Jowett and the Prince.

It was Jowett's resistless energy that made him, as an undergraduate, work 13 hours a day, as he once told a Siamese prince in my hearing. The said Stamese prince had, as the porter pompously ex-pressed it, "comed into Balliol by the master's front door, sir," had entered for his "smalls," had telegraphed, so it was popularly understood, to his father that he was in for this his first examination, and had paid for a reply telegram, which, it is asserted, ran as follows: "It is well. Fourteen youths of the nobler sort have been sacrificed." But the propitiatory offering in Siam had failed to help in the battle of the schools. The prince had been plowed and was sent for by the muster. 'I am much ashamed of you," said Jowett in his sternest and jerkiest manner. "You are very idle, very idle. You are no credit to your country or to this college. How many hours a day do you work?"

To which the Siamese answered smil ingly; "Aw, master, I do work very hard. Sometimes three hours.

To whom replied the master: "You ought to work at least eight hours. When I was your age, I worked 13.5° It is true that one was convulsed at the time by hearing the prince say, with a grin from ear to ear, but in all good faith, 'Aw, but, master, you have such a very big head?" But that "I used to work 1 hours a day" sank deep into one's mind.

-Cornhill Magazine. The Cats Kept Coming Back. This cat story comes from a Free Baptist clergyman; consequently it must be true. In his parish lived a man and his wife, very poor in all their surroundings, so and found a poor house, small-very small. The minister was given a bed-the only bed. He must tarry another night, He learned that the woman lodged on a lounge in the living room, said room-combining all the requisites of kitchen, din ing room and parlor, while the lord of the household slept on the floor. In some way the minister gave them to understand that it would delight him to lie on the lounge. When about to retire, he mentioned to the man that it would be advisable to put out of doors two cats in the room, which was done. After lying for a few moments on his couch out came two cats from beneath the lounge, spitting and crying. He arcse and threw them out. Very soon the same scene was enacted again and again, until he became disturbed with superstitious emotions. He knew not what to do, and still they came, and still out they went, and in they came all the long night. In the morning when the man came in the dominic asked; "How many cats have you here? I have thrown out 50 or more. and I don't know but what there are more under the lounge."

He raised the valance, and, lo, a cat hole through the wall of the house!-Norway Advertiser.

Chinese and Cockroaches.

One of the strangest superstitions of Chinamen is the awe with which they regard the cockroach. John holds the ugly black pest as something sacred, claiming that it is especially favored by the gods and a particular favorite of the great foss. The most unfortunate misinap that can befall a Chinaman is to step on a cockrouch, Instantly visions of terrible disasters and calumities arise before him. In some instances the superstition has been known to pary so on the minds of the Celestials as to drive them insane. As a result of a state of affairs Chinatown is overrun with cockronches, and a Chinaman would as soon think of killing himself as of killing one of them. - Frederick Citizen.

Ingenuity, The following ingenious mode of crossing a river was once displayed by a Kaffir, who had for some time stood watching the vain attempts of a party of soldiers to cross the stream at a time when to ford it was attended by considerable danger. After smiling at their efforts with that sardonic expression remarkable among these savages he quietly raised a heavy stone, placed it on his head and then walked with perfect ease through the torrent to the opposite side. - New York Ledger.

only peculiar, but surprising. We had been on a long cruise and were down near the tropies at Christmas time. Of course we observed the day as well as possible under the circumstances, and one of the features was a fine dinner. We had some cham-pague on board, but the weather was quite is wrong. Take hot, and having no ice we were at a loss to find a way to cool the wine, which could not be endured as it was. During our cruise we had been making many deep cold as ice. This was an inspiration, so we thought, and we immediately sent down a lot on a wire for refrigeration. "At the proper time it was drawn up and placed on the table, and we found the bottles delightfully chilled. When the steward opened them, however, there was no 'pop' to the cork, and the wine looked flat and bad when served. What was our astonishment upon tasting it to find that it was pure sait water. I thought first that it was a bad practical joke and ordered more wine sent down into the cold sea water. This was intended for the dessert course, but when it was spened we were disgusted to again find only salt water instead of sparkling champagne, and our pleasure was spoiled,

"You are probably puzzled to find a solution to the matter. Well, it is very simple. In the deep sea, at the depth to which we sank the wine, the pressure is enor-mous-so great, in fact, that the salt water was forced into the bottles through the pores in the corks, and being more dense than the wine completely absorbed it. That may sound like a fish story, but it is a cold fact."-Wine and Spirit Gazette.

It Would Not Work. The book agent rattled away at the front door on Pitcher street, and when the servant appeared he smiled his sweetest, "Is the lady of the house in?" he asked. "I don't know, sir. I'll see."
"Thank you. Here is my card. Say

Mr. John Revere Middleton is in the par-

Ior awaiting her."
The gentleman's manner and name quite overcame the girl, and she invited him in and flew up stairs.

When the lady came down and saw her visitor, she sized him up on the spot. "Well," she asked freezingly, "what is your business? 'My dear madam," he replied persuasively, "I am not here on business. It is, I assure you, a pleasure to show you this elegantly bound voltime of the latest edition of"- And thereupon the lady walked out, and the servant came in and showed him the door. - Detroit Free Press.

Injured While Coasting

Impure Blood Asserts Itself But Hood's Sarsparilla Cures the Disease and Restores Health. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "During the winter of 1887, I was injured on one limb while coasting. It did not trouble me much at first, but soon became more painful, my strength began to decline and I could not rest at night. I was attended by several different doctors but all failed to check the trouble and I grew rapidly worse. Early in 1890 I had to use crutches and my health was very poor, having lost my appetite and being reduced in flesh. In the fall of 1891 I had to take to my bed and it was thought I Would Not Live until spring. During all this time I had tried many different medicines but did get relief. In the meantime to give me relief, the several bunches around my knee were lanced and later every effort made to heal the running sores but all in vain. Then it was, while confined to my bed last spring, that my father, having read much about the merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla, decided to have me give it a trial. I have taken it regularly, using nearly ten bottles. All the sores but two are healed and these are nearly well. I have thrown away my crutches as I can walk, go to school and do some work. I have a good appetite and real good health and have increased in weight very much. Hood's Sarsaparilla has been a blessing to me." WIL-LIAM JOHNSON, Normanville, Pennsylvania.
