HONESDALE.

Yesterday was fireman's day in Honesdale, it being the occasion of the annual parade and hop of Protection Engine company. Nearly every home and business house was decorated in and business nouse was decorated in honor of the occasion. Columbia Hose company No. 5, of Carbondale, was the guest of the Honesdale boys, and ar-rived here at 9:15 a. m. The Columbia boys, attired in their long coats and helmets,make a fine appearance. They were accompanied by the Mozart band. Refreshments were furnished to the visitors at the engine house, during which a number of toasts were made. R. W. Ham gave the address of welcome and was responded to by Barney Kelley, president of the Columbias. Toasts were given by Mayor D. E. Hendricks, of Carbondale, and William H. Stanton, an honorary member of Protection Engine company.

KANSAS SAID TO BE SINKING

Due to the Soft Strata of Magnesia Underlying Nearly All of It.

SUDDEN DROPS ARE FREQUENT

the Land Is Usually Depressed from Twenty-five to Thirty Feet, While Sinkholes Abound in Many Places. Used by Farmers for Stock Wells,

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 12.—During the last six weeks there have been several instances of the sinking of small areas of land in the counties situated between the valleys of the Arkansas and the Walnut river, in Southern Kansas. The most northern of these was in Harvey county, and this was perhaps the largest, the area being about one-fourth of an acre of the highest prairie in that an acre of the highest prairie in that vicinity.

This sinking occured in the center of a wheat field, and within 100 feet of where a thrashing outfit was at work. This cave-in left perpendicular sides, where was clearly revealed the geological strata showing saveral feet of cal strata, showing several feet of plains mark, underlaid with soapstone, gravel, clay, and calcareous limestone, the latter running into magnesia of various degrees of hardness.

Surface Suddenly Drops Investigation shows that this sinking of the surface is of the same general character, that the surface suddenly drops, and without any warning, ac-companied with no other signs of agitation than the dropping of the upper strata of the earth, the fall in some instances not more than ten feet, but more frequently from twenty-five to thirty. There has never been known second cave-in at or very near the same spot. In the region indicated, and extending almost to the south line of the state, are to be found numerous sinkholes, showing that at some time a cave-in has occurred. The sides of these old plts have been acted on by the surface water until they have assumed something of the shape of a funnel.

At the mouth of the surface is de-pressed more or less abruptly, but gradually rises until a short distance away it slopes up to the level of the surrounding prairie. There are a few of these sinkholes which show an ex-tended mouth, the diameter reaching as much as twenty feet. These are dangerous to stock, and the farmers frequently have to fence them to prevent animals from falling into them. Some of these have been explored, and are found to be the mouths of caves of let passing just above his head more or less capacity.

In Stahlter's Cave. One near Rock Creek, in Cowley county, is known as "Stahlter's Cave," and has been explored for half a mile in two directions. It contains irregular cavities and chambers, which are connnected with low and very tortuous passageways. The formation is magnesia of the softer grades. The roof, sides and bottom are very porous, and show signs of constant action of water, in places, the upper stratas being washed through the crevices and deposited in the cave.

Explorations made at any other points show similar conditions. Invariably these sinkholes become drainvariably these sinkholes become drainage sewers for the surface water in their vicinity, and in a few cases they are used as stock wells, a frame work being built over the mouth and a wind mill used to elevate the water from a depth of from 80 to 100 feet, the supply being always inexhaustible. The theory which geologists have agreed upon is that the soft strata of magnesia underlying all that region is magnesia underlying all that region is full of crevices and cavities more or less extensive; that the action of the caverns; that, in the course of time, the roof in places has become too weak to longer sustain the weight of the overlying stratas of softer forma-tions, and at times, generally following floods or continuous rains, the roof gives way, causing the surface to sink, the depth of the cavity or cave regulating the distance. There is no danger that any considerable area of connected surface will start for the lower regions carrying entire farms and

RAT IN AN ELEPHANT'S TRUNK The Big Animal Shows Gratification at the Rodent's Removal.

United Press. San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.-The reason for the strange acting of Jess, the circus elephant which went on a rampage, and after breaking her fastenings and nearly wrecking the circus, roamed through the streets of San Francisco, has been discovered.

One of the keepers noticed something protruding from the end of her trunk. He pulled it out and found that it was a live rat. The elephant had been lying on the ground asleep, with her trunk stretched in front of her, and it is sup-posed the rat ran up her trunk. The elephant contracted the muscles of her trunk and held the rat fast. When the rat had been removed the elephant gave great signs of satisfaction.

TROUBLE FOR SUGAR TRUST. The Supreme Court Case Comes Up for Hearing This Youth. By the United Press.

WHEELS NOT FOR WOMEN. Mrs. Kendal Says Bicycling Ruins a Girl's Health and Features.

By the United Press. Chicago, Oct. 12.—Mrs. Kendal has written an article on women bicycle riders in which she says: "Riding astride a horse, a camel—any animal is not feminine, and never will be so, according to the laws of nature. Bicycle riding is a violent exercise. Can it be good for women? If a girl of 16 is to do exactly what the boy of that age does, bicycling is more harmful to her than a dozen other rough sports the male has always enjoyed. But can a girl of 16 do what her brother does without endangering her health? I say

"When a girl gets astride her bicycle she bids farewell to her good looks. If she develops new muscles be sure some other parts of her suffer, some faculty will be slighted, some natural trait undeveloped. As for bloomers, they are abominable."
