THE EPISCOPAL GENERAL CONVENTION. We have already noticed the approach ing general triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church which is to convene in this city to-day/ This is, perhaps, in all respects the most important church convention holder since the close, or even since the beginning of the war. It is the Congress of the Episcopa Church in the United States, and in some sense its court of ultimate appeals also; and is composed of two houses-its House of Bishops, composed of all the Bishops in the United States and Territories, and its House of Clerical and Lay Delegates, elected by the several Episcopal Conventions of the different States, and is of course made up from among the greatest and best men in its communion.

This is the first session of this venerable body since the commencement of the war. in which it has been possible, even had they desired it, for all the States to be represented, and we look forward with much interest to its action. The time of its present gathering seems to us most opportune. Outside the church, the most vigorous efforts of the greatest minds of the nation, both North and South, are being put forth towards drawing closer than ever the old bonds of Union and interest. And we look to this convention for substantial evidence that what is dear to every loyal citizen as such, is doubly precious to them as churchmen and Christians. They who profess to believe in "one Lord, one faith, one baptism," and whose daily prayer is that the church "may be so guided and governed that all who profess and call themselves Christians, may be led in the way of truth, and hold the faith in unity of spirit and in the bond of peace," should, and doubtless are ready to prove that their faith is a principle, and their prayers realities; and that the love of Christian brethren is still stronger than the ties of political loyalty and the interests of commerce. And never was better opportunity offered than the meeting of this convention for such proof. And, probably, to no Christian organization may we more confidently look for it than to this.

The Episcopal church is notedly conservative and prudent. Pre-eminent among her teachings are the recognition of and ready obedience to civil authority. "The powers that be are ordained of God" is a Episcopal church, if less demonstrative, has ever proved herself as thoroughly loval as any other in the land. If some of her bishops and clergy were rebels, so were many prominent men of all other denominations. And, in all cases, they acted upon their individual responsibility, and not as churchmen. Prior to the breaking out of hostilities, the Episcopal church in the United States not only remained undivided by any sectional line, but worked together, North and South, without jar or friction. After that it became simply impossible for the bishops and delegates from the Southern dioceses to meet their brethren of the North in convention; and, under what they deemed a necessity for the carrying on of missionary and other church work among themselves, the Southern Council was organized and worked by itself during the war. The spirit with which this was done is clearly manifested by the recent action of different Southern conventions and the charges and letters of the bishops.

The war had hardly closed before the Texas Episcopal Convention dissolved its appointed delegates to this convention, now about to assemble in our city, and at least two of those delegates are already here. Dr. QUINTARD, recently elected to the Bishopric of the Diocese of Tennessee, and who was a Confederate chaplain during the war, in a recent letter to General THOMAS

"I never was a secessionist; I used all my influence, both public and private, against the movement." * * * "I never believed in semovement."

Thever believed hise cession; I never taught secession; I never voted for secession. But the crisis came—my path of duty was plain before me. The State, in her sovereign capacity, had dissolved her connection with the Government."

"The Church of Christ, by her divine constitutions." nize the de facto government everywhere, and to be the same in all the world, can, as such, have no preference or choice as to forms of government, whether despotie, regulational legitimate, or usurped. 'The powers that be are all that she can rightfully know anything bout. Her members and ministers, in their civil capacity as citizens, may entertain these questions and decide them, but to the Church they are foreign and forbidden. I therefore continued to minister to my people, and, with the consent and advice of my bishop, accepted the position of a chaplain in the Southern army. While the recollections of the last four years are very sad, they are very sacred. I have ministered to the wounded and dying. nave ministered to the wounded and dying. I have carried the consolations of a blessed gospel to the fields of carnage, and into the noisome hospitals. I have attended rigidly to my duties as a priest of the Church, ministering alike to friend and foe." * * * "I have now but one object in life, and that is to set forward, as much as lieth in me, charity, peace and good-will among all men. I hav taken the oath to support the Government of the United States. I have kept back no part of the price. I shall abide by my oath heartily and cheerfully, God being my helper." And the venerable Bishop of Virginia, in his recent charge to his clergy and laity, assembled at Richmond, said : ` . "The separation of the Southern Dioceses from the organization with which they were happily connected, was occasioned, as you know, not by any disagreement in doctrine or discipline or manner of worship, but by political changes which rendered the continuance of that connection impracticable. The pre servation of the order, and purity of the church in this section of the country, called for a separate organization, which was accord-ingly effected with a careful avoidance of any iterations which could impair that unity o spirit which our holy religion enjoins. The "exigency of necessity" furnished the divine commission under which this association was formed and constitutes a divine sanction for sons to the contrary are manifest. The mere cessation of the causes in which it originated does not, as a matter of course, dissolve it and and original question. Such union existed long and happily, and its interruption resulted, as we have observed, from no disagreement as churchmen, but from civil dissension.

