PURSUIT OF LEE'S ARMY. ANOTHER BATTLE IMPENDING.

Tork, Pa., July 5—4 P. M.
The fighting at Gettysburg, on Wednesday,
Thursday and Friday, was of the most desperate degracter, and the losses on both sides fearful.
The results may be thus summed up:

Late in the day, about half-past four o'clock, the enemy again offered battle, and for several hours the contest was kept up along the whole line, with no decisive result. The loss of Thursday on both sides was fearful. The enemy made several vigorous assembles, in some cases approaching to the very months of our gune, but were as often driven leack.

THE GREAT AND DECISIVE BATTLE OF FRIDAY.

FRIDAY.

Headquarters, Third Army Corps, Near Geffisher, July 4, 1863.

The battle of Friday was the most desperate, most fierce and decisive of the war. It was commenced at early daybreak on our extreme left by a determined attack by the enemy with muskerry and artillery. The attack was met by the Sixth corps and portions of the First and the Fifth, the Third lying close at hand in reserve. The battle raged fiercely at this point for nearly three hours, when the enemy fell back, yielding to us the whole of the battle field of that the same of the previous day.

Nearly simultaneously with the opening of the attack on the left, movements were discovered on the right indicating that an effort was making to flank our position in that direction. Our artillery on Cemetery Hill at once opened, throwing heavy volleys of shell over and to the northern earl early of the town. At this point we had ing heavy volleys of shell over and to the north and cast of the town. At this point we had eight or ten batteries in position, covered by earthworks. The enemy responded briskly to cur cannonading, but with poor effect, and were enth corps withstood the shock, giving never an inch of ground to their assailants.

The fight raged here on the face of a lofty mountain, densely wooded, from the summit of which batteries could command our position on Cemetery Hill. It was evidently with a view of gaining this position that the enemy made the ressult. For this purpose Hill's carry that hel assault. For this purpose Hill's corps, that had fought on the left on the previous day, was brought around to the right to reinforce Earley, and as the scheme was developed it appeared that the early attack on the left was intended merely as a diversion to cover this movement. From a distance the progress of the fight could From a distance the progress of the figur could be observed by the curling smoke rising above the woods, marking the line of the fierce contest.

In this struggle our reserved artillery was brought into play, and did most excellent service from impromptu positions on the elevated points back of Cemetery Hill, shelling the face of the back of Cemetery Hill, shelling the face of the mountain where the enemy were supposed to be. This reserve fire of shell, added to the steady and unflinching arder of the glorious Twelfth corps, ultimately checked the vastly superior force of the enemy, who for an hour or two had heen gradually advancing. At the critical juncture, about eleven o'clock in the forencon, one or two brigades of New York troops, supposed to be militia from Pennsylvania, arrived, and were immediately thrown into position to reinforce the right wing, which was being so badly pressed. This assistance determined the fate of the day. The enemy quailed before it, and soon the curling smoke that marked the line of the contest began to recede, surely indicating that the eneing smoke that marked the line of the contest begen to recede, surely indicating that the enemy were falling back; but if they gave away at all it was but slowly, fighting at every step; and thus the battle raged for hours, and until afternoon, when the enemy abandoned the field in that direction. But they did not yet yield the day. For a period hostilities seemed to be sus pended; but the suspension was very brief.

The rebel columns seemed to be moved as if by magic and within an hour their whole force.

by magic, and within an hour their whole force was massed directly in our front, and once more was massed directly in our front, and other more the fierce and deadly contest opened. This time it was an assault along the entire line—a last resort, the forlorn hope of the enemy. They were weakened in numbers and dispirited and utterly demoralized; yet Lee had a reputation to save and a name to make, and at any sacrifice of life he seemed bound to win the day; but he tife he seemed bound to win the day; but he strove in vain. The Union troops were fighting at home and among their own people. They fought like heroes, and, inspirited by success, they had no thought of defeat. They could have withstood three times the force the enemy hurled against them. It was mere play for them to drive back the columns of the rebels, and so they did drive them back, and at five o'clock, after more than twelve hours' constant fighting the contest terminated, the national troops victorious at every point, and known nearly the entire battle field in their possession.

