

What Shall I Get to Wear This Fall?

We know what a momentous question this is, and to help the ladies in just such a dilemma is one of the reasons why we are in business.

For the past several months we have been busy and earnest with all the power of capital, brains and selections at our command in bringing you THE BEST GOODS WE CAN GET AT THE LEAST POSSIBLE PRICES.

OUR FALL GOODS of every description, both stylish and handsome, gives our store a pretty look, and we are ready for the early buyers. ALL SUMMER GOODS LEFT WILL BE SOLD AT UNHEARD OF PRICES and we intend to keep busy as ever by offering the SEASONABLE GOODS AT LOW PRICES.

An inspection of Our Offering will convince you that never before has such artistic combinations of color and texture been displayed, and that we have not been idle during the summer months.

The Present Merchandise moment is not a spasm. It is a permanent change in our system. THE LOSSES we will look after; you can attend to the GAINS.

NOT A WEEK, hardly a day passes, without New Styles coming to the front, and worthy of your most careful attention. We could not afford to have anything that people would not admire. OUR REPUTATION AS RETAILERS OF FIRST-CLASS GOODS is at stake and this is the spur that keeps urging us on to get new and better goods at even more reasonable prices than ever before.

The object of our establishment is to fix in the public mind such quotations as these, which we are prepared to answer at our store:

Where can I get this or that? Where can I match this? Where can I get the latest? Where can I get the best of everything? Where are the prices the lowest?

Reunion of the One Hundred and Forty-Third Regiment at Montrose.

LARGE ATTENDANCE OF VETERANS

Excursion Trains Over the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Well Filled with Old Soldiers and Their Friends—Eloquent Addresses by Hon. Galusha A. Grow, Hon. T. V. Powderly and Others—Officers Elected.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

MONROE, Pa., Sept. 4. TODAY was the first of the three days' re-union and encampment of the Susquehanna county veterans and the re-union of the One Hundred and Forty-third regiment. The day was particularly devoted to the latter body, and when the programme was finished it was the general opinion of officers and members that the re-union was one of the most enjoyable in the history of similar affairs of the regiment. This statement is particularly true when applied to the speechmaking of the afternoon, when a scene of unbridled enthusiasm ensued following the addresses of Galusha A. Grow, congressman-at-large from Pennsylvania, and T. V. Powderly, of Scranton. Today witnessed the latter's first visit to Montrose, but was the second time he had addressed the regiment, he having been made an honorary member at Tankhannock last year.

The 9 o'clock train from Scranton today included three extra coaches containing members of the regiment, their families and friends. They arrived in Montrose at 11 o'clock on a special train from Alfred and were met at the station by a band, mounted escort and detachment of veterans. At Montrose they were welcomed to and given the freedom of the town by Burgess H. C. Jessup. Following a dinner tendered by Company H. of the One Hundred and Forty-third, the regiment was escorted to Camp R-3000 and enjoyed several hours of such rousing and patriotic speech making as it has seldom been their lot to hear.

Following a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Wise, chaplain of the regiment, the roll-call was read and freedom to the camp given by Captain H. F. Boardley in brief but happily selected remarks. An original poem entitled "The Soldier's Last Good-bye," dedicated to the regiment and read by the author, D. M. Jones of Wilkes-Barre, completed the introductory programme.

MR. GROW'S ADDRESS.

It was nearly 3:30 o'clock when Galusha A. Grow was introduced by Capt. P. DeLoach as "the man who had given blood for the Union," a reference to his knock-down blow administered a Southern legislator at Washington. This allusion and the appearance of Mr. Grow before the audience was the signal for tumultuous applause, which continued during his address. Mr. Grow, contrary to the custom of many speakers on similar gatherings made but few allusions to present times or the time-worn soldier who had fought and bled for his country; he cited the release from tyrannical governments of the days of Rome and Greece and described the westward trend of freedom and patriotism until the present day. His speech was one of the most masterly efforts in that direction made in the confines of Susquehanna county.

