

MINISTER AND WIFE

They Heartily Indorse Some Great Modern Truths.

WHICH ARE IMPORTANT

Why People Wear Out Their Lives, and Become Miserable When There is No Reason For Doing So.

Wearing out! That is just what a great many people are doing. They know something is wrong, and yet cannot tell what is the matter.

Did you ever think what a large proportion of American people is sick, or at least, if not exactly sick, not well? Something is the matter all the time.

How many people of your personal acquaintance are constantly complaining of being "not right," having "such a headache," "not feeling just right," and a thousand and one other things, until it almost seems as if the world had become one huge hospital filled with incurables.

What is the cause of all this? Certainly it is not a natural condition, but on the contrary it is one that should cause much anxiety and alarm.

The American people are proverbially in a hurry—work in a hurry and sleep in a hurry, overworking and overstraining nature, and then wonder why they do not feel well and strong.

One of the results of the American way of "rushing" things is the impairment of the digestive organs. Indigestion is a terribly common ailment among all classes of people. Thousands of men and women cannot assimilate their food, and through lack of nourishment they lose flesh, becoming thin, pale and weak.

It was formerly the custom to prescribe cod liver oil and other nauseating preparations for this condition, but doctors are now admitting that it is unreasonable to expect the stomach to digest these sickening remedies when it cannot stand the most delicate foods. Strong medicated wines, bitters have also failed, because they only inflame the coating of the stomach of the stomach, and make matters worse. Drugs and medicines have been proved to be equally useless.

The only way to cure indigestion and restore the stomach to a healthy condition is to give nourishment without the aid of the digestive organs, so as to give the stomach a rest. This is a common sense principle, and it has given rise to one of the greatest discoveries of modern times—namely, Paskola, the pre-digested food.

Paskola is unlike any other preparation that has been introduced. It is not a drug or a medicine, but a pure starch food, artificially digested. As soon as it is swallowed it is absorbed by the system, giving instant nourishment without any digested process in the stomach.

In this way it gives tone and strength to every part of the system and enables other food to be perfectly digested. Wherever Paskola is taken, the symptoms of dyspepsia speedily disappear, the whole body feels its revived influence, and emaciated people find themselves becoming plump and strong. The testimony of pale, thin people who have taken Paskola shows that it can add two pounds a week to the weight of people who have lost flesh through lack of nutrition. One great point in favor of Paskola is that it is extremely pleasant to the taste and agreeable to the most sensitive stomachs. Even children like to take it and that is why it agrees with them and does them so much good.

Read this frank and truthful letter from a minister of the Gospel.

WORTH CENTK, N. Y., April 14th, 1894.

The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Rensselaer St., New York.

GENTLEMEN: In reply to yours of April 13th, 1894, I can truly say it is a pleasure to give to the world a testimonial in regard to Paskola, for it has done wonders for myself and wife. We have taken $1.50 worth, less than the price of one visit from our physician, yet it has done for us what no doctor's prescription or patent medicines have ever done.

For 26 years I have suffered untold miseries by a disordered stomach. For years I have had to abstain from meat, and after one day's use of Paskola have eaten meat or any other food my appetite craved with no ill result.

In regard to my wife, I hardly know how to write. It certainly appears like a miracle. Months passed with her with no appetite and so reduced in flesh and vitality that we thought she was looking for nothing but a speedy death. But Providence, in the shape of a little pamphlet tucked under the string of a package brought from a neighboring town, and by me tossed upon the table with the remark "Here, wife is something to cure your ill and give you an appetite."

She read it, and said to me, "I have faith to believe that if I had that Paskola it would help me."

The next mail carried an order for a bottle. The second day brought the bottle, and she took the first dose. That was four weeks ago. Today she can eat a hearty meal and of anything she craves, something she had not done for months.

I regret we did not weigh ourselves before we began to take Paskola, but the truth is I had no faith in it; so many things had failed. But you have our lasting gratitude.

You can make such use of this testimonial as you wish. I do not send it to obtain a supply free, but because I have the good of my fellow men at heart.

I have induced a few people already to give Paskola a trial. When they shall have given it a trial, I will obtain their testimonials for you.