Yet, as the public mind may not thus discriminate, and as the continuance of ecclesiastical separation would be regarded as a memorial of those civil dissensions which made it ne-cessary—and so, having an offensive political incumbent upon us to inquire whether it does not become us to dissolve our separate organi zation, and from considerations of high expe diency resume the conventional relation sus tained previous to the war!

From these it is evident that, however much other societies may have become broken up and divided North and South before the war, there was no sectional discord in the Episcopal Church up to that time. And, in regard to the present ani-

It testifies to those to whom it is addressed 'the affectionate attachment' of the writer. and assures them of the 'cordial welcome' which awaits them at the approaching General Convention, and it states that he was 'autho-Convention, and it states that he was authorized to say that his Episcopal brethren 'generally sympathized with him in the desire to see the fullest representation of the churches from the South, and to greet their brethren in the Episcopate with the kindest feeling, and adds: 'I trust, therefore, that I shall enjoy the precious gratification of seeing you and your delegates in your proper place at the regular triennial meeting, etc. I acknowledged this letter; I reciprocated the kind feeling expressed, and assured the es-teemed writer of my readiness to co-operate in any measures calculated to promote peace and good will.

"2. I have also received communications of like purport and spirit from other Bishops and from prominent clergy and laymen of the Northern Dioceses, and responded cordially to their fraternal greetings.

"3. The published proceedings of the Council of Texas show that that Diocese has resolved. to resume its former ecclesiastical relations, and has appointed delegates to the General "4. A joint letter from the Bishops of North Carolina and Arkansas, has been addressed to Bishop Elliott, as presiding Bishop, express-ing, as their 'decided opinion,' that 'consid-erations of principle, and of expediency as well, require us to restore the ecclesiastical elations which existed before the war. "5. The Bishop of Georgia, in his reply to the joint letter from the Bishops of North Carolina and Arkansas, expressed himself thus: I do not see how we can avoid returning into ction with the Church of the Union.'

And, continues Bishop Johns: "If, as a people, we are anxious for a speedy civil reunion, why should we not, as a Church, be equally desirous of a speedy re-establish-ment of our ecclesiastical relations? "Are there any sensibilities which may be disregarded in the one adjustment, but which require to be consulted and indulged in the

"May we be more implacable as churchman than as citizens ? "If time is necessary to compose our feelings, how much must be taken? se experience is to determine the measure? Is there any other scriptural limit than the 'going down of the sun!""

And even Bishop Ellott, against whom so much has been written and said at the North, who is the Presiding Bishop of the Southern Council, wrote in a recent letter: "I have summoned the Bishops to meet me at Augusta on the 27th September, and it is my present purpose to suggest to the Bishops to send a committee, consisting of Bishops Johns, Atkinson, and Green, to represent a informally at the convention in Philadelphia. Whether this proposition will find favor or not with the Bishops I cannot say. This will, it seems to me, be sufficient to satisfy the Oburch of our readiness to preserve the unity of the Church."

* * "We wish to show our confidence in our brethren, and to ask no more of them in the act of reunion than the recognition and con-firmation of certain acts which were done by us as an ecclesiastical body. There is nothing in this requirement to delay reunion beyond 1st December. We shall then have nearly three years to work together and interchange acts of good fellow ship before we meet. I never yet saw two persons come together to talk over a quarrel (if ours can be called, ecclesiastically, a quarrel,) without making things worse. Let the adjustment be made through committees, and in three years we shall be able to meet with calmer feelings, and be prepared to be more just to one another. Believe me that it will be better for us not to be represented in convention in October, provided we may give assurance to the Church at the North that we are absent not with any desire to perpetuate our separate organization, but simply to have the adjustment more cor-

We have given unusual prominence to this matter, because it is full of importance to the well-being of the nation. The Southern dioceses may or may not be generally represented in this convention: but whether they are or are not, they have established a clear record of their willingness to reunite. And with this established, cardinal doctrine with her. Beside, the it seems to us that nothing but absolute folly and wickedness upon the part Northern delegates can long delay it.

