Fire at an early hour yesterday morning destroyed the barn and contents belonging to John Barrett, of South Main street. The fire was discovered between 1 and 2 o'clock and originated in a closet located at the south side of the barn. Mr. Barrett was awakened by the crying of his youngest child and upon arising was bewildered by the close proximity of the flames to his sleeping apartments. He dressed himself quickly and with the aid of his son, Steve, hurried to the barn in the hope of saving the stock which consisted of two blooded horses and two draught horses. The former were owned by Mr. Barrett and the latter by Brewer Richards of Wilkes-Barre. During the time spent endeavoring to get the frightened animals out of the barn the flames spread rapidly and the task was a most dangerous one. Mr. Barrett finally succeeded in setting the brewery team at liberty, but his own refusal to leave the barn. So terror-stricken did they become on seeing the fire they bolted back into their box stalls where their dead bodies were found when the flames were extinguished. One of the brewery team was burned so badly that it died yesterday. Along with the horses a quantity of grain, hay, straw, harness, two wagons and two sleighs were consumed. The loss, Mr. Young calculates, will reach $1,500, on which he carried no insurance. The firemen were present and did heroic service in saving the adjoining property. How the fire originated is a mystery. The supposition is that it is the work of an incendiary. During the time occupied in rescuing the horses, Mr. Barrett's hair took fire and the top of his head was badly burned.

The differences existing between the Traction Railroad company and Valley railroad officials, which have prevented the former from running its cars to the Lackawanna and Bloomsburg junction, will, it is said, be satisfactorily adjusted within a few days. The copy of the agreement reached has been forwarded to the president of the Traction company, for his signature and seal of the company, and after it has been duly signed by the Valley officials, the road will be opened to the junction.

The hearing of the injunction restraining the borough from making a contract with the Barber Asphalt company will be resumed at Wilkes-Barre today.

It is rumored that a movement is on foot to procure another injunction from the court to restrain the borough treasurer from paying the expenses incident to the holding of the alleged investigation. The grounds upon which the injunction will be asked are that the investigation now being made is an illegal proceeding.

William Simmons, of South Main street, died at an early hour yesterday morning at the age of 72 years. He has been a resident of this borough for over 40 years and was highly regarded by everyone with whom he came in contact. Funeral announcement later.

The trial of the election officers of the Cork Lane district of Pittston township, who are charged by ex-supervisor Thomas Mitchell, of Brownstown, with having falsified the election returns, was set down for a hearing last week, but was put off until next term of court.

Eight witnesses who had been duly subpoenaed failed to respond, hence the trial was continued. Sheriff Walters arrested the delinquent witnesses, and Judge Rice fined them $5 each and the costs, which amounts in each case to $7. William Keating, for failing to give a reasonable excuse for failing to appear, was fined $10 and costs.

The sickness prevailing among the members of Company F, Ninth regiment, of Wilkes-Barre, is not alone confined to that company, as William H. Collier, a member of Company H, of this place, has been lying seriously ill during the past two weeks and much concern is felt by his relatives for his recovery. Mr. Collier is 35 years of age and lives on Scarle street.

The funeral of Mrs. Emanuel Jones, an old and well known resident of Sebastopol, died Friday evening, of paralysis, took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment was made in Pittston cemetery.

The 60-foot derrick, at the new Miners' Savings bank building, corner Broad and South Main streets, fell shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday. The derrick was held in place by four guy ropes, one of which broke, and the pole fell with a crash, breaking a number of telephones and telegraph wires. They in turn fell across the trolley wire and a great electrical display followed. The street was crowded with people at the time, and there was a stampede to get out of the reach of the hissing wires.

A terrier dog belonging to William Wilson, the South Main street butcher, stepped on one of the wires and was instantly killed. O. O'Boyle, of Scranton, lineman for the Postal Telegraph company, who was in town superintending repairs to the company's wires, climbed a telegraph pole, pulled the small wires off the trolley wire, and cut them. After a delay of ten minutes, the pole was raised again, and fastened securely. Nearly every telephone in town was burned out, and the circuit of the Suburban Telegraph company was broken. The burning wires set fire to the woodwork of Joseph Kern's residence, corner of Mill and Spen streets, on which the telephone was located. At first it was thought necessary to send in an alarm, but Mr. Kern, who was at home at the time, succeeded in extinguishing the blaze.

Tonight is the regular meeting of the town council.

Colliers No. 6 and Barnum, Penn's Coal company, will be idle this week and all others will work.

James Draine, who suffered the loss of his right arm by an Erie and Wyoming Valley railroad train on Friday, shows marked signs of improvement. His advanced age—83—it was at first thought together with the shock sustained would make his case a doubtful one, but happily his constitution was able to withstand the shock.
