GORMAN'S GRAND DEPOT

SEX AMONG DIAMONDS.

A New York Jeweler Discovers About a Tray of Precious Gems. In the big show window of a jewelry store rested last week a small tray that gathered a crowd of curious spectators to the window. Every time the sunlight played upon the plate glass the tray resounded with prismatic hues of dazzling brilliancy. The tray is well known to the trade. It is designed to display the remarkable variations of the color of large African mine diamonds, and contains examples of all the colors known. It possesses great interest for novices in gems, and the jeweler is called upon half a dozen times a day to explain the beauties of the specimens. "It took a long time to get this collection together," the jeweler said, "and it is the only one in the town of the kind thus arranged. You see here the brown diamond, the green, the pink, the rose and the white and the green diamond. The effect of these combinations in the sunlight is entrancing. Each predominant hue seems to impart a distinct lustre to the prismatic scintillations. When the tray is swung to and fro in the sunbeams, it gives forth, as you see, a perfect blaze of rainbow colors. These gems also illustrate different cuttings of the diamonds. Were they all set in a bracelet, or a brooch, or a necklace, they would make a rarely beautiful trinket, but it would cost a heap of money! "The jeweler picked out one sparkler with a pair of diamond tweezers and held it forward in the show window. "This is a Brazilian gem," he said, "like which there is only one other in the world, in Paris, and the French one is not as pure or as large as this. This is what is called a black diamond, and is valued at $2,500. It weighs a trifle less than four carats. Its beauty lies in the fact that it changes its color in different lights. In this strong sunlight you see it is almost black. It gives forth a prismatic radiance greater than that emitted by the best of the black gems. In daylight, you observe, the black hue becomes a rich golden brown, and the play of colors is changed too. Diamonds of this sort are regarded by the superstitious miners as 'gold stones,' that is, gems possessing a power of imparting good luck to the owner in the search for hidden gold. This stone was secured in Paris, whither it was brought in rough for cutting by a Rio Janeiro merchant. "Here," continued the jeweler, "is another curiosity." He picked up a three carat white stone with the tweezers. "This is a specimen that will prove to you that there is a difference of sex in gems. This is what is called the female, a multiplying diamond. "He held the gem under a strong magnifying glass and pointed to four or five smaller diamonds clustered about one of the facets at the edge of the table of the stone. "The male gem," the jeweler said, "is sharp pointed and never gathers these embryonic gems. There is a fine specimen alongside that pink stone. It surprises most people who see these specimens to be told that they are of different sex as well as color, but such is the fact."—Jewelers' Review. The Unpardonable Sin. Chollie (desperately)—I'm on me beam ends, me dear boy. I must either steal some money or blow out me brains. Bertie—But that would be—ah—committing a crime, wouldn't it? Chollie—Crimel! That don't matter, me boy. Dollie (decidedly)—But it will be bad fawn, dear fellow. Chollie—Too true! That settles it. No stealing or suicide for me.—Pittsburg Bulletin. Mr. and Mrs. William Deasche, of Gold Britton, have returned from an extended visit with friends in Danmore and Scranton. A lively session of the council was held on Tuesday evening. The members present were President Lane and Messrs. Caffrey, Blake, Jones and Lewis. The president reported regarding an application for right of way over Church, Monroe and Bridge streets was asked by the Lackawanna Transit company, and they decided to let the matter rest until a later meeting. Daniel Atkinson complained of the unsanitary condition of Monroe street near his residence, and the street commissioner was directed to attend to it. The street commissioner's time amounting to $290 was ordered paid, as was also the interest on the borough bonds. The payment of the appropriation of $500 for the repair of the Kings road provoked a warm discussion, the president refusing to entertain a motion directing the secretary to draw an order for the amount. The president, who is also a member of the road committee, objected principally because he was not consulted when the contract for the repairing of the road was awarded. The other members of the committee disclaimed any intention of ignoring the president, but explanations were unavailing. After a hot discussion the motion was put and was finally adopted. Dr. Van Dorn stated that the board of health had complied with the borough attorney's opinion relative to the fixing of the salaries of the collector and the secretary and health officer, $35 each, were ordered paid. The bills of the auditors, $5 each, were also ordered paid. The excursion to the regatta at Lake Ariel on Tuesday from this vicinity was not so well attended as its promoters expected. We estimated that a large number of our people spent a pleasant day at the lake. There have been so many excursions from here during the past few weeks that it is not surprising that the excursion of Tuesday was not better attended. Mr. Dennis Blake, of Hill street, still continues to be seriously ill.