At the close of the action General Lee had the At the close of the action described impudence to send in a flag of truce asking a suspension of hostilities, to give him time for the burial of the dead and an exchange of pristing of the dead and an exchange oners. General Meade replied that he in recepture all the prisoners the enemy had taken, and that he would bury their dead for them. Failing in this attempt to gain time, and badly worsted at all hands the rebels had no other recourse bu all hands, the rebels had no other recourse but to avail themselves of the fast approaching night to fall back to the mountains. So precipitate was their retreat last night that their guards and sentinels in town were not relieved, and were

Wednesday, July 8, 1863. General Lee is still on this side of the Potomac, unable to cross with his army. His lines extend to Sharpsburg, an I are formed by Longstreet's corps, whose headquarters are reported to be at Funkstown. The rebels were busily engaged yesterday in spading over their wounded and supply trains on flat boats. Two wagons are ferried across on each boat, and the crossing necessarily progresses very slowly. It is not believed that any of Lee's effective force has yet crossed. General Lee is still on this side of the Poto

Lee is undoubtedly anticipating an early attack, and making every effort to render his posi-tion a secure one. Should the anticipated bat-tle take place, it will probably occur on or near he old Antietam field. Our forces are rapidly concentrating, and a desperate battle is impend

Generals Kilpatrick and Buford are annoying Generals Kilpatrick and Buford are annoying the enemy with our cavalry, and have rendered great service to day. Over seven hundred prisoners were brought in, captured by Kilpatrick, day before yesterday. General Gregg is pushing the enemy at another point, and heavy firing heard in the direction of Hagerstown to-day indicates that Lee's rear is bard pressed.

We have a report that General Buford engaged the rebols to day, but no details have been received.

height, and is still rising. There remains no opportunity for Lee to escape.

General Butterfield has been relieved from his position as chief of staff. General Warren, an able and accomplished officer, succeeds him. General Paul, reported killed at the battle of Gettysburg, is alive although dangerously wounded. Hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The movements of our army are being conducted with remarkable celerity. South Mountain has been occupied, and Harper's Farry is in our possession. Yesterday there was some skirmishing in the vicinity of Maryland Heights, though no action of importance took place. though no action of importance took place

They, however, pressed their columns on to the right, and very soon our infantry poired on that flank and very soon our infantry poired on that flank and were earnestly engaged. The contest here was even more earnest and continuous than on the left. The Twelfth and portions of the Eleventh corps withstood the shock, giving never an inch of ground to their assailants.

General Meade and staff have arrived at their headquarters, having ridden thirty-five miles from Gettysburg. Several corps are understood to be nearer the point desired. A considerable force has probably reached the vicinity of Williamsport to night.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 8, 1863. News received here to-day by telegraph, by way of Loudon and Bedford, show that the main ody of General Lee's army is between South Mountain and Hagerstown. General Lee will probably select a place be-

General Lee evidently sees that there is no escape for his army, and is preparing himself to give General Mende another battle, which will probably take place on Friday or Saturday.

The authorities are throwing troops up the valley as fast as possible.

General Meade's army and the troops under General Couch are moving as rapidly as the oads will admit. The rain poured down in torrents last night, and has continued to do so until twelve o'clo

It is exceedingly doubtful if we have taken either Longstreet or Hill, as reported, though the report is based upon statements of rebel prisoners. Other reports say that Longstreet is based, and some say that he is dead.

The operations of General Dix's command at White House and on the Peninsula are successful, having cut off all direct communication from Richmond and General Lee's army, and detained a large number of troops in and about Richmond, who would otherwise have gone to reinforce Lee.

Cavalry Fight near Boonsboro. ANOTHER BATTLE IMPENDING.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF Personac Friday, July 10, 1863.

