Large, indeed, was the crowd that filled the basement of St. Patrick's church yesterday afternoon to witness the commencement exercises of St. Patrick's parochial school. The spacious auditorium was decorated with choice cut flowers and draped with bunting, Chains of green leaves were Barre. wound around the supporting pillars. Three large paintings filled in the space at the back of the large platform. They were the work of Edward J. Hurst, one of the pupils. Seated in a large chair in the centre aisle was Right Reverend Bisbop O'Hars, of Scranton, and surrounding him were Rey. Fathers Whetan, Dunn, Golden, McNally and Enright. The sisters oc-cupied the seats in the front row. The medals, consistivy of an engraved gold piece attached to a blue silk rib-bon and the present of Father Whelen, were then conferred upon the successful students. A song, "What the Rob-ins Told Me," was rendered in an exand Taylor gave a piano selection en-titled "Tyroleinne Varies," using the three instruments which were on the stage. The feature of the day was the juvenile operetta, with Miss Anna Haggerty as accompanist.

COSTUMES OF THE CHILDREN.

The costumes were made to represent dragon flies, fire flies, hornets, etc., which made the production very spectacular. The king of the dragon flies was Edward Clarke; first heraid, James Mullen; second herald, James Gibbons; third herald, Mortimer Hogan; leader of the fire files, Miss Belle Flannagan; culprits, Frank McHale, and Misses Jordan and Cannon; naturalist, George Stuckart.

The five graduates again appeared and gave a recital. It was an excellent piece of work each saving in turn what study they preferred, and then defend ing it by stating its advantages. Sciences, represented by Miss Gibbons, won the day. This young lady spoke earnestly and yet exhibited all the traits of an elocusionist. Her voice

It was over thirty years since Daniel had stood before Nebuchadnezzar. He was now ninety years old, and so long had been his obscurity that Belshazzar had forgotten him; but the virtuous and regal Nitocris rememhim and suggests that he be called. He came and declared the hidden meaning to be that the king is weighed in the balance and found wanting, and that the kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persiane. The promised reward is at once given to Daniel who was made third ruler of the kingdom, which was the highest office in Belsbazzar's gift, he himself being second ruler. Miss Haggarty spokin kind and loving words of the care of the teachers and the parental eye of the priests. At the conclusion of this able address, Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Hara made a short address to the children in which he said: "On this occasion I feel a happiness after watching the proceedings. You leave the care of the good sisters and have the eye of God to watch your future life You were first sent to St. Patrick's parochial school. This was to fill your minds with knowledge for a brilliant future. You have still the path open to you. Little ones, look well before you, and in going through life be sure and do the will of your Heavenly Father." The farewell chorus was sung. The accompanists were Misses M. Larkin and McCormack. This closed the commencement, which was one of the most successful ever held by the school.

A very pretty marriage was solemnized last evening. The contracting parties were Miss. M. J. Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Anderson, of North' Summer avenue, to Edward C. Smith, of Bellevue. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents at 8 o'clock in the parlor, which was elegantly decoratea with ferns roses and overgreens. The wedding march, "Bridsl Chorus," from Lohengrin was sweetly played by Miss M. E Robinson, of Providence. The young couple wars received by Rev. D. C. Hugues, pastor of the Jackson Street Baptist church, who tied the nuptial knot under an arch of evergreens. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie E. Anderson, sister of the bride, and the best man was John W. Anderson, her brother. The bride was attired in a cream albatrons dress lady of the court, Miss Lydia Sailor; Chief Magi, David C.