Hoping under God this endorsement may benefit some, we remain, Yours truly,

REV. A. F. BEHR AND WIFE. Paskola may be obtained of any reputable druggist. A pamphlet on food and indigestion will be mailed free on application to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 80 Rensselaer St., New York.

Criticizing a Young Lady. "She would be a pretty girl for but one thing."

"What's that?" asked Charley. "George—Her face is always covered with purple and red blotches."

Charley—Oh, that's easily enough disposed of. Used to be the same way myself, but I caught on to the trouble one day, and got rid of it in no time.

George—What was it? Charley—Simply blood eruptions. Took a short course of P. P. I tell you, it's the best blood corrector. The governor had rheumatism so bad that you could hear him holler clear across the country every time he moved. He tried it, and you know what an athlete old man he is now. If somebody would give Miss Daisy a pointer, she would thank them ten times over. All the drug stores sell it.

THE USE OF REMNANTS.

Their Possibilities Now That Fashion Smiles on Costumes Made of Assorted Materials. The weeks just passed have enabled many shoppers to collect at a comparatively small cost "remnants" of cloths, silks, chifons, laces, ribbons and the like. Where these "margin remnants" have been selected with a certain amount of regard for their possibilities they may be made to return with interest the money and time expended in this purchase. The truth is that today fashion is smiling amiably on the costume which is made of assorted materials, giving you a special opportunity for encompassing elegance from remnants.

You may make a skirt of cloth, a vest of accordion plaited chiffon, with a lace yoke, and the jacket, bodice and sleeves of cloth of a different shade and may confidently hope to achieve success. Then, again, the short piece of broadie may be utilized for the tea jacket, and the few yards of lace which you doubtless picked up under reduced circumstances may be calculated safely to form a vest, a flounce beneath a basque of the jacket, which might be cut in tabs, and to trim the full sleeves, which, according to the latest styles of the mode, are only to be full down to the elbow and to set closely to the wrist and fall over the hands. These frills of lace over the hands, which half conceal and half reveal, are eminently becoming.

This silks may be successfully used for dressing jackets lined with nun's veiling. There is no piece of lace which you have bought at the sales so small to be considered of use. It takes but few inches today to make the bib, that indispensable addition to our attire, which the longer we seem to know the more we seem to admire, the reason for this being perhaps not difficult to find, for it may be discovered in the undeniable fact that lace at the throat is universally becoming. Lace, too, may be used to form the popular yoke, which shall be transparent for an evening dress to be worn at home, while it requires but a small quantity to form the lace ruffles, and but two yards will suffice for that full lace collar round the shoulders which today we call the early "Victorian bertha."

Are you the fortunate possessor of a little girl? If so, you can use the length of two yards of food cloth. It will make a perfectly plain frock, cut square back and front, plaited in the waist with braided and a mesh of black watered ribbon, and it is worn over a white lawn camisole with large Garibaldi sleeves, made with a wide striped with frosting and tucks. Here is a chance for economy for all mothers. The camisole also is a contrived out of old lengths of embroidery, while the limited amount required by the frock tells its own tale of thrift, and of course the combination of color may be varied pleasantly—scarlet cuffs with black ribbons, navy blue with heliotrope, old rose color and tan velvet ribbons. The choices are infinite.

Hot Milk as a Drink. Hot milk is a regularly recognized drink in some of the German cafes. It is served in a cup with a saucer, and two lumps of sugar always accompany it. The drink has several things to commend it, since it has none of the dangerous qualities of tea, coffee or alcoholic drinks, and it is actually an excellent remedy for disorders of the stomach arising from certain forms of indigestion.

Recipe For Froze Pie. Stew half a pound of prunes in a very little water until soft; remove the stones, sweeten and add gradually to the well beaten whites of 3 eggs; line a plate with crust, and when nearly baked add the prunes and bake about 20 minutes longer.

A Novelty In Sleeves. A new Paris sleeve is quite a novelty, combining, as it does, the snug and the puff. It is cut all in one, but for narrow width material, such as silk, the extra width can be put in separately. Very small platts, placed one on the top of the other reduce this fullness to the size for sleeves.

NEW PARIS SLEEVE. Necessary for completing the seam, which extends from elbow to wrist. At the armhole the extra fullness is put into platts, back and front, the remainder being gathered to the required size. The short, puffed sleeve is still the popular shape for ordinary evening wear. Ball dresses have no sleeves to speak of. Many are made with merely a closely fitting band of ribbon by way of a sleeve.

