The Fighting on the 22d and 23d.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 26, 1863. The fighting on Thursday and Friday arose muthe enemy crossing the Rappahannock at everly Ford. The 2d Pennsylvania Cavalry, eut. Col. Jas. Brinton commanding, were on my near Bealton, and were started out to feel be enemy. They encountered two Regiments of Cavalry and one of Infantry, whom they barged and drove to the river. Maj. Taggert ed the first charge upon the 10th Virginia Cavaly, and was shot in the knee cap, while gallantighting. He was carried to Warrenton, where leg was amputated above the knee by the inicital surgeon, Dr. Weidman, and where he ied on Saturday morning.

On Friday the 2-l Pennsylvania Cavalry had sother skirmish with the Rebels, and again tove them over the same ground. On Saturday, on. Devens's brigade of Cavalry was sent to lieve the 2d l'emasylvania, who had a number canded in the two days' skirmishing; but the nemy having been reinforced, compelled Gen. levins to retire. Col. Brinton's Regiment is ignly commended for its gallant conduct. Nohing of note transpired yesterday. To day a seconnoi-wance was sent out in the direction of interloo Bridge, on our right, and cannonading s heard in that direction about 1 o'clock, lastg some two hours. The enemy from their camp fires appear to be ill or can be done unless the rebels attack my on Tuesday, which the press dispatch says is unexplained, proves to have been gun prac-tice at the Washington Navy Yard. It appeared to be far to the left of Bealton. Some imagined it to be near Dumfries, but the real solution is given in this paragraph. It shows that even sol-diers can be deceived. An unusual number of officers and nearly s regiment of conscripts and convalescents came up to the army to day. JURORS FOR NOVEMBER COURT, 1863.
