Poetry.

THE SNOW STORM.

Last night, when the lights of the village first twinkled along the hill, And names that were long and their meal-grists Came rattling up from the mill:

Slowly drifting and falling, Like dust from the miller's fan, On the fields, and the roads, and the fences, The winter's storm began.

The boy looked out from the window Away of the dusky plain; "It snows," he cried to his sister, "Come, listen against the pane."

Do the rebels sue for peace? No, let me read you an extract or two to show what these people are saying and doing.

Then the voice of the gray-haired granddams We heard through the whispering gloom, While the dancing flame of the fire-light Fleeted shadows along the room:

And the church bell's voice grew hoarse, From the weight of his dusty gown; But when the great glory of the day In through darkness began to dawn,

But the hosts of the maddened storm-king Had triumphed throughout the night, And the banners and blades of autumn Were crimsoned in the bitter light:

And the children, the merry children, Who saw the lights on the hill, When tears that were late with their meal-grists Came rattling up from the mill:

For the shelterless lambs in the storm. "For the shelterless lambs in the storm."
