JEFF DAVIS AND AARON BURR. The announcement that an indictment had been found, at Washington, against JEFF DAVIS, for treason, has excited much interest. It probably indicates that he will be tried there by a civil tribunal, the specific overt act being the raid committed in June, 1864, in the District of Columbia. That he has levied war against the United States is the most notorious fact of contemporaneous history; and that the act of levying war against our Government, when committed by one of its own citizens, constitutes the crime of treason is equally clear and undeniable. Of his moral guilt there can be no doubt. This question would be unanimously decided against him in any loyal portion of our country. But the jury who are to be the arbiters of his fate will be called upon to determine whether he has been proven guilty in manner and form as he stands indicted. Before a civil tribunal, conviction and punishment of an offender can only follow after all the obstacles and shields which the ingenuity of counsel can discover in the usages of law and in technical subterfuges have been fully surmounted. Even in the case of so notorious a criminal as JEFF DAVIS, it is probable that his defenders will make ingenious special pleas in his favor, and endeavor to throw doubt, not upon his real guilt, but upon the propriety and justice of his legal conviction. The prosecutions for treason, which are so common in other countries, have been, comparatively, unfrequent in the United States, and the judicial interpretations of our laws against that crime are not very numerous and explicit. One of the most remarkable cases was that of AARON BURR, who was indicted for treason at Richmond, in 1807. His trial commenced in May, and was not concluded until about six months later, the court having in the interval, however, taken a recess from the thirteenth of June until the third of August. He was acquitted by a sort of "not proven" verdict, the jury saying that he was not found "to be guilty under the indictment by any evidence submitted" to them. The testimony against him established the wicked and treasonable character of his designs, but did not show the positive commission of any important overt acts, He was rather in the position of JEFF Davis when he was delivering his farewell speech in the United States Senate than in the attitude of the rebel chieftain at the present moment. Various witnesses show that Burr contemplated a division of the Union into an Eastern and Western Republic, with the Alleghany mountains as the dividing line; that it was part of his plan to seize New Orleans and make it the capital of a new Confederacy, or the base of a marauding enterprise against Mexico; and that he had even discussed the feasibility of an attempt to overthrow the regular Government at Washington and "to turn Congress neck and heels out of doors " and "assassinate the President." But BURR had really done none of these things. He had organized a conspiracy. He had gained a few reliable adherents and tried to win many more. He had ramifications to his scheme to suit all tastes. To some he represented it as a mere emigration to his

with the combined difficulties of an impoverished and war-wasted land, immediate emancipation, no compensation, and ittle or no capital to inaugurate a new system, can in justice attribute their deplorable condition only to the wickedness of their chosen leaders, and to their own folly in committing their destinies to the keeping of the desperate and dangerous traitors who have ruled and ruined the South. While we regret the losses and burdens of the war, we are proud to recall the honorable record of the North on this as upon every other phase of the contest. It will be a matter of wonder to the future generations who read the story of these eventful times, whether they should admire most the forbearance or the fortitude, the magnanimity or the might, the benignity or the bravery, the goodness or the greatness, of the defenders of the Union; and whether they should most condemn the folly or the ferocity, the vanity or the viciousness, the blindness or the blood-thirstiness, the ignorance or the infamy of the soldiers of secession.

IN A VAST COUNTRY, like our own, where the blessings of education are open to all, and no barriers of caste or custom prevent our children from giving free scope to their powers and energies in the direction that harmonizes with their natural talents and inclinations, the most varied capacities are developed. We have men who can do anything that is within the range of possibility. It required, however, a period of great national tribulation, an upheaval of all the elements of our social organization, an imminent and pressing necessity for the employment of the best talent in many dangerous and difficult branches of the public service, to indicate who were worthy recipients of the public confidence. The war has made and unmade many brilliant reputations. It has taught us that some whom we were wont to regard as oaken staffs were only brittle reeds. But on the other hand it has called up from the depths of obscurity "full many a gem of purest ray serene," and elicited political and military genius equal to that possessed by the proudest and greatest statesmen and warriors of European history and of the world-wide fame. It will be of incalculable value to the nation, during the next score of years, to know how to estimate its own citizens, and to be enabled, in all times of emergency, to point out its square men for square holes, and its round men for round holes. This is one of the compensations of the conflict which will be as use. ful in our future carer as it was found in the closing year of the war.

the necessary instructions to carry this order into effect. By order of the President. WASHINGTON, May 27.-Major General Sheridan will establish his headquarters at Baton Rouge for a short time during the organization of the army for Yexas. The material for the army available in that department includes the infantry corps of Generals steele, Granger, and A. J. Smith, and a large force of cavalry, all in the finest condition. General Merritt will doubtless be assigned to the command of the cavalry corps, with Generals Custer, Lee and Wilson, division commanders, Three corps are also understood to be en route t that Department com other sections.

The armies of Kirby Smith and Magruder are eported to be quite formidable, probably 80,000 men, and are said to be well supplied with provi sions and munitions of war. TEE RELEASE OF PRISONERS. The late order of the War Department, that in all cases of sentence by military tribunals of impriand the prisoners discharged, applies, in part, to a number of deserters who were sent to the Dry Tortogas, at hard labor, as a punishment for their crimes. MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HATE RESTORER IND DRESSING give life, growth, and beauty to the Cool.-A Paris journal tells a story of rare sangfroid in a German artist. She had been singing some solo when her dress took fire at one of the foot lights. The audience rose and shricked; what did the singer? Beating four bars to allow for the in-erruption, she extinguished the flame, and then quietly taking up the air without loss of time or tact, sang tranquilly to the end. And by way of adenza trilled out a stanza in praise of the elegant wearing apparel, made at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall of Rockbill & Wilson, Nos. 603 and 605 Chestnut street, above Sixth, Philadelphia. Many people, for instance, have a horror of purchasing anything that is extensively advertised. Advertising is, in their pinion, a game of speculation. The Samburg Port Wine is largely advertised, because the proprietor, Mr. A. Speer, is desirous that the public become acquainted with it. He wishes them to judge for emselves, and he has instructed all who retail his Wine that if it should not prove equal to what he claims for it to return the money. All he wants is to give it a fair trial. Nothing can be fairer than his. Druggists sell this Wine. my27-2t MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER AND DRESSING for restoring color and natural
