SAVAGES AHEAD OF US.

Judie Chollet Says They Know More About Sensible Clothing Than We Do.

Changeable fabrics are quite the moda still, and some of them seem to combine all the colors of a proussae cat.

The two toned diagonal woolens goods that came out last year appears to have delayes reaching its real vogue until this season, although it is now too warm for a vital interest to be felt in any except the lightest sort of worsted materials.

However, one must have something for damp weather wear, and silks, challies and satens be-

CREPON GOWN.

Some mere rags under the influence of moisture. A pretty two toned thin serge trimmed with changeable silk to match, or a neat shepherd's plaid in brown, blue and white, with brown and blue shot lining, will be found ready for general wear where lighter and more fanciful toilets would be out of place and inconvenient.

In fact, as far as absolute convenience is concerned in regard to clothing, civilization is a retrograde movement. Savages are away ahead of us and will probably always remain so in this matter, as they are, as a rule, in respect of health and physical development. Civilization under the equator amounts to very little even at this late day, and the Arctic regions are scarcely worth considering, since they are so little known and so comparatively sparsely populated. It is in the temperate zones that mankind reaches the highest degree of scientific knowledge, cultivated art and uncomfortable attire.

We are very clever, very much cultured, very progressive, but we need individually a course of desert island treatment. We require to be cast away in a solitary spot where the weather is equable, and where the bread grows on the trees, where we must spend our days roaming about like the orcs of the earth, and where an absence of candles would send us to bed at sunset. Such a return to nature might be a bore to the majority of us who have nothing of the savage lurking within us, but it would be extremely wholesome.

As a contrast to the suggested fig leaf costume, although it might be pinned in to shape with thumbs very nicely, a sketch is given of a Parisian design in rose geranium crepon. The skirt is trimmed with triangles of galuree. The round bodice is draped on the right side of the front and trimmed on the left with galuree. A garniture of ribbon adorns the left side of the gown. The sleeves reach only to the elbow.

NEWS OF WEST SIDE

Three Men Severely Burned by Gas in the Bellevue Mine.

HOW THE ACCIDENT HAPPENED

Edward Crandall Made a Bad Trade of Edward Farr's Horse at Taylor. Party Given in Honor of Miss Anna Kromer, of North Hyde Park Avenue—Old Folks' Concert Repeated. Other News Notes.

The West Side office of the SCRANTON TRIBUNE is located at 113 North Main avenue, where subscriptions, advertisements and communications will receive prompt attention.

Edward Harris, of Avenue A, Bellevue; James Walsh, of Archbald street, and a laborer named Charles, who resides on North Bromley avenue, were severely burned yesterday morning in the Bellevue mine by an explosion of gas, shortly after the miners had entered the mine to begin work. Harris was at work taking out a large portion of coal from his chamber. He had to summon aid and called upon the other two men to come and assist him. He lifted his mining lamp too close to the gas, and a large quantity of gas had accumulated, and in an instant the interior of the chamber was a mass of flames. Before the men could get to a place of safety they were badly burned. Harris was painfully burned on the hands and arms, while Kelly received serious burns about the head, face and hands. His condition is critical. The men were conveyed to their respective homes, where Dr. J. J. Roberts attended them.

TRADED HIS HORSE. The Dicker Was Not Satisfactory to Edward Farr. Edward Farr, the proprietor of an installment house on North Main avenue, was the unhappy victim of a most decided sell yesterday by having one of his horses traded for a much smaller little horse for an old skate. Mr. Farr lately took into his employ Edward Crandall. All went on very smoothly until yesterday morning, when Farr sent Crandall to Taylor with a mattress. While in Taylor Crandall became intoxicated and went around praising the merits of Farr's horse. After a while he came in contact with the Lowry brothers, the jockeys, who swapped horses with him. Soon afterward Crandall was seen driving toward this city with an animal whose faults could not be counted. When he reached the furniture store, and Mr. Farr's eyes turned in the direction of the piece of framework, he was overcome with indignation and amazement. After administering a severe lecture to his drunken workman, he turned the horse head in the direction of Taylor, with a purpose of demanding his own horse. Nothing has been heard from him since.

Creditable Commencement Exercises of St. John's School.

THE ONES WHO PARTICIPATED

A Class of Thirteen was Graduated from the Institution—Exercises Witnessed by Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Hara and a Number of Priests—Drama Given in an Excellent Manner. Other News of the Day.

So more creditable commencement exercises have occurred this year than the event of the graduating of a class of thirteen pupils of St. John's parish convent yesterday afternoon. The names of the pupils whose school life has just ended are as follows: Misses Mary S. O'Malley, Mary M. Burns, Margaret O'Donnogherty, Anna L. Coyne, Susan C. Tierney, Anna L. McDonough, Mary Killeen, Mary C. Farrell, Mary A. Riley, Julia A. Donnelly, Margaret M. McCarthy, Catherine T. Reardon and Catherine F. Riley.