Hints to Housekeepers. To roast small birds fasten the heads under the wings. Lay a thin slice of pork on the breast of each bird and a piece of bread underneath. Roast in a hot oven.

A lump of soda laid on the kitchen drain pipe will prevent the pipes from becoming clogged with grease; also flood the pipes once a week with boiling water in which a little soda is dissolved.

In packing bottles or canned fruit for moving, slip a rubber band over the body of them.

THE BELLE OF THE SEASON.

A Beautiful Belle Broken in Health. A Journey Through Europe.

A beautiful American lady had grown pale and thin during the "bellevue" season. Each passing winter had found her in the forefront of social gaiety, and each rearing summer had tossed her like a straw from city to seaside, from seaside to mountain, from mountains to country. It was very pleasant while it lasted. There were balls and dinners in the winter, with hosts of admiring friends to cheer and cheer her social triumphs. A black dismal day came when she was forced to admit, even to herself, that her influence was gone and that she was merely a belle of the past. She was no longer a belle. Flesh and blood and nerves had stood the strain as long as they could, and then they went to the wall.

Realizing that the youth and beauty of her life had come to an end, and knowing how it was that she had broken down, she took up the broken threads of her saddened existence and sought in vain the means to restore the vital organs in a sound and healthy condition. It was impossible, and yet she persevered before it was impossible.

One October day, three years later, the lists of steamship arrivals contained the name of the broken-hearted creature who had once been the belle of the season. It was the name of a happy day, some friends made haste to call upon her. Among them was her cousin, who had a young physician's belief that his skill in medical science would cure her. Upon entering the drawing-room, he was greeted by the most brilliantly beautiful woman that he had seen for years. She was gazing down at him with a smile that was almost a miracle. "Could this be my cousin?" he asked, "this radiant creature, with rounded form, elastic step, sparkling eyes, and above all, a complexion more charming than she had ever possessed before? It was impossible, and yet she persevered before it was impossible."

"If it is indeed you," he said, "one sign will not fail me." He looked at her searchingly. "Your sign has failed," she said, "my freckles are gone."

"Becky spots of the past—all gone. Then you are indeed a stranger. My call is in vain. I cannot believe that you are truly a stranger, for I am sure throughout—in mind and body, I have almost been born again."

"You must have discovered the spring of eternal youth."

"Have. Listen well, and I will tell you the secret. You may remember what a wan and broken-down creature I was when I said good-bye to you three years ago. I was on my way to Europe, in the hope of benefiting what little health I had left. I could not hope to regain it. My doctor discouraged me. At the last, I was told to go to the mountains, and to be as cheerful as I could. No more late hours for me, no more drinking, no more excitement—no nothing. What a physical wreck in appearance I was you know. Young in both years and disposition, fond of society—the traditions of my family, as well as my own, had led me to be the greatest of the gay—I had found myself prematurely old and broken-down in health. Well, a change of scene and air would do me some good, and if I obtained from all that but a little more of life, I might hope to continue to live, more good than evil, for a good many years. I did not quite see the gain in that, but, to go with the party, and the steamer I fell in with some acquaintances who were going to a place called Carlsbad. They asked me to go with them, and as one place was as good as another, I went. We reached Carlsbad, at the beginning of the regular season, which is the last of May, and I stayed through the entire season, until the first of October. It seemed to me that I was drinking the mineral waters, and more because it was the custom than from any idea that the waters would do me any good. I began talking to the waters, and physically, and in some things better to do. I equipped myself each day with a waterwear mug, and joined a long line of men and women from all parts of the world on the way to the springs. The greatest of the springs was the Sprudel, and naturally I went there. To be in Carlsbad and not drink the waters of the Sprudel is to be out of fashion; so, out of mere force of habit, I went to the Sprudel. "As I expected, the drinking did not make me feel any better and I consulted a physician. He went over my case very carefully and he finally asked me if I wished to place myself under his care. I had to do so. I was ill. "Very well," said he, "you will please continue drinking the Sprudel water as you have been doing. There was no help for it, and I went on as before, taking the water regularly, although I seemed to lose weight. But the physician kept me at it mercilessly. "It was a long time at it, it seemed to me, and then, to my great surprise, I began to gain in strength. This was more than I had looked for, but it was true. I felt better, mentally and physically, and above all, I began to gain in weight. It seemed to be an entirely new creation. My old frock had in some mysterious way entirely disappeared, and now I was forming in its place. This was like a miracle, but I hardly dared to hope that it could or would continue. But it did continue, although slowly. I felt that I was passing through a new stage of growth. I gained weight pretty steadily, and, after a time, I felt much stronger. At the close of the season I might have imagined that I was a young girl again. "I think you have found the spring of eternal youth," said the young physician. "But do you expect to retain your present health and freshness without living most of the time in Carlsbad?" "As it would be inconvenient for me to go to the mountain, I make the mountain come to me. In other words I carry the famous Sprudel spring around with me. The imported Carlsbad Sprudel Salts, in powder form, is a most excellent substitute for the imported waters. Although I am fully restored to health, still I am so fond of the waters that I drink a mug, or nearly as much, as though I were invalid. In the morning, before breakfast, I dissolve one-half teaspoonful of the powder in a glassful of the Carlsbad water, which is sold in this country in bottles brought direct from Carlsbad. In Carlsbad I found any number of people who habitually added the salts in powder form to the water from the spring in order to give it greater strength. All persons can not go to Carlsbad, of course, but they can accomplish as good results by using the imported Carlsbad Sprudel Salts here at home. I would advise you to try a few experiments for your own information on some of your patients. It will do them no harm, in any event, and it is pretty sure to surprise you with its good results. "It is certainly worth consideration," said the young man. "Perhaps I shall find the opportunity to make the trial that you suggest. Meantime I must again congratulate you upon your recovery."

