What is Saved and Gained. The war has terminated in a triumph essential to the protection of the best interests of the North. We secure not merely the vest area of territory which the rebellion sought to wrest from the Republic, but the intrusion of outsiders. we purify it and cement it by new bonds to the Union. One successful attempt at secession would have speedily been followed by another, until every semblance of national unity had been lost, or made the prey of anarchy, military despotism, or the foreign conqueror. Mexico would have been our prototype. Instead of pitying her, as now, our ruin would have the Atlantic. Should this be correct, the news will been so complete that she would have learned to pity us. The day is not distant when every conquered district will rejoice in our victory. The ends that rendered success essential to our future welfare are as serviceable to them as to us. The Soldiers and the Farmers. There are now so few Concernead papers. that to read one a month old is to be lef into a flood of forgotten affairs. This is hardly the time to revive what does not deserve to be remembered, but there are cases which fidelity to history commands us to preserve. A text for curious reflection is to be found in the two subjoined extracts from Pennsylvania papers; the one from the home organ of JAMES BUCHANAN, and the other printed in what is called "the mountain county" of Cambria. Both these articles appeared late in March pr early in April. and were suggested by the efforts of the Government to enforce the draft to crush the rebellion. The object was to create disaffection and resistance to the laws by appeals to the most mercenary and selfish feelings. It is difficult, as we read these extracts, to decide whether they were intended most to insult the soldiers or the people. The soldiers are told, almost in distinct terms, that they are fighting to beggar the farmers and to starve the home population; while these latter are directly invited to oppose the Government for taking men away from the walks of labor. Now, however, that the soldiers are returning, their slanderers will see that the enforcement of the draft was the very best way to help all classes, chiefly including the farmers themselves. These brave men will enjoy the proud consciousness of having saved the nation, rescued Pennsylvania from invasion, and protected the farmers and their plantations from rebel outrage, And they will soon turn their strong arms to till our broad and fertile fields, and to gather in the rich harvests now ripening under a peaceful sun. This is, indeed, poetic vengeance upon the malignant pro-be honorably mustered out of the service of the phecies of Copperhead newspapers. The United States on the 15th inst. Considerable excitement was apparent among the city politicians yesterday when it became known that the Board of Aldermen had suddenly removed the President and Assistant Commissioner of the Croton Aqueduct Department, and that Mayor Gunther had appointed Messrs. Giles and Jeremiah to fill the vacancides. Some claimed that the Board of Aldermen had no power to remove Messrs. Ste-phens and Darragh, but on looking in the statutes they found that the Board had this power. Specu-lations were rile as to the probable "cause" which led to theremoval, but what surprised the politicians most was that the Mayor acted in this matter in per-fiet 26074200e with the Board of Aldermen and vice 26743. Mr. Grize is a will known member of the Fire Department, as old friend of Mayor Gunther, and Mr. Jeremiah is one of the most popular mem-bers of the Board to Alderma. Prominent lawyers, who have been consulted in regard to the matter, say that the question of le-gality in regard to these removals and appoint ments cannot be doubted, a similar action having been taken before, in the case of the Street Commis-sioner's Bepartment.