The commencement exercises began at 2:30 o'clock. The church hall was packed with people, and, besides the sisters of St. John's convent and sisters from St. Cecilia's and from the Carbonele convent, there were present: Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Hara, Rev. James A. McHugh, of the cathedral; Rev. N. J. McMahon, of Providence; Rev. D. H. Green, of Mitchell; Rev. J. Curran, of Carbondale; Rev. J. J. Dunn, of Green Ridge; Rev. M. E. Lynott, of Jermy; Rev. E. J. Melley, James Moffatt and F. P. Walsh, of St. John's, and Patrick Lavelle and J. J. Mackin, students at St. Mary's Theological seminary, Baltimore.

Misses Catherine Reardon, Julia Donnelly, Anna Coyne and Anna McDonough, on two pianos played an entrance march from Sousa and the pupils of the school filed orderly upon the stage. After becoming ranged in order a greeting chorus was well sung. Miss Anna Coyne played the accompaniment. All of the pupils except the graduating class then marched off to the stage to the music of the march and the venerable bishop bestowed medals of honor upon each of the graduates. Nellie Moore, the tiny daughter of William Moore, carried the tray bearing the badge.

A silver medal for church history, merited by Misses B. Parcell, M. Boland, M. Moran, L. Haunon, N. Reardon, M. Doyle, B. Byron and Richard Kennedy and Joseph Donnelly was drawn by lot and Miss B. Byron secured the prize. A march, "Awakening of the Flowers," from Minnie, was played by Misses Parcell, Walsh, McDonough and McGee. Miss Mamie Boland recited "Our Nation's Emblem," accompanied on the piano by Misses Catherine Reardon and Julia Donnelly. The delivery of Miss Boland could hardly be excelled. She has a natural talent in this line that was accentuated by careful training and hard study. While she recited, a class of over fifty boys, who occupied the stage and were dressed in patriotic colors, went through a pantomime drill to correspond with the flexibility of Miss Boland's delivery. The "Charge of the Hussars" was played on two pianos by the same quartette of pupils and the stage was next made ready for the presentation of the opera, "The Rose of Grenada." The plot of the opera is composite with the usual style of juvenile performances. As an interim in the opera, Miss Julia Donnelly, Anna McDonough, Catherine Reardon and Anna Coyne, played a selection from Donizetti. For artistic execution nothing could surpass the work of this number.

In the opera Miss Anna McAloon as Goldenhair and Master Joseph Walsh as Little Prince Charmer carried off the honors. Miss McAloon is possessed of talent that bids fair to develop her into prominence. Next was the drama "Fabiola," taken part in by the following pupils: Fabiola (a noble Roman lady), Miss M. O'Malley; Agnes (Roman maiden, cousin to Fabiola), Miss J. Donnelly; Syra, or Miriam sister of Fabiola), Miss M. Riley; Afru, Miss M. Killoyne; Graja, Miss A. McDonough; Cecilia (blind girl), Miss A. Coyne; Fluvius (a Syrian spy), Miss F. Kane; Sebastian (Christian officer of the Imperial Guards), Miss R. Kennedy; Paterculus (a Roman senator), Miss J. Donnelly; Lucina (Mother of Paterculus), Miss K. Riley; Chorus of Virgins.

Miss Mary O'Malley, as Fabiola, the Roman lady, did herself credit. The work of Joseph Donnelly as Paterculus was also very good. Following the drama the pupils of the school filed upon the stage again and sang a valedictory chorus. The exercises will be repeated this evening and an admission fee of 10 cents will be charged.

All through the programme the tireless work of the sisters in training to the children was visible. The curly headed little girls and the white dressed young boys furnished a scene that was refreshing. The sisters of St. John's convent school and the pastor, Rev. E. J. Melley, are to be congratulated upon the progress of the pupils as exemplified in their work yesterday.

Mushrooms. The division of microscopy of the United States department of agriculture, in response to numerous requests for pamphlets, has issued a pamphlet with pictures and descriptions of edible mushrooms. In almost every section and climate are found quantities of these articles, which are little used, owing to the inability of the majority of people to distinguish the nutritious from the poisonous varieties.

Hollfranch and Siedel, who have made exhaustive investigation into the food values of mushrooms, state that many species deserve to be placed next to meat in nutrition. Every country in the world produces these fungus growths. In France they are widely cultivated in caves, frequently miles in extent. A cave at Metz contains twenty-one miles of beds and produces 3,000 pounds daily. They are also cultivated in the catacombs and quarries, and, under the name of "truffles," are sold in large quantities. They are grown in Tahiti and Japan and exported to China at the rate of 300 tons per annum.—Indianapolis Journal.

The New Version.

New York Editor—See here! Don't you know executions by electricity are the law now?

New Man—Certainly.

"Then, sir, that you mean by using this old time, chestrunty, molly quotation, 'Give a rone rope enogh and he will hang himself.' What do you mean, sir? We are not living in the Middle Ages."

"What substitue would you suggest?"

"Say, 'Let a ronee go on shocking society and he will get shocked himself.'"

—Good News.
