ARTISTIC FURNISHING.

An Ideal Boudoir That Is as Simple as It Is Attractive.

In the mind of the homemaker the prevailing idea as regards the furnishing of the boudoir should be that of daintiness. The essentials left for the drawing room. An ideal boudoir for a young lady, as depicted in The Delineator, has the floor covered with old blue carpet fling, the walls tinted blue and the ceiling cream white.

At the right side of the room is a chiffonier of birdseye maple, with brass trimmings and an oval mirror. On top is spread a lace cover over blue silk. A window is hung with white curtains edged with a ruffle of the same and held back with white cotton cords and tassels. A lambrequin of seers, also edged with a ruffle, falls over the top of the curtain. At each side the lambrequin is caught to the window frame and formed in a rosette, below which a cascade effect is produced. At the lower side are arranged sash curtains of seers, trimmed at the front edges with insertion. The sash curtains are adjusted on brass rods at top and bottom.

On the floor, under the window, stands a small trunk, which is disguised as an upholstered ottoman. Over it is POUCHER FOR YOUNG LADY. fitted a cover of old blue china silk edged with a deep valance to match, blue silk tasseled fringe falling daintly over the top of the valance. Not far from this stands an oak chair, with a cushioned seat and a head rest. Over the floor is thrown a white fur mat.

Across an angle of the wall is placed a dressing table of maple furnished with a number of drawers and a large oval mirror. A canopy drape of white swiss, edged like the curtains, with a ruffle, is arranged with artistic effect over the mirror. The drape is fastened over the glass, the center being disposed in a rosette and fastened in the angle of the wall just below the ceiling, and rosettes are also formed at the points at each side. The drape falls to the floor and is held back a trifle at each side behind the table. A foot rest is placed in front of the table, and over it is a cover of silk that is finished at the end with tasseled fringe to correspond with that on the trunk.

At the left of the dressing table is another window curtained like the one first described. An oval cheval glass stands some distance from the window and proves at once practical and effective.

The cord slips back just as the knot is about forming, and the operator is compelled to ask another person to press it with his finger while the cord is secured. This trouble, says Country Gentleman, is saved by moistening the cord at the tying place, and then it will not slip, and the knot is easily formed without aid.

STROUDSBURG STUDIES.

Entertaining Pen Pictures of the Land of Hempen Cravals. Special to the Scranton Tribune.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., May 6.—After a great deal of discussion the authorities of the Wilkes-Barre and Eastern railroad have decided not to put up their depot near Center street, South Stroudsburg, as was reported in these columns some time ago. The building will be erected on the Storm property. Plans and specifications for the building are expected every day. As soon as they arrive the contract for erection will be given and work commenced.

Rev. S. H. Flory is now located at Rome, Bradford county, this state. James Mabius, at work in a slate quarry at Wind Gap, had a leg severely cut by a block of falling slate.

FOR A SEAMSTRESS.

A USEFUL NEEDLECASE AND UNIQUE WORKBASKET.

A Commodious Affair Which Accommodates Not Only Small Needles, but Those For Knitting, Darning and Embroidery. A Workbasket That Opens Out Flat.

The stores are full of all sorts of contrivances for holding needles, and these appeal to women who have but little time to construct their own workbasket and needlecases. Very pretty are some of these needlebooks and expensive, too.

NEEDLECASE OPEN. but there is a large class of women who do not find these ready made affairs just what they need. For women who prefer, a commodious and homelike needlecase is here described, a model originally illustrated by The Modern Priscilla. It is designed to hold knitting, netting, darning and embroidery needles of all kinds.

It may be made of linen or of java or aida canvas, a piece 20 inches wide and 19 deep being required. A lining of bright colored flannel is set inside. Two pockets of the same flannel, the under one 19, the upper 8 inches deep, are set on the lining across the bottom and are divided into narrow compartments by rows of stitching. The top is turned down 3 inches deep. The edge has a stretched braid binding all around and along the fold at the top.

Notched leaves for darning and other short needles are added at one side. The outer covering may be ornamented with a border in cross stitch embroidery of silk in two shades of the color of the lining, or it may be decorated with fancy stitching of any kind. Ribbonstrings for fastening are at the sides. When closed and tied, this needlecase presents a pretty and compact roll.

The authority quoted also illustrates a pretty workbasket which is shown opened out and flat. It can be made any size preferred, and the foundation is of postcard covered on the outside with pale blue silk and on the inside with white linen embroidered with Dresden designs in pale pinks, blues and olives. The shirred pockets are of silk and ribbon and are sewed down as indicated to take the scissors, stilette, bodkin and needlecase. The basket is tied together with pale blue ribbon set on according to the diagram.

The American Petticoat. The soft serge accustomed by silk linings and a silk shirt is sweeter than muslin to most women, and the plainest green the more elaborate the under-skirt.

The great fault of the American petticoat is that it is too long, apt to wear ragged in a short time and easily soiled. The New York Herald tells that French women wear theirs reaching only to the tops of their shoes, comprising all the mud of the streets and preserving that air of freshness which is above all things desirable. Needless to say, these skirts are a luxury.

A widow wears shawl a year. Her dresses are then trimmed with self materials in revers, collarettes, etc., edged with dull grosgrain ribbon binding, or with very narrow payette or milliner's folds of dull silk.

THE REV. W. J. WALKER'S PRAYER.

Philadelphia, Jackson Co., Mass. Dear Rev. W. J. Walker: I wish to inform you of the health of my wife. She has recovered from the use of your medicine. I must say that your "Favorite Prescription" is the best female regulator on earth; my wife has been cured by the timely use of it.

I have been using the "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Pellets," and I am fully satisfied they are all you claim them to be, and wishing you abundant success, and hoping that the Almighty God will continue His blessings toward you in your noble work, I am, Respectfully, W. J. WALKER.

Head and Arms Seemed on Fire

A Sunstroke Followed by Nervous Prostration Hood's Restored Health.

Mr. Edward Scottin Philadelphia, Pa.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "Gentlemen—On August 10, I was taken to St. Joseph's hospital unconscious from the heat; my temperature was 109. I remained in the hospital two weeks; I was unable to work for four weeks after that, but then felt compelled to turn in, as I have a wife and five children. I soon began to feel as though undergoing continuous shocks from an electric battery.

Every Nerve and Fibre of my body seemed in a constant state of quivering agitation and tremulousness. Heat flashed from the calves of my legs up through my thighs and body; my left arm and hand felt as though on fire, and my head seemed as if it would split when I stooped down. I had great pains in my back around the base of the spine. I continued to work to my work, feeling that if I must again go down I would do so.

Struggling for My Family. I have always been athletic, but I had lost all appetite, and my strength failed me; I was on the point of giving up. I had read much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and concluded to give it a trial. Before I had taken half a bottle my appetite became so voracious that I would be compelled to eat between meals.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures Hood's Sarsaparilla has now fully restored my strength and general health. That terrible nervousness is entirely gone. I feel as hearty and vigorous as ever. The pain in my back has greatly decreased." EDWARD SCOTTIN, 107 North Street, Philadelphia.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ailments, constipation, biliousness, headache, sick headache, indigestion.
