he Little Match Girl a Sample or Heredity-Scenes in Naturalization Court. Constitutional Law Exponnded Other Brief Notes.

Watching the swirl and rush of life, one sees much that is interesting, much that is amusing and good deal that is pathetic. Life as it presents itself to the observer in a city of even 100,000 population, composed of such diverse elements as are to be found in the Electric City when the like the state of all the composed of the com tric City, where the individual of al-most every nationality under heaven can find some one to converse with him in his native tongue, appears in so many phases that one is never tired of watching and studying its varying manifesta-tions. One little bare-foot, ragged girl, so small that her chin hardly comes above my desk, presents a picture that is sad and pathetic, as in her tiny hand she holds up a box of matches and says in a voice that sounds as though she had never in her life been happy, or en-joyed a real hearty laugh, "Won't you please buy a box of matches, Mister? Only 5 cents a box; do, please, buy one." Joyed a real hearty laugh, "Won't you please buy a box of matches, Mister? Only 5 cents a box; do, please, buy one." On her face, in her puny body and stunted growth; indeed, in her whole maner, she exhibited to the world an example of the legacies we have received from our fathers—the inhericeived from our fathers—the inheri-tance we are transmitting to our childen-"Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation."

"Matches" is but one instance of many that excite pity or mirth. Among those places where amusing things happen, is the big temple of justice above Washington avenue. Last week during the trial of the culm case the defendants laid claim to the culm on the ground that it was on a five acre tract of land which had been granted tract of land which had been granted to them and upon which they had erected a breaker. To break the force of this position the counsel for the plaintiff showed, on cross-examination, that the culm pile in question occupied a dis-tant portion of the tract from that on which the breaker stood, and to do this asked defendants' witness if the culm and the breaker did not occupy differ-ent parts of the tract. "You mean," ent parts of the tract. "You mean," interrupted the attorney for the defendants, "that the culm pile was not on top of the breaker, and that the breaker was not on top of the culm pile." "That is just what I mean," said plaintiff's counsel. "Anybody that knows anything would know that." that," answered defendants' counsel.
"Very true," retorted his adversary,

It is whispered among lawyers that after hearing the judge's charge to the jury in a case which he had tried, a prominent attorney of this city went into court to hear the jury render its verdict, carrying in his pocket a motion for a new trial, with a long list of reasons thereof appended. The ver-

The bystander is not afflicted with xenophobia; he willingly joins in welcoming to this country all who come to us to better their condition and to identify themselves with us. But he does think that it is time to cease naturalizing "foreigners." Before naturalization, the man of foreign birth should become so identified with us as to become an American. He should be an American in ambition, in belief, in patriotic devotion, in spirit and in > Speaking of naturalization, I wonder how many of the readers of The Tribare aware of the fact that in no less than sixteen of the states of the American Union a foreigner does not need to be naturalized in order to be entitled to the right to vote. Start-ling as the statement may seem, it is nevertheless true. It is, however, nothing to be proud of. These states are: Alabama, Arkansas Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wisconsin; while in Montana the same thing was true prior to the 17th of August. . . .

> I see it is announced that the Prohibitionists of Indiana have given up the fight for the election of their candidates and are bending their energies to raise a fund of $12,000 for the purpose of prosecuting the election officers of that state for refusing to receive and count the votes of women. The plan as an nounced is for Mrs. Helen M. Gougar who is widely known among Prohibitionists and whose home is at Lafayette Ind., to go to the polls on election day and demand that she be permitted to vote. On the refusal of the election officers to receive her vote she will com-mence prosecution against them. It is claimed that the Constitution of the United States guarantees to every citizen his rights, and that the elective franchise is one of these rights, and that states will asist their brethren and sisters of Indiana in this holy crusade. However advantageous such a contest may be to Mrs. Gougar to advertise her may be to Mrs. Gougar to advertise her lectures, it can hardly be considered wise for others to encourage and assist her in her movement. The elective franchise is not a natural right but a political privilege, and is conferred not for the benefit of the individual, but for the good of the state. It and citizenship may exist independently of each other. One may be a citizen and yet not have the right to vote; and one may enjoy the privilege of the elective franchise without being a citizen. These facts have been judicially decided. The question of the right to vote is left in this country to the regulation of the constitutions and statutes of the several states, and these constitutions and statutes may impose any conditions except in the three points provided against in the Constitution of the United States, viz.: That that right shall not the abridged on account of (1) race, (2)
