Table listing various goods and their prices, including Best Flour, Best Pastry, Feed, Corn, Ham, Bacon, Fresh Eggs, Butter Crackers, Diamond Oyster, Chopped Tomatoes, White Wax Beans, 30 lb. Pall Jelly, 20 lb. Pall Preserves, Bristol Shoe Brush, and Bigby's Blacking.

Every article in the above list is warranted strictly first class in every respect.

We only mention a few figures but will state that all our prices are very low and will be kept so during the remainder of 1894.

There are a few things that we wish to speak of specially, first of these "Our Best" brand of flour of which we are selling about 1,000 barrels and sacks a month and hearing nothing but most favorable reports from all sources.

Then our Tea Department is worthy of mention, we have the finest line of teas that is possible to get together. Our garden growth teas at 85c per pound are a thing of beauty and a joy forever. We also have a package tea at 30c, a pound with a splendid solid nickel spoon in each pound, this is a decided bargain. We think we have the largest retail coffee trade of any store in the state. Nothing has built up this big trade but the excellence of our coffees and the low figures at which we sell them.

In confectionery we always have a fine stock of fresh, pure candies and as in all other departments at very low prices.

And last but not least our butcher shop is worth the price of admission in itself, always well stocked with the very best grade of meats at prices about 25 per cent. below regular rates. Remember our new delivery plan is in operation now—all orders going out as soon as received.

WELSH SCENES AND INCIDENTS

and took dinner, and from there on to Aberdare, passing through the town and past Lord Aberdare, which are very fine places indeed. On we went through Aberdare park, up the mountain roads, till we reached the delightful little Black Horse inn, at the top of the mountain, where we took bread and cheese and tea, and then we rolled back again through the delightful scenery to Mountain Ash, where we had supper, and after that a peep at the most delightful old house in the world, all full of beautiful old china and silver, and polished old mahogany book cases and cup boards and spindle legged chairs. There was the handsome old clock there, also, that I ever saw in my life, and the huge-posted beds, and the polished brass candle sticks, standing in a row above the fire place, and the andirons and old white cups and saucers, and the huge solid oak cabinet—oh goodness, gracious, how my ruddy cheeks and bright eyes, and over the sandy floor, looking upon these treasures! If any one wants to see antiquities, let him come to little old Wales. To make this charming old house complete, there were the lovely old couple in it, too, to welcome us.

The old lady is simply a beauty, ruddy cheeks and bright eyes, and as happy as the day is long with us. She kissed me good-bye, too, which made me feel very proud indeed. Her husband sat by the fire place smoking a long white "church-warden" and every once in a while telling some interesting little anecdote about a piece of old furniture he saw us raving over. That was a glimpse of paradise, surely. I shall never forget this lovely day as long as I live. Every one is so good and cordial to us that one would think we were related to them! While at Mountain Ash, too, we called, at the request of Mrs. Miles Eberhart, who is a relative of the Anwylls, and the kindness of her reception of us cannot be described. She simply took us to her heart. Again and again we find ourselves exclaiming to one another "How hospitable and generous a people these are! Indeed, we are all very thankful for our opportunities of meeting and knowing such wonderful women, and of seeing such wonderful scenery as these little valleys and immense mountains afford."

