WELCOME TO SINGERS

You may go out driving, turn a corner and come across The Red Cow (an inn) Further on you out across the Silver Scissors. Then you may pass one called The Dribblings and another the Jug and Bottle.

It is surprising how close to one another the towns are, here in Wales. Every road and street is labeled distinctly and often, so that one can never lose oneself at all.

There are cisterns going on all the time over here, somewhere or other. Last week there was a tremendous one somewhere near Treorby, I think the name was. It was held in an immense tent like a circus tent, pitched out in a large field, and was attended by choirs, soloists and bands from all the towns within a radius of twenty-five and thirty miles.

There was an immense crowd there. The competitors were very good, some of them, especially that between brass bands, several of which were magnificent. As for the voices which competed on the solos, there were no remarkable ones, save the tenor, who was excellent.

For my part, I think the average American voice is in every case as good as and in some cases better than the average Welsh voice, or English voice, or voice of any other nationality, for that matter.

Since I have left home my admiration and respect for the average American soloist has gone up fifty per cent and it never was low, even before. We are not behind any people and indeed greatly in advance of the majority of people, I am sure, in everything. How glad I am that I belong to the Stars and Stripes.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. Apropos of the Stars and Stripes, how funny it seems, when a concert is ended, to sing "God Save the Queen." Instead of going off the stage at the end of the last quartet, we stand still while Professor Evans motions to the key in which it is sung, and as we start to sing "God Save the Queen" all the people get up and stand with bared heads till it is finished, and then go out. It makes me think of the dogology.

A young pianist was telling me last evening an amusing incident in which he was involved while traveling in America, where he was the piano soloist of a very fine musical organization a few years ago. He said that he had the "last number on the programme, had finished, and, without thinking where he was, he stepped off and struck boldly into "God Save the Queen," when, happening to look up, he saw the eyes of several of his company fixed upon him with something like a twinkle and recollected that he was not now in the United Kingdom.

He stopped in dire confusion, made his bow and escaped from the stage in disgrace. SADIE E. KAISER.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS. The Glamorgan Free-Press of Sept. 15 says: On Monday evening last, our American friends, the Cambro-American Concert company, under the able guidance of Professor Haydn Evans (who steered the "Scranton" choir to victory at Chicago for the $1,000 prize, and who, undoubtedly, is the youngest conductor in the world), opened their tour of concerts through Wales at Treherbert. It was very disconcerting to see the large hall only half filled, and to see the state of trade in the upper part of the valley solely accounted for it.

Professor Evans presided at the pianoforte. Besides Mr. Evans, the company included superior artists in the following persons: Mr. Joseph P. Burns (winner of the baritone solo at the World's fair estedford); Miss Sadie Kaiser (who appeared on the American stage with our old favorite, the Welshman and Welsh singer, Mr. Ben Davies, and also Mr. Watkins Mills); Miss Julia C. Allen (who is the most celebrated violinist; Miss Corbelle Freeman, a most beautiful contralto; and Mr. James W. Anwyll, a sweet and pure tenor, with a good compass. The concert was opened by the company singing the Welsh national quartet, "Over the Dark Blue Waters." The applause was sufficient to show that the audience were impressed by the singing of the "New World" wanderers. Mr. Burns then favored with a most artistic and delightful rendering of "The Skipper" (Jude), for which he was loudly applauded. The audience was held spell-bound by a violinist (material was sex) they were so when Miss J. C. Allen came next with her "Violin Valse de Concert" (by Musini). The excellent and beautifully finished execution brought forth the applause of all. The lady was compelled to respond, and, with our old favorite, the Welshman and Welsh singer, Miss Kaiser and Freeman now sang "Harpe of the Winds" (Abt) in a very nice manner. An old carnavar boy, but now an American man, next appeared with Adams' "Holy City," which the audience rightly appreciated, and Mr. Anwyll favored with a Welsh song for which he was vociferously applauded. The company sang the Welsh national violin solo, "Gavatina." She was again encored. Truthfully speaking, playing in such a masterful way as she does, nothing but thunderous applause can be expected. Miss Kaiser's turn came next. This lady not only possesses a most remarkable volume and compass of voice, but also the irresistible style of "staging," which wins the approbation of every one in the audience. She sang Bishop's "Lo! Hear the Gentle Lark," almost indistinguishably beautiful. It is without doubt, one of the hardest soprano solos ever composed, but it was mastered by Miss Kaiser. Too much praise cannot be given to her. The audience was so enraptured that they insisted on having the last part repeated. Miss Allen again scored heavily on "Kujwiak"