If the several religious denominations continue to gnaw the bone of discord, and still to consider their own brethren as ene. mies, because they live in different localities, and have once had different institutions, can substantial and enduring peace be expected, whatever may be the efefforts of statesmen and politicians? I'he religious element of our country is predominating. As it sets its face, so, in the end, the policy of the country is shaped. It turned resolutely against vernment is triumphant; and now, if true to itself, its professions and its cause—and it raises its voice for unity and love—unity and love will come at its bidding, plumed with joy, and with healing in their wings. And to the members of this convention we look with great confidence for an example of patriotism as citizens, and of charity and love as Christians. We hope that every diocese may be represented, and that nothing will arise to disturb the harmony of connection with the Southern Council, and the convention. That, according to the sentiments of the venerated President Lincoln, all finding themselves at home, in the joy of the reunion, none will be found asking of any other why he has been away. But whether here or not, moderation in the acts of this convention will secure a future reunion, which is most desirable both for the church and country. And such an ex-

It is a favorite argument with that class at the North opposed to the enfranchisement of the negroes, that they are destitute of that ambition which is the spring of action, and which leads to that wondrous activity of mind that marks the members of the more advanced races of mankind. They also urge that the individuals of the colored race will not, or rather cannot, avail themselves of the advantages now opening for them, and will prove their intellectual deficiencies by their utter incapacity to meet the requirements of a condition of freedom. We would attract the attention of all who really hold such an opinion to the following common-sense advice from a freedman of Nashville to his fellows, and published in one of a series of educational letters in The Colored Tennessean.

"The fact that we have hitherto labored under many disadvantages will matter nothing. The fact of our ignorance still remains. It is the imperative duty of every young man among us, to go to work at once in this matter of self-improvement. * * * The lestiny of our race is in our hands, and we must have a full sense of the magnitude of our part of the work. * * * * To stand still now is defeat and destruction to our cause. Do not talk about what the color-ed race is going to do in ten or fifteen years, but ask yourself what you are going to do now. Commence at once to fit yourself for a faithful discharge of all the duties of a citizen in a free republic, and an enlightened, refined member of society." The writer of the above surely exhibits a true appreciation of the situation of his race, of the present disadvantages of the work imperatively incumbent upon them, and of that harder fact for persons of his position to realize—that by the world at large a man is regarded for what he does without considering the hindraness which ance at every exhibition of the above-named without considering the hindrances which he may have to suffer, or the obstacles which he may have to overcome. All these special difficulties, which the freedmen must necessarily encounter, are evidently recognized by at least this one member of the class, and his advice could hardly be rendered more practical and apposite to the

COLORADO. The new Governor of Colorado, Gen. ALEXANDER CUMMINGS, of this city, will start to-day for that interesting region. Gov. CUMMINGS filled several important government positions during the war, and in all of them displayed characteristic energy, significancy, would be the occasion of perpetuating feelings unfriendly to Christian fellow promptitude, and ability. It was a knowes, doubtless. which induced the President to appoint him up with their usual good taste and superior quality of workmanship. Their stock of cloths Governor of Colorado. That he will be an efficient and resolute executive. and that he will vigorously help forward the great work of organizing the new State government, the people may be well assured. A large acquaintance among the public men of the country, a thorough knowledge of the general policy of the Admus of the two sections, especially upon the ministration, and a long identification with question of reunion, the recent action of national affairs, ought to make his admiseveral of the Northern Bishops and of nistration, however brief, worthy of gratecertain Southern dioceses, is significant and hopeful. NEW JERSEY. From the Hudson to the Delaware-from Cape May to the Pike county border-New Jersey is aflame with patriotic ardor. For the first time in years there is a genuine prospect of a great victory over the false Democracy of that noble State. The issues are strong, few and clear. Nowhere, save in Delawaare and Kentucky, have the leaders of the so-called Democracy placed themselves upon so complete a copper platform. They discard even the poor pretence of being in favor of Andrew Johnson-the common and tardy offering of their less candid and more crafty neighbors-and go into the canvass boldly, with the load on their backs of having refused to ratify the abolition amendment of the National Constitution, which South Carolina, Alabama, and Mississippi gladly accept, and also with a resolution flat-flooted against the President's restoration policy. To a field so tempting, and against an adversary so bold and defiant. many champions have rushed, and it will be a marvel if the November election is not marked by an unequalled triumph for the Union cause. TAKE HERD!

There is too much indifference among the Unionists of Pennsylvania. The politi cal foe is wily, reckless, and most eager for power. He is even beginning to hope that he may catch us napping. Let the men who saved the nation from slavery and from treason: who saved the State from the rebels on the battle-field and the sympathizers at the ballot-box, come forth in their strength. The Republic needs their energies once more!

