Here we cannot refrain from noticing the unfortunate circumstance that while the infortunate circumstance that while President Cleveland is electrifying the country with his stirring appeals, his secretary of the treasury, Mr. Carlisle, is engaged in a laberious effort to explain away a charge accusing him of having been in suspiciously confidential intercourse with the sugar trust. We are willing to put the most favorable construction upon what the secretary has to say for himself, but the fact is undeniable that the public utterances of Mr. Carlisle as well as the terances of Mr. Carlisle, as well as the part he took in framing the sugar legislaion in the senate tariff bill, were uni formly far more calculated to help the interests of the sugar trust than to hurt them. At the moment when President Cleveland sounds his bugle note against the corrupt despotism of the trust it is, to say the least, deplorable that we should see a secretary of the treasury at his side whose character is not high enough and whose position is not clear enough wholly to relieve him of the necessity of making any explanations concern-ing his fidelity to the aims of his chief.