Maggie Linney is at Lake Winola for a few weeks. Barney McMill, conductor, and Alexander McElcaine, motorman, have returned to duty on the Taylor line. Both are popular and esteemed young men. Willie Stone played the greatest game at short stop of any person seen in that position at the game on Monday between the Electrics and Brown, J. G. Olynpat. His pickups and catches sent the large audience wild, and it would be to the Electric's benefit to continue him in this position. Taylor board of health is now on its high horse and in its deliberations it proposes to get rid of Hewitt's bone factory.

Priceburg.

Thomas McArthur, a well-known resident of this town, has been awarded the contract to sink Richmond's air shaft on the Carter estate in Providence. That the work is in safe and experienced hands is without a doubt, and we wish Mr. McArthur the best of luck in his undertaking. A girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rhea of Albert street on Monday. Richard Smith of Harriet street, was slightly injured at the Richmond breaker on Tuesday. F. H. Hollister of Trenton, N. J., called on friends in town yesterday. In justice to the engineer at the Jermyrna shaft, where the slight fire occurred last Saturday, we wish to state that it was not an overheated journal which caused the fire, as stated by the Republican. There is no machinery where the fire was located, and it originated from a spark which fell from a lamp as a carpenter was using white working in the tower a short time before the fire broke out. Mrs. Cecilia Dougher, of Bald Mount, was the guest of Mrs. Charles Gordon, of Dickson, during the week. A few good fishermen will find employment in Dickson, to Mr. and Mrs. John Gilliam, who has been ailing for some time, was forced to resign his position as engineer at Jermyrna breaker on account of his health.

Many old veterans of this place attended the seven-county reunion at Farview yesterday. A man at the corners' who thought it was smart to yell mean and insulting remarks at pedestrians was severely handled by one of the latter last evening, and needless to say the bystanders applauded the righteous indignation of the one who administered the chastisement. Editor Woodward, of the Pioneer, is erecting a large building. Mr. Philip Davis will spend today at Hawley. Mrs. W. W. Fay died at her home on Dudley street yesterday forenoon. Going Down the Outside of a Building.

A crowd of Madison square promenade was earnestly contemplating the northern wall of the Hotel Bartholdi Tuesday. This is what they saw: A gentleman in a red blazer was coming down a rope hand over hand with the agility of a sailor or a South American monkey. He was an athletic young man with a blond mustache and blue eyes, and every movement of his limbs and body indicated strength. The crowd held its breath as the young man descended. When the venturesome athlete reached the sidewalk he was seen to stagger. But he held to an iron railing, and about eight or ten men who were looking from the window above. "I'll bet you I can come up the same way!" There was no response. The crowd closed around the athlete. He gazed around at the faces of his audience and then turned and went into the side door of the hotel. The four heads above disappeared from view. The crowd slowly dispersed under the direction of a park policeman. The rope disappeared. It was hauled into the seventh story window. All was quiet on Twenty-third street. The red blazer gentleman was a prominent young Canadian, returned from England, where he has been playing on the Canadian football team. He arrived in New York a week ago, and has been celebrating his return ever since. He considered the Bartholdi episode a lunge, and said he could have climbed back again with ease.—New York Advertiser.

A Remarkable Fish Tree.

At the dark store of Mr. J. M. Sprague in St. Paul there is a thrifty fish tree four years old and perhaps five feet high, which came up spontaneously in a tub which contained no soil. The only way in which its young appearance is accounted for is that it grew from seeds of fish which had been fed to a canary whose cage hung over the tub. But the most perplexing part of the problem rests on the fact that the fish were preserved. Will seeds of preserved fish retain their germinating properties? Sometimes, perhaps.—St. Louis Magazine.

To Make the Hair Grow.

The hair found on his table the other day a sentence of death against the emperors of all the empires, to be carried out in 24 hours. It was stamped by "The Society For the Liberation of the Russians," and it was impossible to discover how it had found a place on the czar's table. A few days later the czar found a skull in one of the bedrooms, on the frontal bone of which was written "Alexander."
