Safe Investments to Avoid Taxation. When the financial policy of the Federal Administration was fairly started, it was assailed by a tempest of vituperation from our foreign enemies and the friends of the traitors who were permitted to reside in the loyal States. This policy was neceshis title. sitated by the fearful and sudden exigencies of the war, and was an experiment which could only succeed with the aid of a strong and hearty public opinion. The gold not hoarded, or exported, rose to an extravagant premium, and the bonds of the Government were thrown into the market and sold for what they might command. A paper currency to supply the needs of the people and business men was lows. issued. It was at this time that ex-President BUCHANAN made himself busy in his efforts to impair the public credit among his familiars and friends. Visions of bankruptcy, general and individual, constantly flitted before his eyes, and words of dismal prophecy were constantly dropping, like so many poisons, from his tongue. He advised everybody to avoid Government bonds, and to place no confidence in greenbacks, or "shinplasters," as he calls them still. If his followers must invest the money they had made out of his most abandoned Administration, let them buy real estate; and, to show he was sincere delphia. in this advice, he bought two fine farms in Chester county, and a few days ago secured a third. And we learn that his example has been copied by most of the men who continue to hover in the gloomy twilight of his declining years. There was a double object in this concerted movement: To show hatred and distrust of the Government and its ability to raise money_and_to_ provide a safe and convertible currency : and next, to avoid being taxed to support the Executive in prosecuting the war-farms being that interest which notoriously contributes little to the internal revenue. The consistency of this proceeding is clear; for as Mr. BUCHANAN and his parasites discouraged enlistments, it was a logical sequence that they should also refuse to aid the Government in its endeavors to pay the public creditors, and to feed, equip, and compensate the troops. But not so with the people and the fighting men of the Republic. They bore the burdens imposed to promote the good cause, and freely and gladly yielded up their substance and their lives to it, and generously and gracefully loaned their little surplus earnings to the public treasury. The publication of the income tax proves that many of these Buchanan patriots are suspiciously poor, though rich in valuable landed estates. They may console themselves, however, by a contrast between their prophecies of national ruin and the complete triumph of the national authority; and as they see the people rushing to invest their property in the securities of the Republic, and rejoicing at the rapid appreciation of the paper money of the Government and the National Banks. and see foreigners pouring their gold into the treasury of the United States, they may, perhaps, feel a twinge of conscience at the fact that to escape taxes, and to show their hate of their own country, they

The story of divisions bestitutes one of the proudest pages in the history of the war. The public opinion tween the consul and the Government, and ill which sustained the Government and subfeeling on the part of the latter towards our Government, is baseless. It seems that a Mr. E. D. Etchison was appointed consul in the summer of 1864 in the room of Leonard Pierce, mitted to these losses, now, in the face of the constant victories and conquests of our armies, demands that there should be a re-Jr., resigned. MORE REBEL VICTORIES BY JOHNSTON AND HARDEE.

GEN. SHERMAN'S ADVANCE CHECKEL WITH HEAVY LOSS.

The Victories "Important" and Rebe Hopes Growing Higher. .

WASHINGTON, March 24, 9 o'clock P. M .- The following extracts from Richmond papers have been received this evening at 8.30 P. M. from General Grant :

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War. OITY POINT, March 23, 1865.

Hon. Edwin M. Sianion, Secretary of War: Richmond papers received. The following i "It is understood in North Carolina : "It is understood in official circles that no fight-ing has occurred in North Carolina since Sunday, and, from all we can learn, it appears that Sherman has attempted no advances since his check on that day. "General Hardee's victory on the 18th inst. was a very important one, and as regards the enemy a most bloody affair. General Johnston telegraphs that in that battle the Confederate loss was 450, while that of the enemy was 3,300. The fight took place at Averysboro, on the Oapé Fear river, half way between Raleigh and Fayetteville.

"General Johnston's defeat of the enemy last Sunday, the 19th inst. occurred at Bentonville, the Neuse river."

By these facts we are informed that Sherman has been pushing toward Raleigh in two columns, one moving due north from Fayettaville, the other northward from Newbern. Gen. Hardee fought the former; Gen. Johnston the latter.

What do you say to this, Mr. Commissioner of the U.S. Internal Revenue, JOSEPH J. LEWIS, of Chester county?

The Late Duc de Morny.

