SCRANTON, JULY 30, 1894.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

For Governor: DANIEL H. HASTINGS, OF CENTRAL.
For Lieutenant Governor: WALTER LYON, OF ALLEGHENY.
For Auditor General: AMOS E. MYLIN, OF LASCASTLE.

OUR AFTERNOON contemporary, the Truth, on Saturday announced that it had begun a civil action for damages against George P. Rowell & Co., publishers of the Journal for Advertisers, Printers' Ink, which rated the circulation of the Truth at 7,500 copies daily.

Harrison, Two Years Hence.

A Republican of national prominence, in a private letter to the editor of THE TRIBUNE, closes a discussion of possible Republican candidates for the presidency two years hence with the significant assertion, half prophetic, half dogmatic, that "General Harrison can never again be president."

It will scarcely be denied by close observers that the position now occupied before the public by the only living Republican ex-president is in many respects similar to that occupied four years ago by his old antagonist, the present executive.

If, then, such a thing has happened within such a comparatively recent period, what reason have we to doubt that it will happen again, when the beneficiary is a man so admittedly able and reputable as is Benjamin Harrison? There are qualities in General Harrison that we do not like.

Nevertheless, we are far from clear in our mind's eye how the Republican party will get around the unpleasant possibility of General Harrison's nomination. He may save it from this misfortune by peremptorily declining; but if he should choose to invite another historical repetition, a rational calculation of all the factors in the situation leads us to confess that he would have many commanding elements of strength.

Reformers Who Overreach.

The emphatic refusal of the New York convention to insert into the preamble of the proposed new constitution a deliverance against capital punishment will bring grief to many a impassioned reformer, and distress to many worthy penologists, but it is only natural.

In no other state in the Union have there been such uncalculated mawkishness and simpering idiocy in the treatment of red-handed criminals as have characterized the Empire state effort to abolish the death penalty.

been deluged with bouquets, or smothered with perfumed missives of sympathy and affection. Fraternalism, with their garments yet dripping with the blood of their unprotected victims, have been lionized by autograph hunters or tendered ovations by weak-kneed male sisters of misplaced mercy.

The writer of these lines is not at all certain in his own mind that hanging or shocking a man to death will cure murder. He is beginning to entertain doubts of the efficacy of capital punishment. But, doubts or no doubts, he has no use for the sobbing sentimentality that idolizes brutes of the lowest bipedal type; and it is no doubt this lachrymose tendency in the opposition to the death penalty that has spurred the New York constitutional reformers to sit down heavily upon the proposed change.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill have finally consented to the expenditure of $160,000 for seeds to be distributed by members of congress among their constituents.

"COMPULSORY" ARBITRATION will, of course, not receive its vitality from some form of physical force which shall bring the two parties to a dispute and chug them involuntarily into a compromise.

Turn on the Hose.

The announcement is made that a commission of Hawaiian royalists, one of whose members is the notorious ex-minister of foreign affairs whose relations with the dusky deposed potentate, Liliuokalani, have, if correctly reported, constituted a disgrace upon the nineteenth century, is headed toward Washington with a petition from the unsavory ex-queen to her "great and good friend," President Cleveland, begging him not to recognize the republican government which has been erected on the ruins of her despotism.

The approach of such an embassy to Washington, in this warm summer time, would under any circumstances be a subject for indignant protest. There is already an abundance of malodorous scandal, shame and corruption in the capital of these United States, without the addition thereto of a foreign subject which combines grievous public error with shocking individual filth.

That one barrier is the humiliating fact that their unwelcome approach has been logically invited by the unpatriotic and obstinate course of the president of the United States. He, and he alone, has brought this infelicity upon us. He, and he alone, should meet and avert it. He should tell the notorious Parker and his fellow envoys that when he, as chief executive, made the promise of material assistance to the bloodthirsty Liliuokalani, and ratified it to the full extent of his ability by the recall of Minister Stevens, the dispatch of Paramount Commissioner Blount and the later appointment of the intriguing Willis, charged with a mission of perfidy and double dealing; he acted without warrant of law and without authority in fact.

Dishonest Southern Chivaliers.