SOME NOTABLE COLLIERIES. On our ride home we passed by the deepest colliery or "dual pit" in all Wales. I forgot the name of it, but it is located nearly on the top of a mountain, near Treharis, where we gave our concert last evening, and I remember Mr. Anwyll telling us that it is 2,700 feet deep. Further on in quite another part of the valley, we came to the pit at Cilfynydd where that dreadful accident occurred in June, in which nearly 300 miners were killed by an explosion. In some of the houses in this town the shutters of the windows were closed and Mr. Anwyll told us that in those houses they had suffered the loss of brother or father in this explosion, the bodies of which had not been recovered. Apropos of Mr. Anwyll—we are very proud of him. It seems to know everybody in Wales, and everybody seems to know and remember him. He sings like a tenor and has a great voice, with his exquisite voice and artistic use of it, and neither the company nor the audience would exchange him for any other tenor on this side of the Atlantic or the other. In fact the people here seem to think that we are one and all very fine indeed. It is a very pleasant state of affairs, for we, I am sure, are not in much to write about, as each concert is something like the preceding one, and they all have become very uninteresting from the concert giver's point of view. Of course, there is something always different in each town we come to, and its people, and we get so greatly tired of the spire of life, but one finds it difficult to describe these things in words. I will inclose a critique about us from one of the papers here. It may, perhaps, interest our friends at home. It is from the Cardiff Western Mail, of Sept. 21, and the writer gets some of his facts a trifle twisted, but I guess that must be a journalistic habit, on both sides the water, isn't it? Here it is:

THEIR CORDEAL RECEPTION. The inhabitants of Wales who are interested to know that there is in South Wales at the present moment a Welsh-American choir, composed of notable Welsh vocalists and instrumentalists. From those great Welsh centers of the United States, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Chicago. They landed at Southampton on the first of the present month and made direct for Glastonbury, and they have been held several highly successful concerts in that town. Their compatriots become more generally acquainted with them and learn what splendid vocalists and instrumentalists they are, and therefore how well they are able to sustain in America the great reputation of Wales as a nursery of music. Their "ancestors" on the west coast of the Severn Sea will troop to hear them in still greater numbers. They have already been heartily received at Mountain Ash and Treharis and on Wednesday at the latter town. The concert at Treharis, which was held at the Town-hall, was under the presidency of Mr. Jacob Ray, the general manager of the extensive works of the popular locality. The next concert will be held at Yngybywl on Monday night. The accompanist is Professor Haydn Evans, the winner of the £1,000 at the World's Fair at St. Louis, who was selected to accompany the united choirs under the conductorship of our "Caradog," in rendering the "Hallelujah Chorus" at that great musical gathering. The choir consists of America and Wales. Professor Haydn Evans was born at Aberdare. When still a babe his family crossed the Atlantic to the land where the mighty Missouri pours down to the sea. There is no Mr. James W. Anwyll, whose neighborhood was in Wales, and Mr. Joseph P. Barnes, and there are three ladies—viz., Miss Sadie Kaiser, Miss Julia C. Allen and Miss Cordelia Freeman—each distinguished in the great western republic. They are accompanied by a typical member of the American fourth estate, charged with the duty of keeping the seeming thousands of the Welsh settlements of Wyoming valley and the other popular Kymric centers of the United States well posted respecting the receptions which their vocal representatives receive in their own land. It is highly interesting to hear the visitors relating, now in Welsh and then in English, their day dreams in the past respecting the "Old Country" as all Welsh-Americans designate Wales, the land of their ancestors. While not otherwise engaged they roam among the mountains of Glamorgan like so many William Tell, re-visiting the country of their ancestors, and they like the English, refer to the mountains as "old guards of liberty." There is something supremely touching in the visit, and it is to be hoped they will be accorded such a welcome as to convince them that "blood is thicker than water." For the present their residence in the County Hotel, Mill street, Ponty-Pridd.

PRIMITIVE ILLUMINATION. But I must close this rambling letter and get to bed. You see, as the writing I do is done at night, after I come home from the concerts, about eleven or twelve o'clock, and by the light of candles, which though picturesque are not powerful. In Wales, the hotels never burn gas. Every guest is supplied with candles. You would be laughing to see our party separate at night, each ascending the dark, polished staircase with a tiny taper in his hand, for all the world like so many somnambulists or spooks. The fun isn't half so funny, however, when you have to sit in your lonesome room and scribble twenty or thirty pages of manuscript by the light of these glimmering things. Why don't they have an American hotel's facilities for correspondence. I wonder? But if I get started on that line of comparison heaven only knows where I shall end. So here goes for a sudden conclusion; out with the candle, and good night.
