Epworth Leaguers and Christian Endeavorers Give Enjoyable and Successful Socials-Result of a Bar Room Brawl-Charles Hartley, the New York Ventriloquist, Gives Free Performances-News Notes.

The family of a man living on Fourteenth street, near the corner of Luzerne, has been annoyed of late by recerving annonymous letters from an individual who also pesters other people with his nefarious conduct.

The letters usually come through the mails, and occasionally are pushed under the front doors. The tenor of the unwelcome missives is of the ordinary abusive and indecent style, but some threaten injury to the family and promiss to carry out the threat without delay. Each succeeding letter has been growing more demonstrative in its expression and the folks who receive them are becoming alarmed.

Suspicion attaches to one whom it is believed is the guilty person and he is being watched. His fiendish employment may not terminate until he finds himself confronted with sufficient proof to land him in the penitentiary.

TWO ENJOYABLE SOCIAL AFFAIRS.

Epworth League and Christian Endeavor Entertainments.

The new home of Minor Worden, on North Hyde Fark avenue, which is in course of construction, was the scene of a most enjoyable affair last evening. The Simpson chapter of Epworth league of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church gave a social in the house which was tastefully decorated with Japanese ianterns. Ice cream was served and other features included to make the evening highly enjoyable.

The Christian endeavor society of the Scranton Street Baptist church held a lawn social last evening at the home of Miss Jessie Asbury on North Sumner avenue. Many guests were present. The place was beautifully iluminated with Japanese lanterns. Cake and cream were served.

AUGHT

On the Fly.

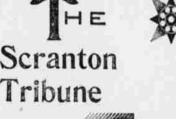

While the numerous summer resorts adjacent to and accessible from Scran ton should tend to make this city a delightful place to spend the season, housands of residents scurry away at the first puff of hot air and no more is seen of them until September. The same is true of New York, which is one of the greatest summer resorts in the world, and yet whose citizens, the first of June, fairly fall over one another in a mad scramble to get away and escape as from a pestilence. Thousands upon thousands of strangers flock into the great metropolis and in a measure fill the gap caused by the outpoor.

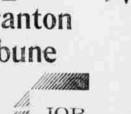

New York is hot, woefully hot, in summer, but as a tourist or pleasureseeking center it is unsurpassed. Its summer visitors during the day can choose between the great, broad Hudson river, with its palatial steamers, the breezes of the sound, or ocean trips to various nearby seaside resorts. The most popular places reached by water are West Point and Tarrytown on the Hudson; Gien Island on the Long Island sound; Long Branch, Manhat-tan Brach and Rockaway on the Atlantic coast. These water jaunts are varied by trips to the races, the only West Brighton where John Y. McKane held away, Westchester county, or Staten Island, all filled with hundreds of interesting localities. Hot! you say? Not a bit of it. It's too warm for comfort in the city, but nothing can stop the ocean, bay and sound breezes which play over the adjacent

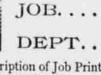

There are a thousand and one ways to pleasantly pass the evenings in the city. When the first theatre roof-garden was established some years ago, the idea jumped into such popular favor that today there are a number of them -and all are of the eminently respectable order. Here, high above the subdued din of the avenues and in an altitude conducive to cool night breezes. one can lounge at a table, talk over the day's doings, sip plain or pink lemonade, observe metropolitan life and incidentally be entertained by the best grade of variety or specialty performers. Then there are numerous theatres supplied with the latest icecooling appliances where the light and acceptable plays are given during the Charles A. Hartley, of New York summer season. Surely, when one city, the guest of Louis Howell, is the tumbles into bed at the hotel he may well known ventrilequist, and created | well exclaim "great is New York as a a large amount of amusement last evensummer resort.'

A new departure has been inaugurated at the Eric station in Port Jervis, by placing plainly marked sign cards mounted on heavy iron standards op-posite each passenger train announcing its destination. The standards upon which these signs are mounted are the invention of Trainmaster Frank Har denburg, and have two advantages over the ordinary contrivances for the purpose. They are heavy enough to resist the wind, and having a circular bottom, can be rolled from one postion to another with very little trouble.

BOYS UNDER AGE

Condition of Affairs Not the Fault of the Operators, Who Hava Been Deliberately Imposed Upon-A Serious Question from a Medical and Moral Point of View-Many Physicians Express Themselves Freely.

The article in this department of THE TRIBUNE a week ago, calling attention to the fact that many boys were employed in and about the mines of the North End who have not yet attained the age required by law, attracted much attention and was commented upon extensively. An old man, an ex-perienced miner, who has been employed in digging dusky diamonds for the greater part of his life, said to the reporter yesterday: "It makes me quite sick to see the mere children who are working in and about the mines hereabouts. The parents of these children are the ones who are to blame. Instead of sending their offspring to school, avariciousness and in some cases poverty, causes these parents to send the boys to work at a very tender age. It is not the fault of the operators, for it is no ad-vantage to them to employ these youths. They are deliberately imposed upon by parents and guardians who wilfully misrepresent the age of the boys for the purpose of securing employment for them."

"The matter is worthy of attention;

first, because there is a clear infringement of the law which states that boys under 14 shall not be employed in the mines and boys under 12 in the breakers, Notwithstanding this many boys are met returning home from work who freely confess to ages of 9, 10 and 11 years.

MEDICAL ASPECT OF CASE, From a medical point of view there is still more ground to attack the sys em, as the future of these poor boys is decided and the decision is a cruel one. Crippled in the years when their development should be free and unrestrained the effects upon their whole lives is pitiable. In mentioning the matter to some North End medical men THE TRIBUNE reporter elicited the following remarks:

Dr. Sullivan, one of the oldest prac-titioners, stated: "The employment of these little boys at such an early age and under such unhealthy conditions must tend to deter very much their physical and mental development and, I might add, moral development also. Dr. Donne: "From my professional experience among these boys, I have had every opportunity of witnessing the great harm wrought upon them in preventing the maturing of their physical and mental faculties. Their advancement is checked and as a result their employment is dangerous to their present health, and especially does it sow the seeds of disease for the future. It must be condemned from the physical aspects of the matter.' Dr. Smith: "Not only does it interfere with the present development of the boys but their future welfare as well as that of their offsprings is at stake. For example one of the first questions asked when a child is brought to a physician is the family history of (Haviland & Co. and the patient and probably a heart or lung trouble may be directly traced to Limoges makes), to abuse in the early days of the father due to inhalation of the dust of a coal breaker or lifting of heavy weights in the mine while the organs were developing. This feature alone from a physical standpoint is sufficient to condemn the employment of these little boys in the breakers and mines to say nothing from a moral point of view."
