ducing cause of all the free governments ever known on earth. A most instructive and interesting parallel was drawn between the ancient Feudal system and the system of free representative government, as esta-blished in these United States. To mechanical labor belonged the paternity of representative go-vernment, the elective franchise, the trial by jury, and commerce itself with its colossal fortunes. From labor sprang, too, printing, the "art preserva-tive of all aris." Strange, that an attempt should have been made in our day, at the samon's mouth, to feund on the rains of American institutions an "mpire based on the degradation of human labor. God be thanked, the horribie lie that God has cre-sted human beings to toil and receive no pay is for-stret exploded.

God be thanked, the horhofs the that the that be have on the solution that the sted human beings to toil and receive no pay is for-ever exploded. A legend of mythology makes mention that the fancied deities with which the speculative Greeks peopled the world combined to select for Vulcan, the god of handiraft, a wife. They found him sweitering over heated inraces, in huge smitheries, blowing huge bellows, ard haomering at heavy anvils, of course begrimed with soot and dust. For this swarthy-looking divinity what kind of a wife did they select ? Not a mere duab taken from the scullery. No! They ences for his compation 'true, the fair and lovely Queen of Beauty. The legend was declared to be symbolic-wiz: that even from amidst the clarg of anvils, the olister of far-naces, and the stunning sounds and sooty blackness of forges the minn, free and untrammeled, may go forth, piece the dim atmosphere polsed around it, and, winging its way to the freer air and purer light beyond, may ally itself with Beauty-the brauty that is connected with the play of fancy-the achievements of Art, the oreations of genut-beauty such as the sculptor em-bodies in the almost breaking marble-such as architecture developes in her stately and harmoni-ous proportions-such as music clothes with the harmony of sounds-and moral beauty, likewiso, such as is associated with the sifections, the con-relence, the heart, and the life. The reversed lecturer here repeated an eloquent

The reverend lecturer here repeated an eloquent The reversed becurer here repeated an eloquent extract from Carlyle, in commendation of labor, and in anathematizing indelence as a orime. Nu-merons appropriate scripture passages were like-wise introduced. He closed by asylock that he had once heard of a book, whose title was "Three Modes of Living." It was divided into three chapters. The first: "How to live within your means." The second: "How to live within your means." The second: "How to live beyond your means." The third: "How to live beyond your means." The second: "How to live beyond your means." The second: "How to live beyond your means." The title of which was: "How to live beyond your means." The second: Which was: "How to live beyond your means." The title start chapter, it was to be feared, was still ex-tant. We have given a mere synopsis of the leo-ture, than which rarely one of more interest has been delivered in our city.

rangements of the county prison." OUTRAGEOUS MISCONDUCT. John T. Butler, John Meyers, and James Wil-liamson.were arraigned at the Cherry streat Sta-tion House, on the charge of misdomeanor and ma-licitous mischief. The evidence set forth that be-tycen one and two o'clock yesterday morning the prisoners were in the year of the public houses of Mr. James E. Penn, 232 North Second streat. It is alleged they forcibly entered the kitchen, broke open a burean, turned everything toppy tury, smashed things generally, stole a pistol and a gold chain. The pistol was recovered from one of the parties. The accused were committed in default of $1,000 hall each to answer.
