OUR SCHOOLS REOPEN

Large Attendance Reported from All Portions of the City.
CHANGES IN TEACHING FORCE
 James Hughes Will Act as a Substitute for Professor W. George Powell, Who is Ill—Some of the Transfers That Were Made in Rearranging the Force of Instructors. Big Class at High School.

Yesterday, the first day of the new school year, witnessed an increase in attendance in proportion to the increase during years past. Superintendent Phillips at his office received during the day reports from nearly all the schools and in many cases it was said that the buildings would not accommodate the scholars.

According to the reports No. 33 school had ten applications above its capacity and No. 12, the new Dodge-town school, No. 18, of the Fourth ward, and No. 10, of the Nineteenth ward, were similarly taxed beyond their capacity. The schools of the central city were generally more largely attended than those of the South Side and North End. Nearly all the Hyde Park buildings are filled.

In discussing the large attendance Superintendent Phillips averred that the circumstances might be compared to the first election returns in their uncertainty. Many scholars, he said, after only a day's attendance fail to return, the majority of them entering only out of curiosity or in a spirit of fun. Principals and teachers are apt to be flustered on the first school day, and are more inclined to over-estimate than under-estimate the crowds. After tomorrow he thought the reports would be more normal and he did not believe that any would have to be re-admitted from lack of accommodations.

CHANGES OF TEACHERS.
 Changes in the assignments of teachers have been numerous. Mrs. E. J. Williams, formerly Miss Potter, of No. 18, and Miss Zilda J. Stevens, of No. 35, have resigned. Professor J. F. Judge and Miss Agnes Kelly were deposited, and Professor Powell and Miss M. Louise Williams, both of No. 14, have resigned, owing to ill health. James Hughes, a last year's graduate of Bucknell, has been temporarily engaged as principal of No. 14. Professor H. L. Morgan, of No. 33, may eventually be appointed to Professor Powell's old school, in which case Mr. Hughes will be transferred to No. 32. David Owens is assuming Miss Williams' position at No. 14 until the latter's health will permit her return. Miss Alice Evans, of No. 11, and Miss Bessie Williams, of No. 21, have exchanged rooms. The following other transfers have been made: Miss E. Evans from No. 31 to No. 18; Mrs. D. Kunas to No. 31; Miss Norma Nichols from No. 31 to No. 15; Miss B. Judge to No. 11; Miss Bina Langran from No. 17 to No. 31; Miss Minnie Gibbons to No. 17; Miss May Powell to No. 24, succeeding Miss Kelly; Miss Lillian O'Donnell to No. 23, succeeding Professor Judge; Mrs. Mary Tierney to No. 29; Miss Clara Neimeyer to No. 45, succeeding Miss Stevens. The Bellevue teachers have been re-engaged as follows: Professor Henry Kemmerling, Misses Phillips, Pries Watkins and Evans.

The high school next year will have the largest graduation class in its history if the fifty-six members enrolled successfully pass the examinations.

John McFalls Fall in Converting Department of South Mill.

John Moffat, of 333 Ninth street, engaged as an assistant to the vessel men at the South works, fell from the edge of a plank and the converters last night, fatally wounding him with no greater accident than a broken ankle and a fractured wrist. Moffat's fall under ordinary circumstances is enough to kill a man. It is not rightly known how he met with the accident, but it is supposed that he walked too close to the edge of the vessel floor and stepped upon the end of a loose plank that projected too far and he fell to the ground.

The Moses Taylor ambulance was summoned and he was conveyed to the hospital. The doctors estimate that his injuries will confine him for six weeks.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Under this heading short letters of interest will be printed when accommodations for publication by the writer's name. THE TRIBUNE will not be held responsible for opinions here expressed.

TALLIE MORGAN REPLIES.

Editor of THE TRIBUNE:—In this morning's TRIBUNE Professor George B. Carter's criticisms on a part of my letter in last Saturday's Truth, I feel that Handel, Haydn, Beethoven and all the rest mentioned by Mr. Carter's catalogue, should arise and tender this eminent musician and the Albright field himself a ghostly vote of thanks for as shy denouncing their music from an imaginary attack conceived and born of Mr. Carter's overworked brain.

If it were not for the fact that my most shabby and scathing friend, George, had totally misrepresented the intent of my words in the Truth, I should have, as in the past, permitted him to occupy the Albright field himself, and got all the glory and notoriety out of it he desired.

Mr. Carter begins his letter by quoting from me as a whole sentence a part of a sentence, which, if only half a truth, and as some say, the worst kind of a lie. Here is his quotation: "While the music of the great composers is a grand study, it is more the music of the head than of the heart."

What I said was: "While the music of the great composers is a grand study, yet it is more the music of the head than of the heart, and does not reach the masses."

You see, the last part of the sentence shows that I was discussing the relation of music to the masses and not to the musicians, but Mr. Carter very shrewdly omitted that part of the sentence. In order to make the case clear to the reader, I will here give the whole paragraph as printed in the Truth:

"During one of my talks with Mr. Stebbins, he called my attention to one peculiar fact: Nearly all of the best known gospel song writers and singers were all born in the same part of the nation, at least within a radius of two or three hundred miles. Take Philip Phillips, James McDaniel, Sankey, Scribner, G. S. Kendall, H. B. Palmer, C. C. Case, Professor Towler, P. P. Bliss. It is impossible to account for this fact, but it is strangely true. There are musicians who like to sit their staves out on the edge and pose as lovers of 'Wagner,' and the masters who declare that the work of these gifted men is simply 'trash,' and does not reach the masses of the people. The music of these gospel hymns of our other hand has reached the great heart of the people and has cheered them in hours of affliction, supported them in times of grief, delivered them from sorrow, and then lifted up into a higher, purer, better atmosphere. Eternity alone can measure the good and grand work that has been done by the devoted gospel song writers and singers, and no amount of 'education' will educate the people away from their music."

I say very plainly that the music of the masters is a grand study and since music of the head before the heart and emotions can not be reached by the study of the other hand, the simple melodies and effective words of Gospel hymns reach the heart without any musical study on the part of the singer and listener. Last Sunday night, in the meeting held in the Young Men's Christian Association hall, after the close of the great meeting held in the Frothingham hall, while a crowd of four or five hundred men singing very softly, sang "My God, to Thee," fifty men arose in response to Mr. Moody's question if they would become Christians, and firmly said "I Will." Of what value would have been one of Beethoven's sonatas or a selection from one of the great oratorios at this point? Thousands upon thousands of people have been converted and the ministrations of Mr. Moody, and he says that as much credit is due to the singing of these Gospel hymns, which are not music, according to Mr. Carter, as to the music of the masters.

"Marching Through Georgia," is not a classical song by a gun shot, but the rebel's fear of it more than a battle cry, for it was in his mind as a war, it was a derelict amount of inspiration from its stirring strains, and many a battle was won under its magic influence. And even now, thirty years after the war, its strains will awaken the most intense enthusiasm. This feeling, Mr. Carter from his imaginary height of knowledge, judges to be of the same order as experienced by the Indians in the war dance he witnessed in Dakota.

Mr. Carter asks me if he knows the flavor of a peach until he tastes it. When a man asks me a civil question I always try to give him a civil answer. You can "know" the flavor of a peach without tasting the peach by going to any of the grocers in the city and asking them to ask me that question? TALLIE MORGAN.