In spraking a few days ago of th honorable and complete adjustment of the accounts with the Government of Assistant Quartermaster Colonel George S. CROSMAN, for several years stationed at this military post, we fixed the amount of his disbursements at over seventy-one millions of dollars. We should have said nearly one hundred millions. This is a larger amount of public money than was expended during the war by any Quartermaster at any station excepting Washing-

THE rejoicings of the Democratic leaders over the majority against colored suffrage in Connecticut, are not half as sincere as their heart-rending sighs over the victories which the colored soldiers helped to win during the war against the rebellion.

New Publications. Little, Brown & Co., the Boston publishers have done good service to the cause of just go vernment by issuing, in a neat 12mo volume of 542 pages, the Specches of President Andrew Johnson, with a Biographical Introduction by Frank Moore editor of the Rebellion Record Mr. Johnson, giving an accurate narrative of his whole career, from the time he first applied himself to learn a handleraft which would always place his means of living at his fingers' ends to the eventful occasion of his taking the oath of office, on April 15th, 1865, as the successor of President Lincoln. The speeches commence with that able one on the Veto Pow er, delivered by Mr. Johnson in the House of Representatives of the United States—a speech which has been described as containing as much grit as a granite rock—and end with that to the Indiana delegation, delivered in April-865. The volume is got up in a manner worthy of the subject-finely printed on good paper, piece, a good portrait of President Johnson, with fac-simile of his signature. (Received from J. B. Lippincott & Co.)

From Vasari, who was his earliest biogra pher, and indeed could boast of his personal acquaintance, down to Dr. Waagen, who wrote three centuries later, Michael Angelo has had an abundance of biographers. One more, and the most recent memoir, was written by Herman Grimm, whose father, we believe, is a living German artist of great celibrity, not only in his father-land, but in Italy. An English translation of this work has been made, with the author's sanction, by Fanny Elizabeth Bunnett, translator of Gervinus' Shaksthe end, the policy of the country is shaped. It turned resolutely against slavery, and slavery is dead. It stood resolutely with the Government, and the Government is triumphant; and now, if true curately characterize it as a history o sainting, sculpture and architecture in Italy in the 15th and 16th centuries—great times, in which Titian and Georgione, Michael Angelo and Raphael were rivals. The book also treats of Angelo as a poet, and is particularly rich in his correspondence, much of it not previously published. Each volume is enriched with an appendix, into which the translator has gather ed a variety of notes, explanations, correcions and illustrations. The sole deficiency i hat of a good index, or even of a copious table of contents. (Received from J. B. Lippincott

Another standard book, from the same pub lishers, gives us the Works of Epictetus, con-sisting of his Discourses, the Enchiridion, and based on that of Elizabeth Carter, by Thomas Wentworth Higginson. It will be remembered by those who have read Boswell's Johnson how highly the Ursa Major of literature esti-mated the scholarship of Miss Elizabeth Carter. He said she was the best Greek scholar of her day in England. She com-menced her translation of Epictetus in 1749, and published it in 1758. Dr. Warton de-clared that it "excelled the original." Like Æsop and Terence, it was the destiny of Epictetus to have been a slave, though his master, himselt one of Nero's freedmen, finally manumitted him. Among the Stoic philosophers he ranks high—but practised self-denial rather than energy, endured than resisted, renounced more than he opposed. Of his eight books of Commentaries, or Discourses, four are lost. Arianus, his pupil, collected his maxims into the work entitled Encheridion (a Handbook), and a few brief and sententious fragments, collected by later disciples, but chiefly traditionary, all remain; some of these aphorisms are admira-ble. What a world of practical wisdom is in the advice "Chastise your passions that they may not chastise you," which Shakspeare has adopted twice if not thrice in his plays. Colonel Higginson, who has wielded the sword as well as the pen, has taken Miss Carter's translation and has 'made a new one of his own, carefully going with her all through, and improving what she had left uncertain or incomplete. He is, it will be at the left when the carefully going with the accordance of the complete of the carefully accordance to the care mitted, rather less rigid in his language than mitted, rather less rigid in his language than Miss. Carter was—that is, more elastic in expression, more readily intelligible to the unlearned, and, though spirited, carefully correct. Colonel Higginson mentions that Toussaint Pouverture, that truly great colored man—at once patriot and soldier—"made the works of this, his fellow-slave, a favorite manual." For our own part Epictetus has long been our favorite Greek author, even more than Homer, and we are delighted to find him introduced to the numerous readers of this intellectual country in so correct a manner. We remember how, eight years ago, manner. We remember how, eight years ago, visiting an Irishman who then kept a readymade clothing store in South street, we found text, that he was unaware of our approach. We took up the book—it was a fine Elzivir edition of Epictetus. Our friend, who has since soured above buttons, is now a merchant in Front street, and held an important urban appointment a few years ago. (Received from J. K. Simons.)
