An Acre of Fabric Edifices.
"I do not believe that any other city in the world can show such a mass of public buildings," remarked an old traveler referring to the region west of Third avenue at Sixty-seventh street. "I asked a policeman at the corner how many public buildings there were on his beat and the one adjoining, and here is the list he gave me: Normal College City of New York, Seventh regiment armory, Hahnemann hospital, Mount Sinai hospital, German hospital, Presbyterian hospital, New York Foundling hospital, Home For the Aged, under direction of the Little Sisters of the Poor, Baptist Home For the Aged, Chapin Home For the Aged and Infirm, Presbyterian Home For Aged Women, Dominican Convent home, Institution For the Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes, Union Theological seminary and Grammar school No. 76. That makes a total of 15 in all, and the policeman said he thought perhaps he had forgotten the names of two or three others."
"I learned that in this small area of the city's territory 5,000 persons annually received instruction of some sort, while at the hospitals, outdoor patients included, nearly 75,000 people received medical aid. The aged and unfortunate cared for are numerous, and the founding hospital has on hand nearly always from 1,600 to 2,000 infants. Truly wonderful section of wonderful New York."—New York Herald.

Homemade Baskets.
There is a way to make good baskets at home and pretty ones, too, out of corn husks—thick outer husks for strong baskets, and for lighter and finer ones the white inner parts. These must be wrapped for an hour or so in a damp towel, and then cut into strips of equal width. Make an ordinary band with six or more strips, which may be doubled, or even tripled, for greater strength.
Thread a needle with heavy waxed linen thread, and having dampened the braid form it into an oval five or six inches long and three wide, for the bottom of the basket, and sew the adjoining edges of the braid together, as in a straw hat, but don't overlap them. Go on coiling and stitching for the sides of the basket, widening the opening until the basket is deep enough.
The handles are made of a heavy, three stranded braid, which is sewed all around the top of the basket, just inside, and looped at the middle of each side.
For ornament with the handles with gay colored ribbon or braid, put a box plating of the same around the top and work a bunch of flowers on one side in bright worsteds, with long stitches. The opposite side may have a letter or a name.—Detroit Free Press.

Used to Ride Asleep.
Dr. Pritchard, a British physician of national reputation, had a patient who was very fond of horseback exercise. This man would rise at night, find his way to the stable, saddle and bridle his horse, enjoy a long gallop and finally return home and around the whole family while prowl around in a somnambulant sleep. Dr. Pritchard further says that this man could only be aroused by having the soles of his feet tickled.

HOW HE BECAME A STORY WRITER.

Richard Malcolm Johnston Talks of His Career and Early Efforts.
Richard Malcolm Johnston's sketches of rural life in Georgia have been among the most delightful contributions to current magazine literature. Col. Johnston—his hair and mustache being white, but his eye is clear, his manner gracious, and he is the most entertaining talker, his speech having a rich southern flavor. He was with James Whitcomb Riley when the reporter came upon him at the Denison House, and that gentleman kindly gave him assistance to draw the colonel out.

"Story writing," said the colonel, "is the last thing for me in literature, and I came to it in a way altogether accidental. I had published two or three volumes on English literature, and in conjunction with a friend had written the life of Alexander Stephens and also a book on American and European literature, but had no idea of story writing for money. Two or three stories of mine found their way into papers before I left Georgia."

"When was 'Abraham Billingsley' written?" inquired Mr. Riley.
"It is recent—only three years ago. I went to Baltimore in 1891. I had been a professor of English literature in Georgia, but during the war I took a school of forty boys to Baltimore. There was at Baltimore in 1890 a periodical called 'The Southern Magazine.' The first nine of my 'Dukeborough Tales' were contributed to that magazine. These fell into the hands of the editor of Harper's, who asked me what I got for them. I said, 'Not a cent,' and he wanted to know why he had not sent them to him. 'Noelus Peeler's Conditions' was the first story for which I got pay. It was published in 'The Century' over the signature of 'Philemon Perch.'"

"Dr. Holland told Mr. Gilder to tell that man to write under his own name, adding that he himself had made a mistake in writing under a pseudonym. Suiney Lanier urged me to write, and said that if I would do so he would get the money in print for me. So he took 'Noelus Peeler's Conditions,' and it brought me $50. I think he was more greatly rejoiced over the money than I was, and I'm not a man to turn my back on $50. I was at first really surprised that my stories were considered of any value, and the people use the money for my way. I am a little surprised yet. I withdrew from teaching about six years ago, and since that time have devoted myself to authorship.

"I have never put a word in my books," continued Col. Johnston, "that I have not read the people use, and very few that I have not used myself. Poulton, Ga., is my Dukeborough. I was born fourteen miles from there, and the road leading down to that place was a rough one. The first of the 'Dukeborough Tales' was 'Goosestown School.' Of the female characters that I have created, Miss Doolana Lane is my favorite, while Mr. Bill Williams is my favorite among the male characters. I started Doolana to make her mean and stingy like her father, but I hadn't written a page before she wrenched herself out of my hands. She said to me, 'I am a woman, and you shall not make me mean and stingy like just made herself, and she was like her mother.'"

"These stories are all of Georgia as it was before the war. In the hill country the institution of slavery was very different from what it was in the rice region or near the coast. Do you know the Georgia negro has five times the sense of the South Carolina negro? Why? Because he has always been near his master; their relations are closer. My father's negro loved him and he loved them, and if a negro child died upon the place my mother wept for it."

"Some time ago I went to the old place, and an old negro came eight miles—walked all the way—to see me. He got to the house before 6 o'clock in the morning, and opened the shutters while I was asleep. With a cry he rushed into the room, 'Oh, Massa Dick! We cried in each other's arms. We had been boys together. One of my slaves is now a judge on the bench. Lucius Holsby. He is one of the most eloquent men in Georgia and lives in Augusta.'—Indianapolis News.

The Worst Case the Doctors Ever Saw
Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured
"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass."
"Dear Sirs—I wish to testify to the great value of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For some time I had been troubled with scrofula, which early last winter assumed a very bad form.

Sores Appeared on My Face and hands and gradually increased in number until they reached to my shoulder. The doctors said it was the worst case of scrofula they ever saw and also went so far as to say it was incurable. I tried ointments and other remedies but to no avail. A friend recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla, and although I resolved to give it a trial. After taking one bottle I noticed the sores had commenced to heal. After the sixth bottle they were all healed.

I continued to take it, however, until I had used nine bottles, and now I am perfectly well."
