National Growth and Changes.

A nation is a living thing, all its component men constituting one great national Being thus a living person, a nation, like any other person, passes through all stages of growth—infancy, youth, man-Ever growing in volume, it must necessarily outgrow, successively, the dra peries suited to the various stages of life. And a nation's constitution, whether unwritten, like the English, or written, like ours: what is it but a nation's drapery vesturing the body politic? As, then, the nation grows, so let its constitution grow. Not that we are to be forever tinkering it in a mechanical way.

But let it take on naturally the nation's growing size. It is well that it should be of iron, but let it have the malleability of wrought iron, not the inflexibility of cast iron; otherwise it may suddenly snap. What a terrific illustration of this in our own day! Our nation, in growing, out-grew the institution of slavery, but the nation declined to be wise, refusing to adjust the constitution to the growing doct-rine of human brotherhood. What was the result? A million of graves and a billion of debts. The skin burst; and nothing less than God's good heart, loving us for our fathers' sake, saved the wine.— Rev. George Dana Boardman in Forum.

The Changes of Time.

The other day he returned. He stood again in his native village. He found the can where he had hid it. He procured a pint of milk. He went to his old familiar boyhood's home, entered, and in a hesi tating and trembling voice, said, "Father and mother, here's your milk." He was given a warm welcome, but he noticed there was a change in his parents' appearance; they had not the old familiar look. He questioned them; explanations follow-The young man discovered that, though the good people were still his parents, the change in their personal appearance was readily accounted for. Shortly after his sudden and mysterious depart-ure from home his father died and his mother married again. Then his mother died and his new father married again.

Thus on his return the wandering boy found the dear old home as be had left it, the only difference being that he had a new father and a new mother. Verily, truth is stranger than fiction.—Old Colony Gazette.

An Electric Merometer.

The Boston Transcript prints the felon which shoe manufacturers are inter

The machine is applied to the sorting of pieces of leather according to their thickness, and distributing them in apparate receptacles, its capacity in this line extending to the separation of taps, which vary in thickness as little as 1,000th of an inch, and this at the rate of 5,000 taps an hour. When the apparatus is in operation ali-that is required of the attendent is to put the taps in a trough like box. A follower is then adjusted behind the tape, which keeps them in an upright position, and maintains a constant pressure as they are fed from the trough into two chatting fingers, the taps in return being fed from the trough into migrometer lingers, which pass successively into position.

The fingers, which are fed around by a rachet movement, pause a short time ever the receptacle for taps, and when a micrometer finger reaches one of these bins in which the tap that it bolds should be dropped, the inner extension of the finger touches an electric contact, and the tap falls from the jaws. The operation of the finger is made to actuate a counter, which indicates the number of taps in every repeptacle.

DANCING MARIONETTES.

Pleasant Diversions for Long Evenings in the Family Circle.

Marionettes, says a sanguine inventor, must have an inherent life of their own. The clown, the columbine and all the figures representing animals will now caper about on their own hook.

Worn out visiting cards, matcheticks, these are the very simple materials with which people who are fond of a little non-sense now and then can fashion all the figures represented by these designs, which can at any time be set in motion like mechanical toys.

Take, for instance, a clown. First draw and paint the figure on the back of a card Ey unseated 1 nds returned to com--the body and head first, then the two legs and arms; carefully cut out these five pieces, place the body on a table, and above it the legs and arms in a position of

Now these limbs must be joined, and this is how it is to be done. Take, for in-stance, an arm, mark with a pencil at the shoulder end of the arm the exact spot forming the axis of rotation; pierce a hole with a pin at this point and put it through the shoulder in the body. Bend a matchstick at the center as much as possible without breaking and drop a little melted sealing wax, joining the two ligaments to the arm and body respectively, making the part forming the joint in contact with the pin. Do the same for the other limbs, remove the four pius and the figure is complete. Now we have to give it life.
All that has to be done for this is to place the side of the figure on which are the matches in a plate containing a thin layer, so to say, of water. The bent fibers house from the Delaware and Hudson of wood which have not been broken will swell by means of the moisture absorbed and will try to regain their rectilineal po-sition. The figure will then make a series of abrupt movements which are very amusing. The legs and arms will move apart as those do which are moved by a string. Be careful to use only large, common matchsticks. The Swedish ones are impregnated with parafline and would not move as re-

Each one can perfect the mode of fashion-Binghamton for the past three weeks. ing these figures as he likes best. A ballet girl who can lift her foot to her forehead, and a rooster that can move its legs about, are pretty easy to make. A horse with twelve different joints is a bit too difficult for an amateur. For the horse each leg is composed of three different portions.

Instead of placing the figure on a plate we can put a drop of water on each joint with the finger or with a paint brush and the effect will be the same.-New York

Queer Facts About Beavers. James Sherman, of Clifton, was telling recently some queer things about beaver and beaver trapping. The animal, he says, has the most acute sense of smell of any animal that exists. In setting the traps you must wait till low water, in order to have the tide when it comes in obliterate all traces of your presence. When a beaver is caught in a trap the other beavers at once enable him to make good his escape by seizing him by the tail and hanling him away until they release him, often leaving the limb in the trap as an evidence of the struggle that ensued. He caught a benver once on Puget Island, and says that it had only two toes on a hind foot, the other three legs being amputated as close to the body as if the limbs had never existed.

Mr. Sherman says there is one faculty the beaver possesses that would be a profitable and interesting study for scientific men, and that is the power of making objects adhere to the bottom of a stream without any apparent means of securing them. The beaver lives mostly on wood, which it cuts and deposits on the bottom, where it remains, contrary to the natural laws, which would in ordinary cases cause the wood to rise to the surface. How this is accomplished it is difficult to decide, but it is nevertheless a fact, as Mr. Sherman assures us that he tried it time and time again. Beaver trapping pays well where any considerable number can be caught, the average price of the furs being from $3.50 to $5 per pound.—Cathlamet Gazette.

Thought "Onida" a Man.

I never see "Oulda's" name mentioned but it recalls to me the circumstances under which her work was first introduced to the American public. I don't think the story has ever been printed. It was just before the war that Mr. Lippincott, the Philadelphia publisher, saw in an English magazine a serial story bearing the nom de plume of "Ouida." He was attracted to it and determined to republish it. One question, however, arose. The story was named "Held in Bondage; or, Granville de Vigne," and Mr. Lippincott feared that the name would give the false impression that the story was another of the many works on American slavery that were then flooding the country.

He therefore determined to reverse the title, and to bear him out in this he appealed to the writer. A long and pleasant correspondence took place between Mr. Lippincott and "L. de la Rame, Esq.," the former supposing the latter to be a man. "Ouida" never corrected the impression, and for a long time-in fact until Mr. Lippincott's subsequent visit to Europe-did the publisher believe that "Ouida" was a man, and many of his friends remind him today of his enthusiasm over "the new man across the water" whom he had discovered.-Edward W. Bok's Letter.

A Boy's Great Desire.

There is a little boy up town who was 8 years old a few days ago. He has so many things more than any little S-year-old needs or wants that his indulgent mamma finally said to him in perplexity: "Harold, I really don't know what to get you for your birthday, and I think I shall let you choose this time what it shall be. New you may say just what you would like most to do or have, and you shall have it." "Just what I want to do?" queried Har-

"Yes, for this one day." "Then I don't want to have anything, mamma; but I do want to do just one thing awfully, if you'll let me. I want to put on some ragged clothes and go all alone out in the streets and lick a Mick. I