Some weeks later the young physician, much impressed by the wonderful story that he had heard, began a series of experiments with the Carlsbad Mineral Waters. As his cousin had predicted, he was greatly surprised at the result. The diseases treated were mostly dyspepsia, constipation, gout, rheumatism, melancholia, and ailments of a similar nature, began to grow brighter monthly soon after beginning the treatment, and in a few weeks, they felt an exhilaration that they had not known for years. In cases of dyspepsia the patients soon lost the heavy, dyspeptic feeling, and in course of a few weeks they were able to choose their bill of fare to suit every variety of their tastes. In all of these cases the action of the salts in powder form upon the skin was strongly marked. Especially was this case with persons having dull or mottled faces as the result of bad digestion. Under the stimulating action of the waters when used with the addition of the salt, the skin would exfoliate frequently, thus causing the complexion to become much clearer.

He found that the action of the Carlsbad Salt in powder form showed clearly the peculiar value of the water for medicinal purposes. It is not a mere purgative as might be supposed, but it is an alternative and eliminative remedy. In its action on the human system it dissolves tenacious bile, removes all unhealthy growths, relieves irritation, neutralizes free acid, and places the vital organs in a sound and healthy condition. It does this by adding nature, and not by sudden and excessive stimulation. In its effect upon the stomach the water as well as the Carlsbad Sprudel Salt powder form causes a soothing, alternative action on the nerves of the stomach. This causes the increased appetite that is invariably noticed after a short course of treatment, and also the feeling of comfortable warmth that spreads throughout the entire body. By its introduction into the circulation of the blood, it causes the gradual decomposition of blood and lymph.

It will be seen from this casual glance at the action of Carlsbad water and the Carlsbad Sprudel Salt in powder form, that the curative results are obtained in the simplest and most natural manner. The remedy first dissolves and absorbs all tough and solid waste matter, and immediately thereafter begins to build up the system with new health and strength. As in building a new house on the foundations of an old one, the Carlsbad water and Sprudel Salt carry away the rubbish and accumulated scum of all health.

The Carlsbad Waters and Sprudel Salt are becoming so popular in this country that dishonest persons have found it profitable to place upon the market bogus Sprudel Salt; but, to make sure that you are getting the genuine imported article, the purchaser should be careful to buy only that which bears the name of Kaiser & Meindorf Co., New York City, on the label, who are the sole agents for the United States for the products of the Carlsbad Springs. The pamphlet issued by this house gives a great deal of interesting information concerning Carlsbad, and will be mailed free upon application. For sale by all reliable druggists.
