FOREIGN NEWS. There is news from Europe to the 15th of this month, inclusive, but it is not important. The great St. Leger stakes-the northern while the manufacturers of Connecticut blue ribbon of the turf, annually ran for at | claim that only a little more time is neces Doncaster races in September-has been | sary for them to reach such perfection in won by the French horse Gladiateur; the broadcloths as to rival the imported article. same which, in the spring, won the Derby | The reports of the Wool- Manufacturers' at Epsom races. France was nearly mad with joy, on the former occssion, and this second victory will doubtless be accepted as almost a compensation for-Waterloo. At the same time, it is very unusual "though not unprecedented, for one horse to win the two races. It is still more remarkable that a French racer should have done it. The British Government are about taking strong measures to repress the advance and working of Fenianism in Ireland, and the plan for doing this was to be speedily announced. It will probably assume the old form of a Coercion bill, with the old punishments by the gibbet, transportation, or imprisonment.

The Atlantic Telegraph shareholders have had a public meeting, at which they agreed to act upon the directors' suggestion that a new submarine cable shall be laid next year. The amount of money to be raised and the mode of raising it are questions which are reserved for the consideration of another meeting, to be held on October 12th. It is complained in England, not wholly without foundation, that little interest was felt in this country in favor of the second Atlantic Telegraph. The fact is | ply the same needs, but across zones, car-England had not done much, during our four years' war, to engage our sympathy in any of her speculations. COLONEL DAVIS ON THE STUMP. It is told as a severe satire that i some places in this State where what i called Copperheadism is found in very. large and poisonous deposits, Colonel DAVIS, the Democratic candidate for Auditor General, is supposed to be the veritable JEFFERSON DAVIS himself, and is, in consequence, a most popular man. However this may be, it is certain that the late head of the rebellion could not have made a more offensive and contemptible objection to what is known as the "Freedmen's Bureau," and wise and religious care of the brave onearmed Major General O. O. HOWARD, than his namesake W. W. H. DAVIS, the candate aforesaid, in his late speech before the BUCHANAN Democracy at Lancaster. His point was that the institution in question was objectionable because no body had ever heard the Republicans recommend such a bureau for the protection of the white people of the South. This rendering them more independent of the fluctuations or demands of foreign traders. shameless demagogery, unworthy of the lowest style of partisanship, is useful only as showing the narrowness of the mind in which it originated, and the utter paucity of a respectable issue on the part the executive committee and the councils of of Col. DAVIS and his friends. We have Springfield, been spending some time, in only to think what a howl these same noli

Very diverse signs show that peace with all its benefits is rapidly replacing war and its train of attendant evils. That | but the authorities of Virginia would no the Government has decided to transfer the control of the railroads of Tennessee from the military to the civil authority, proves that the State is recovering its old the rotunda, on a level with the crypt. No healthy condition, and exhibiting a fealty which warrants the renewal of such trust. An event of a very different character in Virginia has also the same bearing, and tells the same story-that the people of the South are fast returning to their old allegiance. In the recent Episcopalian convention at Richmond, Bishop MEADE urged, with all the weight of his influence, a reunion with the church at the North, and the re-establishment of the former fraternal relations. The proposition was most favorably received, and met the almost unanimous approval of the convention.

Political and sectional differences have been felt as bitterly in the Church as elsewhere, and we can draw the same hopeful augury, that the mass of the people are recognizing the advantages of reconstruction, as well from this movement in a religious assemblage in the last stronghold of the Confederacy, as from the very different fact that Tennessee, which was so lately almost dismembered by civil war, has become so quiet and peaceful as to permit the military power to relinquish the command and it is desirable that another receptacle of the most speedy and effectual means of communication.

Some YEARS AGO a poetic son of the sunny South published an epic poem, describing the beauties of the land of his birth. He sang in rapturous lines the grandeur of the forests, the magnificence of its mountains. rivers, and beauteous bays, the balmy breezes wafted from orange groves, and the lovely vegetation that clothed its fields. The coffee trees and the cotton plantations were also pictured in harmonious measure, and the long lines of happy laborers, who, in peace and contentment, cultivated the soil, which blessed their labors as if the golden age had come again. The poem was a fair one, the descriptions were just and graphic, and the author was a warm ad. | rounded by carriage-drives and walks leading mirer of the "peculiar institution;" yet, strange to say, in his faithful rendering of his subject he never mentioned the crack of the driver's whip, and the poetic afflatus never found any necessity to use the cuphonic syllable-slave ! From opening invocation to final rhapsody,

"Oh, no ! he never mentioned him; His name was never heard."

THE progress of every art and trade leads to the subdivision of labor, and the highest perfection, at least in mechanism, is reached through it. Several French artists frequently unite in the production of a single picture, and a rare beauty of manipulation is gained by the combination. Even in literature, the same plan has been Occasionally adopted with admirable results. In industrial pursuits the custom is steadily progressing everywhere; and it is iound that by concentrating the attention upon one branch, or even upon a single minute detail, superior facility and aptitude is acquired by the workman himself, and is acquired by the workman himself, found that by concentrating the attention more rapidity and exactitude throughout
