TUESDAY, JUNE 20, 1865

Our work is not done. We have not yet received the necessary information from the military and naval departments. We will continue to follow the progress of the war.

By the Fourth of July, Provisional Governors will probably be provided for the three remaining States which are still exclusively controlled by the South. Florida, Georgia and Texas, and recognized Governors for North Carolina, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, have been named by the President a few days ago against immediate emancipation, urging that the slaveholders should have time to adjust their interests to a new order of things.

The inevitable answer to this question must carry with it an acknowledgment that the North was bound in honor and justice, as well as by its repeated public declarations, to signalize its triumph by instantaneous liberation of every slave upon our soil. Slavery as an institution which killed the value of our troops. It was a fact which could not be remedied by any other means. It was a fact which was recognized by every clear-headed politician in the South as it is by the people of the North.

Every rational consideration that influences the human mind is impelling the people of the North to the same course. It is a great measure upon their behavior, and upon the spirit of the nation, and it is a measure which they will not permit to be taken without their consent. It is a measure which they will not permit to be taken without their consent. It is a measure which they will not permit to be taken without their consent.

The Capacity of the Negro. While many of the freedmen are necessarily ignorant on account of the stringent laws forbidding their education, and the rigorous policy of their masters, there is a number of instances in which they have shown very considerable business capacity. As a body, the slaves were compelled to be infinitely more industrious than the whites of the same race. The following extract from the report of Lieut. Col. Eaton, Inspector of Freedmen for the State of Arkansas, shows how an opportunity for managing a plantation was given to a great art in which the rebel leaders were supposed to excel—was improved by a "full black."

The Fair Montana. This new Territory has proved as attractive as the beautiful name with which it has been graciously named. Its climate is more genial than more eastern regions lying in the same latitude, because of its exposure to the gentle influences of the soft Pacific breeze that modifies the winter and summer seasons. A new offspring of the Republic, born in the war, it is a sturdy man-child, hardly three years old, it has gathered into its bosom an earnest, working population of fifty thousand whites, who may be fairly presumed to be that indomitable and energetic race which people the Territories where land and wealth are within the grasp of all, yet can be only won by industry, valor and enterprise.