There have been few creations of nobility under the Second Empire in France, and of these, two have already fallen in-the Dukedom of Malakoff, held by Marshal PELISSIEB, and that conferred upon M. DE MORNY, President of the Corps Legislatifequivalent to the Speakership of the House of Representatives here, and of the House of Commons in England. The Duke DE MORNY has not died of old age, for he October, and is over two years younger than NAPOLEON, who will be fifty-seven years old next month. We mention them together because the popular opinion of France long has been that the Emperor and the Duke had a common parentage, on the maternal side, and that the Duke was son of Queen Horrense, not by her husband, Louis NAPOLEON, once King of Holland. The Countess De Souza, beauty and blue-stocking, adopted him, during the reign of the first NAPOLEON, personally educated him until he was fit to enter the public school at Muron, where Marshal NEY's son was his companion and competitor, and took almost a mother's pride in his scholastic successes, which were | a number of parties in Philadelphia and crowned by his obtaining the first prize in the Bonapartean Lyceum. His studies were directed with a view to the military service, and, in his twenty-first year, early in Louis PHILIPPE's reign, he became second lieutenant in a regiment of Lancers. He served in Algeria, under the eye of the Duke of Orleans, with considerable gallantry, was wounded more than once, named in the despatches for his bravery, and decorated with the Legion of Honor, for having saved the life of Gen. TREZEL. - After five years' service he quitted the upon to send much specie abroad. An army, and, having succeeded to a large article from the London Times, of the 6th fortune bequeathed to him by his adopting mother, devoted himself to industrial purinstant, while complaining that the last steamer from New York only brought about suits, particularly the production of sugar from beet-root, on which he wrote a pam-$25,000 in gold, predicts that it is "not impossible that the next steamer to New phlet, which displayed so much ability that he was invited to participate in various | York may take out other amounts of gold," and at the same time alludes to speculations wherein talent and capital were likely to succeed. THE ITALIAN OPERA .- Notwithstanding the rigors of the Lenten period a large and brilliant au-dience assembled at the Academy of Music last evening to listen once more to the music of Verdi. sung to the tender Italian which has so long been a stranger to our city. The temptation was great, for the opera was Verdi's Istest, "La Forza del Destino," and the rumors of its success in the great "metropolis" had panetrated inland, until they had reached even unto the music-loving ears of the denizens of the Quaker City. A single performance has, therefore, boom ly estimate the merits of a musical work on a first hearing, we accept what has been granted us and are thankful.

"La Forza del Destino" is what may be termed an eccentric opera of the real Verdi school. The plot is tragic in the extrement Lovers in the profoundest depths of misfortune-a cruel father, who is killed in the first act-a wandering and disconsolate damsel, who, disguised as a man, becomes a hermit-two duels-a murder and a suicide-there make up the full table of horrors. On the brighter side of the ploture we have a light-hearted damsel who is called a gipsy, but who appears in the religious scenes to be a good Ca-tholic, and a comically ill-natured friar. These, together with two mountebanks and a couple of ancing girls, give relief to the general tragic chaacter of the action. Signora Carozzi-Zucchi, who enacted the part of Donna Leonora, is an artist of excellent dramatic power, and possessing a well trained and sympathetic soprano voice, her only defect being, at times, a slight uncertainty in pitch. She received great applause from the audience, and would evidently ecome a favorite on further acquaintance M'lle Morensi, who performed the character of Preziosilla, the gipsy, and alterwards a vivandière is already known to our amateurs, and both acted and sang most charmingly, sustaining, and even outrunning, her established reputation. Her clear and musical voice gave complete satisfaction to the most refined ear, and she achieved a real success, especially in the "rataplan," where she skilfully accompanied herself and the chorus on the drim. With Signor Wassimiliani we cannot express our-selves as thoroughly satisfied. After Himmer and belman, his voice seemed clouded and unsympa hetic, and though apparently correct, he lacked Signor Bellini as Don Carlos and Susini as the Abbot were really grand-that is to say, as grand as the music and the drama would permit them to be. Signor Lorini, as Friar Militone, showed himself as an excellent buffo performer. His sermon (the first one, perhaps, ever set to music,) and his scene with the mendicants at the convent gate being irresistibly funny.

As a whole, the opera may be considered successful. Though there are few striking melodies, and the harmonies are rather bars, and full of startling and poorly modulated transitions, the general effect produced last night was such as to make the audiance desire a further hearing. This evening Auber's favorite opera "Fra Diavolo " will be given. MR. CLARKE'S FAREWHLL BENEFIT takes place at the Walnut street Theatre this evening, when he will appear in four of his best characters. The last night of this great comedian should be like the end of a carnival-a crowd of good-humored pleasure seekers. We know that no disappointment would ccur to sadden them.
