LACES FOR HATS

LACES FOR WRAPS

LACES FOR DRESSES

LACES FOR LINGERIE

In a word—EVERYTHING.

Point de Venise—The real article—imitated by many of the enhancing canals of Venice itself—and copied from old, rich priceless patterns now on exhibition in foreign art galleries. 8 to 12 inches wide; solid and net forms—for ruffles, collars, for the insertions of bolero, ruffles, etc., etc. Insertions also.

Point d'Ireland—Pure silk and very fine and rich, cream, 3 1/2 to 10 inches wide, and in insertions.

Silk Guipure—Net top, designs after real Spanish lace. 3 1/2 to 6 inches.

Point de Margot—Persons, other than of royal blood, caught wearing these laces in Queen Elizabeth's time were publicly whipped therefore. No wonder royalty claimed it for its own. Open net and profusely and richly covered. 4 and 6 inches wide. Insertions also of same.

Point Flanders—A dream in pure white silk, medium widths, for millinery and dresses.

L'Anduleux—or Sepentine Lace, to be placed in folds, then you have the latest indelicacy.

Flemish Lace—In patterns made as far back as the 15th century. Very serviceable for hats, wraps and dresses. Black, old ivory and white, all widths—solid and net. Insertions of same.

Chantilly—Tulle with light figure, beautiful. Black and white and cream, all widths.

Spanish—Valencienne, guipure, forchen and all the other tracteries from Pique and St. Gall.

HEARD AT FOREST CITY.

An Intelligent Correspondent's Resume of Passing Events.
Special to the Scranton Tribune.
FOREST CITY, Pa., April 22—Last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wray gave a dinner party at their pleasant home on Main street to a small company of friends. The following were present: Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Blakelee, Mrs. H. D. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. I. V. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Maxey. A very pleasant evening was spent and enjoyed by all.

The honor of having caught the largest trout of any Forest City gentleman, so far this season, belongs to Thomas Richards, the genial clerk in J. L. Morgan & Co.'s store. Mr. Richards, who is an expert fisherman, tied himself to a small brook near Forest City last Friday in search of the "speckled beauties," and was very successful, as his labor was rewarded by having over nine pounds of trout on his return.

Thomas Cunningham, of Herrick, is spending Sunday at his home in this borough.

John E. Free, of Wyoming, is the guest of friends in this place over Sunday. Mr. Free has been superintending the placing of a large electric plant in Simpson & Watkins' collieries at Wyoming.

HONESDALE HAPPENINGS.

Syrup of Important News of the Maple City.

HONESDALE, April 22—Among the many improvements being made in Honesdale this spring, one is worthy of particular mention. The tearing down of front fences is one of the finest improvements yet made to our streets.

They appear much broader, look neater and give an aristocratic appearance that could be obtained in no other way. Upper Main street is now a miniature Euclid avenue, or a commonwealth avenue, without the spacious monumented park running through the center of the street.

The front line fences are being leveled one by one, and soon broad streets bordered with spacious green lawns will reach from one end of the borough to the other.

Mrs. Edwin F. Torrey, Miss Miller and Mrs. Edgar and daughter, Louise, leave on Monday for Hot Springs, N. Y.

Miss Clara Pellatt, of Hawley, was a caller in town Saturday.

THE TRIBUNE Encyclopedia Britannica is receiving a number of purchasers in Honesdale. Leave your names at Gardner's 630 Main street, and THE TRIBUNE agent will call on you with samples.

DR. SCHLEIMANN'S PALACE.

Remarkable Tome in Athens Where the Language.
I have seen many royal palaces, but Dr. Henry Schlemann's home in Athens surpassed them all in the beauty of its appointments and the loveliness of its embellishments. It is situated in the midst of a large garden, where in summer statues of Grecian gods and goddesses gleam through foliage of tropical richness. But my visit was in midwinter, and the streets of the city were fairly covered with snow. The tinkling of sleigh bells seemed more in harmony with the scene than the soft notes of Apollo's lute.

Dr. Schlemann's marble palace is on one of the most fashionable streets of Athens, and as I walked through the streets leading to it I saw no Greek girls who recalled Byron's "Maid of Athens," nor any Athenian women who resembled those proud damsels of ancient times whose dark hair was adorned with the golden garlands of an ancestral tradition that they had "sprung from the soil."

As I approached Dr. Schlemann's I was struck by the life size marble statues of Grecian poets, philosophers and heroes that embellished the roof of the stately pile. The door of the palace was opened by a tall footman, who spoke French with a strong accent. Having him my card I was invited to enter the library, which, with the exception of the Vatican library, is the most beautiful I have ever seen.

The walls of the stately apartment were hung with exquisite pictures representing classical subjects, and the corners were adorned with marble statues. The dark bookcases were graced by marble busts of Grecian poets and philosophers, in which Greek, of course, predominated, for Dr. Schlemann was an enthusiast about ancient Greece—the language of Plato and Aristotle being the language of his taste. He made his butler take the classical name of Pelops and his cook that of Iphigeneia.

Dr. Schlemann's wife is a Greek, beautiful and intelligent, but not a patrician, for she is the daughter of a shopkeeper of Athens. In this respect she is of the same social position as her husband, for he was originally a shop boy in Hamburg, and made his fortune in the indigo trade. He was nearly 70 years old at the time of my visit to Athens, but with all the physical vigor of 30. His wife was just about half his age, but wonderfully congenial and sympathetic. They had two children, who, according to their father's classical taste, were called Agamemnon and Andromache.

The former was a beautiful boy of 3, with dark hair and eyes and Grecian nose and mouth. Andromache was just 16, and so lovely that she might have served as a model for the most graceful statue in her father's library. She had a great talent for languages, and spoke with fluency both ancient and modern Greek, French, German, Italian and English. She was accomplished in dancing, drawing and music, and her talent for tapestry would have made her a fit companion for Penelope—Chicago News.

The biggest bargain yet—those magnificent Multichromes.