General E. S. Osborne, the next speaker, mentioned Mr. Grow as having been known to him almost since the day of his birth as a patriotic, good man—a man who would die for his nation and who had imbedded himself in the hearts of his countrymen. The people of Susquehanna county had been asleep for twenty years, but awakened and carried Mr. Grow to Congress and placed him on the road to the presidency. At this point in General Osborne's address the enthusiasm of the crowd broke into deafening cheers, and the sight of a large American flag swung by a veteran to and fro beneath the speakers' stand was but the signal for a continuation of the shouts for a considerable period.

MR. POWDERLY'S GRACEFUL TRIBUTE.

T. V. Powderly, of Scranton, prefaced his remarks by a tribute to Mr. Grow as the man who had best back treason in its vile infancy and who had said and did what no man at that time dared to say and do. If we can elect this man president we shall confer no honor upon him, but we shall confer an honor upon the American people. "If Washington," said Mr. Powderly, "is first in the hearts of his countrymen, Mr. Grow is first in the hearts of this nation. In this crowd today there listens to my voice a great grandchild of a man who occupied the platform with Mr. Grow at Carbondale years ago. The father of the homestead law is older in years but as keen and active in mind now as he was then."

Mr. Powderly spoke favorably toward attaching honorary members to the One Hundred and Forty-third Veteran organization, whereby its memory and deeds might be perpetuated. He mentioned as a fact which his hearers would not deny, "that the Union needs no more armies if it can have soldiers of peace." He sarcastically alluded to Hoke Smith as the man who one year ago was lopping off pensions for limbs lopped off in his own state, and who today was kissing and caressing the soldiers in the hopes of future votes. The soldiers should keep their eyes upon the affairs of state and not shirk their duty—they should be enthused with the spirit of thirty years ago. At the conclusion of the speeches Mr. Grow was nominated as an honorary member of the One Hundred and Forty-third regiment by O. E. Vancich. His election was unanimous and a regi-

Yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Rose church, occurred the marriage of Mrs. Teresa Swartz and John J. Kennedy. The church was well filled to witness the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Thomas F. Coffey. The bride was Miss Katie Butler and the groom's best man was his cousin, John Collins. After the ceremony the bride and groom were driven to the home of the bride's mother on Dundaff street, where a wedding breakfast was served and an informal reception was given. Mrs. C. D. Richards, of Scranton, was the only guest present from out-of-town. At 11 o'clock the newly wedded couple took their departure on a ten days' wedding tour. Upon their return they will take up their residence in the Dugan building, No. 20 South Main street.

The Erie and Wyoming Valley railroad has this week added two new and handsome locomotives to their already model equipment, while several others are in course of construction. Both engines are of the massive order of construction, much in vogue by all the large railroads at the present time, and are models of mechanical ingenuity and skill. The one built by the Baldwin Locomotive works, of Philadelphia, is a combined freight and passenger locomotive, and weighs sixty-five tons. This weight rests on six drive wheels, fifty-seven inches in diameter, receiving power from three 17 by 24 inch cylinders. It is furnished with all modern improvements essential to strength and speed, and has demonstrated its ability to "get there" with a train that is surprisingly heavy when the Erie and Wyoming Valley railroad's grades are taken into consideration. Although the work on this machine was done by another company, the design was that of Charles F. Anker, the Erie and Wyoming Valley's efficient draughtsman, according to the patent of John R. Smith, president of the company. Among the most noticeable features is the tank, which rests on six wheels instead of the usual eight or two trucks, and the steel cast, which is an innovation in locomotive building. This last feature tends to give the whole an heavier appearance. The number of this new engine is 35 and in all probability its principal labor will consist of excursion work. The other locomotive is the No. 2 and was built at the Erie and Wyoming Valley Railroad company's No. 6 shops. It is like the 35, but with smaller cylinders, is a consolidated type and weighs within a few tons of what the 35 does. The latter engine will be used in the coal service. Both locomotives are neatly decorated and their construction and general finish reflect on their designers and builders with much credit.
