spoke of Washington, and predicted that at no time in the past history of his country had he been so revered, understood, and appreciated as he would be in the future towards which we are progressing, involving Union, peace, and a return to prosperity in the Safes. Mr. Parker discoursed of the Queen in o this date. It may be that "the beginning of the to this date. It may be that "the beginning of the end" is just at hand, and that the bottom is todrop out of prices and never be replaced. Certainly it is with satisfaction that we quote a decline in butter, eggs, groceries, and other comforts which have been at prices almost above the reach of the poor. But we shall be surprised if there is a steady downward tide, with no intervals of reaction. Such a one sided development would be unnatural, and hardly to be expected. The decline in stocks does not keep pace, however, with that in marchandise, for the stock market is still. with that in merchandise, for the stock market is still flower continue depressed, and the sales are at lower figures. The 1881s sold at 110—a decline of %; the new 5-20s sold at 109%—a decline of %; and the old sold at 97%; State 5s were steady at 87; City loans continued de-pressed and the new sold at a further decline of 1. There was little raid in Company bonds, but prices were steady. The Railway share list is irregular, but with a endency for a further decline. Pennsylvania B. declined 2—selling at 59, and Camden and Amboy 2—selling at 58; Reading closed at about 54%—a slight advance. Morristown was steady at 69 The chief feature of the oil-stock market was a further decline of Big Tank to 4; vered, understood, and appreciated as he would be in the inture towards which we are progressing, involving Union, peace, and a return to presperity in the States. Mr. Parker discoursed of the Queen in a social, rather than a political aspect; and Mr. Beale believed that posterity would do that justice to the name of Abraham Lincoln which was now commonly denied him. The several toasts were accompanied by national and patriotic airs, and, after dinner, the company adjourned to the drawing-room, when a few songs were sung, and a dance concluded the evening's entertainments. I am credibly informed that the committee actually proposed, at the outset, to invite a person named McOleilan to take the chair, and that the motion would probably have been carried into effect had the individual been in England instead of France, from which circumstances I infer that my strictures on angileized American and Copperheads do apply to the getter-up of this entertainment, and that in the strongest sense. In fact, our best frience here, Messus. Cooken, Bright, Forster, Barter, Mason, Jones, and others, have been coldenouldered and excluded from all participation in the proceedings, in deference to latent Copporhead is mad amphiblat toodysm of dominant British opinion. Mr. Estocurt, chairman of the Johne Emancipation Committee of Manchester, was invited, but not permitted to open his mouth, except for the purpose of esting. Observe that none of the toasts recognized emancipation. The time may arrive when Barnua will import from Europe, as a curiosity, an American of the school—a believer in slavery, and the things as they were before the rebellion—of course he'd exhibit him in a compartment near that of the serpents.—Cor.
