whic creditors, we ought to resort to the taxation of certain exports. If, as is affirmed. the Constitution forbids this, let the Constitution be altered and amended upon that point. Foreign financiers laugh at and ridicule us because we do not tax the cotton and the tobacco which we export. We can raise a very great revenue by such a tax, and authority should be given for imposing it.

A DISMAL DEMOCRACY.

If ever there was a class of men who deserved to be heartily pitied, it is the dismal little politicians who are now travelling through Pennsylvania making speeches against the Union State ticket and negro suffrage. They are like a dilapidated circus, too poor to forget old jokes, and too weak to pay for a sober clown. "Occasional" runs a sharp contrast between these very forlorn manikins, with their "small-beer' doctrines, and the big intellects of the late insurgent States, with their loud avowals of manly repentance and their unconditional repeal of the whole catalogue of offences. With one hold resolve they fling into oblivion the doctrine of secession, the rebel State and Confederate war debt, the institution of slavery, and the black code of their States; endorse the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery forever, and prepare a system for the care of the freedmen. We shall not be at all surprised if the next step in some of the Southern States is for these same leaders to give the colored men the right of suffrage. It would only need this, though they have already done enough, to show the difference between the triffers and traders of the Copperhead school in the North, who never rise to the dignity of an act of justice to a foe, or to the courage of admitting an error, and the giant minds who make themselves masters of their future by regretting their mistakes and accepting the offered pardon of the government they have wronged.

A COPPERHEAD TURK.

We are indebted to our accomplished minister at Constantinople, Hon. E. Joy MORRIS, for The Levant Herald, an English daily paper, published in the city of the Constantines. It is well printed, and full of news. The following items show that Copperhead hatred and ignorance upon American financial policy have first-rate imitators in Constantinople;

^a The most important incident of the news from the United States is the publication of the official statement respecting the public debt. It computes the entire debt to be about $2,757,660,600, bearing $339,000,000 interest. But $2,757,600,000, bearing $139,000,000 interest. But there is an unpleasant runter current that the statement of the debt is not correct, and the total amount has been made too small by about $150,000,000. This difference is made by not adding the whole of the latter subscrip-tions to the loan to the debt, and if the rumor be true, the debt really amounts to over $3,000. 000,000. There is a strong jeeting in many parts of the country against this nutional debt, and it ap pears to statis in its gradest intensity in the New England States. This opposition has taken a po-sitive form, and in two of those States the Legisla-tures have assessed heavy taxes upon all persons holding Government tooms. In New Mamphire of tax of twenty five per cent, has been said off att in comes from Douver-ment on the heave state of att in the state assessed heavy taxes and then persons holding the control to constant the heave attend that in the come state of the count the issue of the comming town elections turns entirely Some structure in Connecticut. In Vermont the issue of the coming town elections turns entirely upon this point, and the people will vote for or against the candidates as they wish the loans to be or not to be taxed. It only proves that New England, after securing its darling wish, the abolition of slavery, is very anxious. by Yankee tricks to avoid paying for it?

THE New York Commercial Advertiser (Republican) of last evening, urges the repeal of the Congressional oath, incorporated in an act passed in July, of 1862, and

"The oath imposed by Congress was a 'mili-tary necessity' in time of war, when it was necessary and even vital to know who were yound and loyal, and to keep out of office all who would nee their position to thwart the le-gitimate purposes of the Government, embar-ress its action, or give encouragement to its enemies. There is no more place or reason for the test oath, and for the suspension of kubeas corpus, than for trade restrictions already brashed away, or pass-ports across the border, North and South. resting chapter in the life of Stephens, now in Fort Warren. The writer says: perior. On the whole, Messre. Harding & Gard her have inaugarated a capital idea-one that will do much towards keeping the retail millinery trade of this city from going to New York for goods which can be purchased quite as, if not more, advantageously in Philadel phia, and one which cannot fail to contribut to the popularity and business success of thi rising young house.

The New York Independent contains an inter-resting chapter in the life of Stephens, now in Fort Warren. The writer says: "In the year 1825, thirty-nine years ago, I be-came à member of the faculty of the Universi-ty of Georgia, located at Athens, where I con-tinued some five years, and at length returned to this my native State. While I was there Alexander H. Stephens entered as a student. He was then about fiftgen; an amiable, mo-dest, quiet, studious, bright-eyed lad, pious withal, and looking forward to the-gospel mi-nistry. He came, I think, from Washington, Wilkes county, of humble and poor parentage; but, exhibiting fine capabilities and promise of usefulness, Some benevolent gentlemen uni-ted in furnishing him the means of education and preparation for the pulpit. He entered my classes, and a became much interested in him, and greatly pleased with his deportment and progress, and a here became known to the whole country. How it happened has he did not enter the ministry I never learned satis-factorily until the spring of 1800, when the 0. S. General Assembly of the 'Presbyterian Church of the United States met here in Ro-chester. Among the delegates I had the unba-pected pleasure to meet with lift ever state-pected pleasure to meet with lift. He was there president of the University of Georgia. In a fong conversation with him, calling up memo-ries of the past, I inquired about Stephens, and the change of his early plans, adding, 'I suppose you know all about it.' Yes,' said the 'i suppose I am as well acqualited with his whole history, and the working of his mind and heart, as any man living.' He then proceeded to say that, before the completion of the consideration of the whole subject, he demend himself better fitted to refar and there and the most grass and the first use he made of his earnings was do mitted, gained business and rose rapidly—and the first use he made of his earnings was do-mitted rest he made of his earnings was do-mitted rest he made of his earnings was do-mithed firs MAGNIFICENT STOCE OF CARPETS.-The old house of McCallum & Co., have now ready at their extensive Retail Warerooms, No. 519 Chestnut street, opposite Independence Hall their fall importations of carpetings, embrac ing all the most celebrated makes. styles and varietles, selected with the usual good taste of this well-known firm. A stroll through their establishment yesterday, seemed to us more like sauntering through some public exhibi-tion of magnificent fabrics, than a mere busi-ness warehouse. The coloring and novelty of design of many of their carpets surpass in beauty and richness the productions of any former season. Indeed, some of the patterns exhibited are well worthy a visit of inspection by lovers of the beautiful, whether the intend to purchase or not; though Messrs McC. & Co. will probably not thank us for this suggestion, as purchasing customers seemed to be pouring in upon them in a continuous stream. Among their fine Axmin ster goods, we especially noticed certain pat-terns and combinations of colors that have never been equalled-the Royal Wilto sels, Tapestry Velvets, and Tapestry Brus els, as also in their Three-ply, Ingrain and Venetian goods. This stock also presents unusual attractions. We may state in this con ection that the wholesale warehouse of this Irm. at No. 509 Chestnut street, also present ts customary inducements to buyers.
