FEARFUL SUFFERING.

The terrible story of the sufferings of the survivors of the lost Hibernia is told more in detail by the second officer, of that ship, who, with three others, alone survived out of a boat's load. The boat in which they left, was a lifeboat, twenty-two feet long, and was crowded with passengers, for whose sustenance there were two barrels of biscuit, three casks of water, and several tins of preserved meat. The passengers were closely packed and forced to keep in one position for fear of capsizing, while constant bailing was necessary to keep the boat afloat. After two days deprivation and anxiety caused derangement in some of the passengers, and two men jumped overboard. Others became delirious as cramps set in, and the water began to give out, so that the more violent had to be pinioned to prevent their throwing themselves into the water and others quieted by different means. Everything was done to keep up the spirits of the passengers. The crew sang and the quartermaster spun yarns. But as the rations of water became reduced to the smallest quantity, some drank from the sea and became delirious, and many died. The bodies were thrown overboard. Two children and an infant only six months old were on board. These died, with the mother, who had fed the little one on soaked biscuit after her milk had given out for want of food. But after more than a week of this suffering the boat was capsized and only three succeeded in gaining a place on its keel. One poor fellow came up under the boat and was heard for half an hour, living on the air confined in that space, when he sank. At last the survivors succeeded in righting the boat, and after several days more, without provision or water, and with apologies only for sails and oars, worked their way to land, so worn out by privation as to be unable to move when once on shore.

AN INHUMAN MONSTER.

[From the Hickman (Ky.) Courier, Dec. 19.]

We are informed of a most fiendish affair which occurred near Dresden, Weakly county, Tenn., one day last week. A negro woman, formerly the slave of Wm. Jones, burnt two of her children to death. The negress lived in a cabin some distance from the other houses on the farm, and was always regarded as a very vicious negro. She dug a hole in the ground near her cabin, in which she placed both her children, covered it over with plank, and then built upon it a large brush fire, and actually cooked the children alive. The same day some citizens discovered the facts, which they at once made known to the sheriff of the county, who proceeded to the place and effected her arrest. After examination before a magistrate's court, she was committed to jail, at Dresden, to await trial at the next term of the Criminal Court for that county. In reply to some questions as to why she did such a horrid act, she replied that her children would not obey her, and she was determined to make them do so if she had to kill them. It is generally believed by all that she will be hung, and many, we learn, were in favor of inflicting the same punishment upon her that she had inflicted upon her children.

To MAKE COWS GIVE MILK.—A writer who says his cow gives all the milk that he wanted in a family of eight persons, and from which was made 260 pounds of butter the year, gives the following as his treatment. He says: "If you desire to get a large yield of milk, give your cow three times a day, water slightly warm, slightly salted, in which bran has been stirred at the rate of one quart to two gallons of water. You will find if you have not found, that by this daily practice your cow will gain twenty-five per cent. immediately under the effects of it, and she will become so attached to the diet as to refuse to drink clear water unless very thirsty, but this means she will drink almost any time, and ask for more. The amount of this drink is an ordinary pail full each time, morning, noon and night. Your animals will then do her best at discounting the lacteal. Four hundred pounds of butter are obtained from good stock, and instances are mentioned where the yield was even at a higher figure.

The Chippewa (Wis.) Union tells a story of a colt which was missing for eight weeks this fall, and was finally found in the brush, where she had existed, exposed to storms all that time, almost without food. It appears that the animal had about fifteen feet of rope attached to her head, and, while trying fast as nearly as can be ascertained, eight weeks. The ground around the stick to which she was made fast was a perfect mortar-bed. Every thing within the circle of the rope denoted the extreme state to which she was reduced; small limbs eaten; bark from the larger ones gnawed off; showing what desperate exertions animals will sometimes make to prolong life.
