espondence of The Press.] CHARLESTON, S. C., March 10, 1865. the 21st Regiment of United States Colored te character of this gathering gave the best prose that the new freedmen will, with fair oppor es, be fully able to take care of themselve explained the new system under which the ks are called to be men and freemen; spoke of r duty and interest to labor and to serve, and appreciatively heard. Mr. James Redpath, erintendent of schools in Charleston, t a labors at this and other times the cause of appointed, and of these one half are white laastriously circulated by the old officers of the scriminately mixed, have kept many of the cheerfully. Out of eight con white teachers chosen, twelve were in favor of teaching either white or black children. This is decided progress upon the old schtiment—this, too, in the city of Cha White and colored children are taught in the same building, and no prejudice interferes with their lessons. No white teachers have been called upon to take charge of colored classes, and beyond the facnat the right of loyal freedmen's children to share the privilege of free education with the children of their disloyal oppressors has been acknowledged, here is nothing of which the most rabid secessionis eed complain. As it is, however, the wholesome and necessary thorn has been planted in his bosom. the impossible to do justice to our old friends with-out offending our old enemies. None have so much right to the free schools as the freed children o Charleston. In former times all the free colored nen were compelled to pay taxes to support the education of white men's children: the slaves were also taxed as mon were never taxed, and all without an atom of reward. It is quite time that the rule of justice should prevail wherever the United States holds territory. It will be unfortunate if any. thing more is conceded to those who have been disloyal, and if the colored children are turned out from participation in the public schools, and given over to private and Northern charity. The three hundred white boys and girls who attend school in Charleston are the sons and daughall their complexion toward the Government, the most willing to abide by it and support it. As every one knows who has travelled in the South. there is far less natural prejudice in the association What complexional feeling exists will, therefore, be the more speedily removed from the minds of that large class of whites who are to receive the most benefit from public free schools—an agency which must do more to regenerate the South than children can be seen playing together in the streets of Chapter white first harm not secured to embrace their brothers in blood, although those brothers and darker faces than their own, and fact, now as much for good as it was formerly for made the South, in many respects, one family. Not the black man, but his freedom, is the one thing innew order of things must be accepted either per-force or in reason, and those who have money only they are free. The complexional objection is a fantasy, a blind only for the slaveholder's radical au-tipathy to freedom. Not what will become of the blacks, but what will become of the whites, is the chief question, and it is not at all improbable that the fate of the former will solve the latter. At all

The Mexican official journal has lately published a number of letters received by Maximilian from various European countries, in response to the official announcement of his adventin Mexico. Among them are those of the Emperor of Russia, the Kings of Denmark and of Prussia, the Grand Dukes of Brunswick, Mecklenburg-Schwerin and of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Swiss Council, the German Confederation, thefree city of Hamburg, and others not now remembered. The same paper copies a portion of the speech of the King of Portugal at the opening of the court, in which he recognizes the Empire and accredits its envoy extraordinary and minister plonipotentiary. A letter from Italy, published yesterday in the Sociedad, states that Sig. BRIGHAM YOUNG'S MESSAGE, delivered January 23d, speaks of rapid advancement in Deseret. Population has increased, harvests have been bountiful, mines of coal discovered, commodious stores and dwellings erected, and machinery for the manufacture of cotton and woolen fabrics has been put in successful operation. Cultivating cotton proves to be less femunerative than raising cereals. The overlandroute by the plains has been so much disturbed by Indiats that a safer and more regular communication is offered by the Colorado river, and, in anticipation of a change, the Deseret Mercantile Association have built a warehouse at the head of navigation on that stream. In reference to the refusal of Cengress to admit Deseret into the Union, Brigham Young thinks the time is "not far distant when she will be requested and solicited to assume the dignity and responsibilities of a sovereign State."

the New York Post of yesterday says:

Gold has been very spasmodis and excited this morning. The opening price was 177, and on news of Sherman's communications with Wilmington being opened, the price fell 3 per cent. The closing price was 1745, Foreign exchange is duil and heavy at 198, the supply of foreign bills being largely in excess. The loan market'is well supplied at 7 per sent. But as a number of loans have been disturbed, there is more activity. Commercial paper is offering with more freedom, but passes alc wily at 74/26.

The stock market is feverish and languid. Governments are heavy, and State stocks quiet, bank shares unglected and railroad bonds fat. Railroad shares are duil and drooping, the firmest being Brie, New York Central, and Michigan Southern; and the weakest littnois Central and Fort Wayne. The story of Mr. Cornelius Barnes Webb, a mechanic from Philadelphia who emigrated to Charleston a few years before the war, has interest to all who admire self-sacriding loyalty. The wife of Mr. Webb was matron of the hospital where shelling, and her unvarying kindness is gratefully een under her care. In August last Mr. Webb Union lines of three officers from the hospitals, but when all was ready and the party had nearly set foot in a boat to row over to Morris Island, they were informed upon by an accomplice named Monahan, who had agreed to provide the boat. The prisoners were taken at various hiding places in the Union houses neighboring the wharves. Mr. Webb was arrested, but, for want of evidence, his case could not come to trial. He remained in prison for eight months, when he was released through the persistent appeals of his friends, Unionists of Charleston. It is gratifying to know that to all such deserving instances as this the commandant of Charleston has shown a soldier's gratitude and favor. When Union men have been found destitute, the officers of the post have not un-frequently supplied them with liberal purses, besides affording them all the aid of their authority under the Government.