It is a good thing for the Democratic chivaliers that representation in congress is not based on industrial importance, else the fifteen southern states which now wag the Democratic dog would cast less than 32 votes altogether in senate and house, instead of the 126 votes now cast by them in the house and the 30 votes in the senate. We base this estimate upon the statement made by Galusha A. Grow at Easton the other day that these fifteen states have capital invested in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits to the amount of $519,000,000, while the state of Pennsylvania alone has $919,000,000.

We do not allude to this industrial supremacy of our own commonwealth in a boastful or exultant spirit. The industrial poverty of the South has been occasioned by causes which would, under corresponding circumstances, have devastated other sections, east, west or north. Upon the eve, as it is, of a new era of development and enrichment, we should not wish to see so much as a single straw laid in the South's pathway, to impede its revivification. The intelligent people of the north, without exception, rejoice with their Southern fellow citizens in every new indication that comes to them of increasing thrift and wealth; and would willingly aid that progress by all honorable means, both through private investment and wise national legislation.

At the same time the circumstance of these southern states that possess a mere fraction of the industries of the country and a yet smaller percentage of the loyal and intelligent citizenship of the country, exercising congressional domination over the entire north and west, and using that unfair apportionment of power, not to uphold the industries of the country in any section, not even within their own borders, but using it to cripple and strike down those industries, in a spirit of determination, which looks suspiciously like malevolence, is too anomalous to be passed over.

IT IS EXPLAINED by Senator Murphy's Troy newspaper that the reason it wants "Bat" Shea pardoned is because it is opposed to capital punishment; but, if that's its only motive, it seems to us it could have picked out a better subject of its maudlin sympathy.

AT THE Pie Counter.

Chemists, Germany, has successfully abolished the unsightly trolley pole. The new means of stringing electrical wires in that enterprising Teutonic city is by ornamental rocket fastened to the wood-work or walls of houses having projecting hooks to which the wires are attached. These hooks are firmly fastened and are secured with conductor's screws. They will be called upon to bear. Owners of houses without exception preferred to allow the use of their houses free rather than have poles on the sidewalk.

THE THIRLED HIM.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the sonful young woman, "that you have never yet met the woman whose presence and touch thrilled your whole being in an utterly indescribable manner?"

When thunder storms prevail a great many people wonder whether it is safe to ride on trolley cars or on the street cars that the overhead wires and general electric makup of the coaches must be insulated to safety.

TWO HEROES:

"How big was Alexander, Pa. That people call him great? Was he like old Goliath, tall, His spear a hundred weight?"

"Oh, no, my son; not quite so large, I think it's safe to say, As was the hero that we saw Conduct the game today."

There was a free-for-all fight near Bernstadt, Ky., on the Fourth, in which one man was killed and others wounded. The account of the affair, as reported by the Mountain Echo, published at the place, reminds the Louisville Courier-Journal of the amusing testimony given by an old lady concerning another fight which occurred some time since at her house near Manchester, in which three or four persons were killed.

They were scarce: It was a lovely day. Fleecy clouds floated lazily across the field of vision, while over and over a seagull swooped down from the sky.

"Dearest," faltered the man in the buff shirt, "will you love me always?" A sigh of petulance struggled a moment in her swelling heart, fluttered to her lips and died there.

FOR DELEGATE ELECTIONS.

Appointments of Republican Representatives Among the Various Districts.
Parliament to a meeting of the Republican County committee held on July 14th, 1894. The County Convention will be held on Tuesday, September 4th, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., in the court house at Scranton, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following named offices, to be voted for at the next general election to be held November 6th, 1894:

Table listing delegates for various districts: Archibald borough, 1st ward, 2d ward, etc. Total 185.

J. W. BROWNING, Secretary.

Do not be deceived. The following brands of White Lead are still made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion. They are standard, and always strictly pure.

White Lead

The recommendation of "Atlantia," "Beymer-Bauman," "Jewett," "Davis-Chambers," "Finstock," "Armstrong & McKelvy," to you by your merchant is an evidence of his reliability, as he can sell you cheap ready-mixed paints and bogus White Lead and make a larger profit. Many short-sighted dealers do so.