A sharp fight took place on Wednesday morning at five o'clock, near Boonshore, between the Union cavalry, under Generals Euford and Kilpatrick, and the Rebel infantry and cavalry in large force, under Generals Stuart, Hampton and Jones. Arillery was used on both sides. Our troops fought gallantly, but were forced to retire to Boonshore inch by inch, which they hald to a late hour and then drave the enemy held to a late hour, and then drove the enemy back three miles. It was reported that General Kilpatrick's force was surrounded and compelled to cut its way out; also that General Kilpatrick was killed. Later dispatches last night, how-ever contradicted this rumor, although the General was confined to bed yesterday from sick eral was contined to bed yesterday from sion-ness. The fight was not renewed yesterday morning. The rebels were reported to have their pickets thrown out nearly to Boonsboro, enclosing within their lines the Antietam battle field and Shepherdstown crossing. The main force, however, is considerably west of this point, and covers the three roads that meet at Williams

SURRENDER OF VICKSBURG ON THE FOURTH OF JULY!!

Official Dispatches from Admiral Porter and General Grant.

WASHINGTON, July 7. The following dispatch from Admiral Porter announcing the surrender of Vicksburg, has just been received by the Navy Department : UNITED STATES MISSISSIPPI SQUADRON,

UNITED STATES ALISSISSIPI SQUADRON, Flag-ship Black Hawk, VICKSBURG, July 4, 1863.

To the Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Namy:
Sir: I have the honor to inform you that Vicksburg surrendered to the United States forces on this, the Fourth of July.
Very respectfully yours. Very respectfully, yours, D. D. PORTER,

Acting Rear Admiral DISPATCH FROM GENERAL GRANT.

Washington, July 8. A dispatch from Gen. U. S. Grant to Major General Halleck, dated at Vicksburg, at half-past 10 o'clock, on the morning of the 4th of July, states that the enemy surrendered thi morning, and their troops were paroled as pris-oners of war. While I should be glad to stop any necessary. While I should be glad to stop any unnecessary effusion of blood, the only terms which I can entertain are those of unconditional surrender. At the same time, myself and men and officers of this army are ready to testify to the distinguished gallantry with which the defense of Vicksburg has been conducted.'

At 11 o'clock the messenger returned. This afternoon Gen. Grant met Gen. Pemberton between the lines, and after an hour's consultation settled the surrender. Gen. Pemberton urged that the soldiers might be paroled here and furnished rations to carry them to their lines; in view of the bravery they have displayed, and the advantages of the plan, Gen. Grant will consent.

The number of prisoners, wounded, &c., it is said, will be 18,000, of which 12,000 are in fighting condition now. The immediate cause of surrender is exhaustion of supplies and ammunition, and the failure of Johnston to come to their aid. At daylight to morrow, our whole army will enter triumphantly and celebrate the doubly glorious anniversary. Not a shot has been fired since 8 o'clock from our lines, except from the river mortars. A general interchange of civilities extends all along the line.

GEN. DANIEL E. SICKLES.

The Washington Republican gives the followng interesting particulars relative to the woundng of this gallant officer :--

The General's right leg was shattered below the knee by a large solid shot, not less than a twelve pounder. With the utmost coolness Gen. Sickles reined in his horse, and, reaching down, stekies retned in his noise, and, reacting nown, iffed the daugling limb from the stirrup and laid it over the horse in front, so that he was ble to dismount without falling, which he did

Surgeon Sim was sent for at the hospital, and came upon the field amid a shower of bullets and shells. At the first examination he thought the shells. leg could be amputated below the knee, but af ter chloroform had been administered, a more critical examination discovered the fact that the bones were shattered to the knee joint, and it was found necessary to cut above the knee.
While chlosoform was being administered, before the General was rendered insensible, he had the whole battle field before his mind, and gave repeated orders, as if he was hotly engaged with the enemy. The instant he recovered his consciousness after the operation he inquired anxiously how the fight was going, and added with great earnestness that he would give the other leg, and his life to boot, to win the battle! The officers who called that evening upon the Surgeon to inquire after Gen. Sickles, each remarked that he saved the army from disaster that day. His attendants conveyed him by circuitous routes upon a hand litter nearly forty miles to reach the railroad, being sometimes obliged to make detours to avoid Rebel scouts, and finding but unwilling accommodations at the farm houses where they sought shelter.

E Fortunately, Gen. Sickles arrived here in a comfortable condition, and, last night, (Sunday) he had the prospect of a speedy recovery.
