Baking Powder ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE INNER MAN.

At this season of the year delicate appetizers are always welcome on the supper or lunch table. A simple and easy way to prepare a little cold tongue is in a case or soufflé dish. Cut the tongue in very thin slices after peeling it and then into very small bits. Put a layer of thick tomato sauce in the bottom of the case and fill it up with bits of the tongue. Add a mere pinch of cayenne pepper, a pinch of minced parsley and also of minced chives. Put a layer of the tomato sauce also on top. Sprinkle a few fine bread crumbs on top of each dish and bake them in a hot oven for about ten or fifteen minutes. You may mix a little minced mushrooms in with the tongue if you wish.

A curry toast is a rather pleasant and savory toast if one likes the flavor of curry. Take eight anchovies, pound them to a paste with a good-sized tablespoonful of butter, add a little pinch of mustard, a saltspoonful of curry powder and then four tablespoonfuls more of butter. With this make half this mixture, but it is well enough to make it all, as it will keep. Spread the mixture on slices of brown toast in a hot oven for about five minutes to become thoroughly heated through. Serve the toast on a platter surrounded by water-cress dressed with vinegar and a little salt. A little roast chicken powdered to a paste may be used in place of the anchovies.

Browning oysters is by no means a novel treatment of the bivalves, yet its virtues as a recipe for adoption on emergency cases, seems as yet unrevealed to the average housekeeper. A dozen of the big fat oysters so cheap in the New York fish markets will make an abundant dish, quickly prepared in the kitchen or in a chafing dish. The oysters must be drained from the juice, and then the bottom of the frying pan should be scraped and added to the well-browned heap.

The new cheese sandwich is meant to be eaten with theater suppers, cooked in a chafing dish, or at luncheon, for it needs to be fresh to be fully appreciated. Grated American cheese must be melted with a dash of dry mustard and cayenne pepper. This spread between thin slices of bread is very delicious when served with creamed oysters. For these two tablespoonfuls of butter must be melted in a half pint of cream, along with a very generous pinch of salt and a dash of pepper and a little grated nutmeg. This must all be permitted to boil up, when a tablespoonful and a half of very finely crushed cracker crumbs, sifted and stirred in, are required. Immediately add two dozen oysters strained of all juice. Let them cook in the cream not longer than two minutes and serve on toast.

An excellent pickle mixture is made from green tomatoes, cauliflower, celery and small cucumbers. For every peck of tomatoes use four heads of cauliflower and four bunches of celery. Slice the tomatoes, break the cauliflower into small pieces and the celery cut into whole in a brine for a day and a night, then drain and cover with hot vinegar. In a quarter of an hour take out of the vinegar and drain. Add to the vinegar two ounces of grated horseradish and an ounce of ground cloves, cinnamon, tumeric, a quarter of a pound of black pepper, eight ounces of mustard and take same quantity of brown sugar. Turn over the pickles and add enough cold vinegar to cover.

A roast tenderloin of pork is good for an occasional cold weather dish in those families where the diversion is sound. Have the tenderloin split at the market, and stuff it with a dressing seasoned with herbs, with lemon juice, and grated yellow peel, with celery salt, or a very little onion juice. Roast slowly in a moderate oven until very thoroughly cooked.

That Philadelphia novelty, baked ice cream, which seems a little like gilding gold, is made from ice that is first cream frozen very hard, in a brick-shaped mold, then turned out and coated with a meringue and browned an instant only. Miss Johnson's recipe for the meringue is the whites of four eggs with an equal quantity of sugar for every quart brick of cream.

An excellent cream salad dressing that costs less than mayonnaise and is also liked better, by those who do not like the taste of oil, is made from a tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of oil, one-half tablespoonful of mustard, three eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk, and a level tablespoonful of salt.

Oysters are delicious, says the New York Evening Post, cooked in cream sauce and seasoned with mushrooms and chopped parsley. Scald a pint of oysters in their liquor until the edges begin to curl. Then drain them. Mix half a tablespoonful of flour with the same quantity of butter and heat in a saucepan. Add a quarter of a cupful of cream. The sauce has been discovered, mushroom liquor. When the sauce is smooth and hot, add half a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one-fourth can mushrooms and the oysters. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and put in a shallow dish or scallop shells and scatter with fine bread crumbs and bits of butter. Brown in a hot oven.

A menu for a simple luncheon that requires very little work and little expense is cold-broiled ham, garnished with parsley, creamed browned potatoes sent to table in baking dish, velvet rolls, and pickled cauliflower. For the second course, oyster salad and warm seafoam wafers; and for the third, lemon jelly tinted pale green and filled with green grapes, big crackers and coffee. The jelly should be allowed to stand until it begins to harden, then pour a little in the mold and lay in it a perfect bunch of grapes. Pour in more jelly, scatter through it single grapes, then more jelly and grapes until the mold is full. Other fruits may be used, and, if it is liked, plain or whipped cream may be served with the jelly.

OPENING THE BOULEVARD.

The Public Generally is Invited to Inspect It Tomorrow.

The pluck of the officers and promoters of the Elmhurst boulevard is shown in the fact that tomorrow at 2 o'clock will witness a semi-formal opening of the road, which has been the subject of so much discussion. This decision is made notwithstanding the disappointment in the completion of the bridge at Nay Aug falls. Permission has been secured from the Pennsylvania Coal company to use the old gravity roadbed from Ash street to a point over Roaring Brook near the falls. Ash street leads from the school house on Petersburg hill toward West mountain, crossing the brook and the Lackawanna tracks to the gravity road. It had been intended to have the opening day featured with formality and ceremony. The idea has been abandoned since the failure of the bridge company to span the chasm at Nay Aug. The board of directors, accompanied by press representatives, will leave Washington avenue from a point opposite the court house at the hour mentioned, they have extended an invitation to the public generally to participate in a tour of inspection. Tolls will be exacted beginning next Wednesday, as the annual money day is favorable tomorrow, the inspection will be made under the same arrangements the day following.

APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC.

Issued by the Directors of St. Joseph's Foundling Home.

The following appeal to the public has been issued by the directors of St. Joseph's foundling home: At the last meeting of the members of St. Joseph's society, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 24 and 25, were decided upon the annual money day of St. Joseph's Foundling Home. For various reasons the picnic was dispensed with this year, which fact leaves the society in a depleted condition and with funds insufficient to carry on the good work longer than March. St. Joseph's Home is dear to the heart of our bishop, and was established by him as a place of refuge for the children of the poor who are abandoned to the streets. The neighboring parishes have not hesitated to avail themselves of the privileges of this benevolent home as a place of refuge for their children, and that the majority of the children belong outside of Scranton and many to wealthy parishes, yet anxiety for their support has rested chiefly with the little local organization known as St. Joseph's society.

Perhaps these facts have not been brought home to distant friends, and that now when they are enlightened as to the real state of affairs, a sense of justice will open their eyes to the importance of the work which is being done, and our urgent need of their cooperation in the task which still lies before us, for we cannot even relax our efforts until we shall have freed ourselves from the annual rental of $600 and erected a substantial and permanent home for our devoted sisters and their helpless charges, on the beautiful lots which were donated for the purpose near Green Ridge. In conclusion, we appeal to all our friends out of their abundance to kindly remember the Foundling Home on next Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 25 and 26, at 2 o'clock, at the Foundling Home, St. Joseph's Society. Scranton, Oct. 19, 1894.

MUST KEEP THE PEACE.

Court Disposed with the Case of Dr. Haggerty Against St. John.

One of Saturday's court cases which attracted considerable local attention was that of Dr. Haggerty against St. John. The plaintiff last summer ordered Mr. St. John off the Driving park track alleged that Mr. St. John was not a club member and was breaking the rules. Dr. Haggerty testified to these particulars which he said was followed by a threat of violence against him. He further alleged that he was afraid of his life. The defendant was required to furnish $100 bonds to keep the peace.

Judge Edwards imposed a fine of $10 and placed the costs of prosecution upon Michael Flaherty, indicted for threatening the life of a traction company motorman and inciting a riot in Minoaka.

Thomas Whitehouse was sentenced to pay $75 cents a week for the support of the child of Mary A. Jones until it is 7 years old, $25 Miss Jones and $20 to Lackawanna township poor district.

Two Jermyn constables, Adam and Walter Snyder, were fined and sentenced on a charge of pointing firearms at a party of young men playing base ball on Sunday. Half the costs was imposed on the constables, the other half was made under the insolvency act for their discharge.

The costs were divided in the case of Dr. Haggerty against St. John. The attorney Sopher applied for a new trial in the case of Valentine Hess, of Peckville, who is charged with shooting Thomas Jones. Judge Jones postponed the application one week to give the defendant opportunity to procure further affidavits.

The jury directed that one-fourth of the costs be placed on the plaintiff, Martin Murphy, who charged Joseph Moyles with shooting at him, and that three-fourths of the costs be placed on Moyles.

Thomas Millet was found guilty of arson by the jury which recommended him to one year in jail and to pay the costs and a fine of $10.

NOTABLE CELEBRATION.

Three Anniversaries Observed at the Hallstead Homestead on Millfin Avenue.

A novel celebration was that of Saturday evening at 229 Millfin avenue which commemorated the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Hallstead, the birthday of Mrs. Hallstead and the birthday of her son, Frank N. Hallstead. The house has been artistically arranged with evergreen and contained a large company of relatives and friends from the city and abroad. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hallstead occurred Oct. 29, 1844, at Clifford, Susquehanna county. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Charles Miller. Two years later they moved to Carbondale and soon thereafter to Scranton, where Mr. Hallstead has been prominently identified with the early growth of the city. He was a builder, contractor and wagon maker, and erected the first building which was used as a one time the largest, most substantial and costly in the city. Among the churches which have been erected in the Penn. Avenue Baptist church, which has been enlarged to its present proportions. Mr. and Mrs. Hallstead's daughter, Mrs. P. M. Downing, has one son and two daughters, Frank N. Hallstead, of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western; Mrs. C. F. Whittemore, of Scranton; Mrs. W. Mitchell, nee Anna May Downing, who was married Sept. 6.

Numerous and elegant remembrances were bestowed by Saturday night's company. Among those present from abroad were: Mrs. J. B. Downing, of Philadelphia; Mrs. J. Schoonmaker, of New York; Mrs. Walton Mitchell, of Utica; Susan Rivenburg, of Clifford; Miss Del Hallstead and Mrs. Van Der Beek, of Archbald; Mr. and Mrs. E. Hendrick, of Carbondale; Mrs. Judson Aylesworth and May Bevan, of Clark's Green; Dr. W. R. Helling, of Omaha, and many others.

WHY BOOTH KILLED LINCOLN

A Strange Narrative of the Motive of the Assassin.

IT WAS A THIRST FOR REVENGE

The Hanging of Captain Beall, a Friend of the Actor, Said to Have Been the Cause of the Shooting--A New Version of the Tragedy.

The following strange story is told in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, under a Raleigh, N. C., date: Let me tell you a time there have been hints that there was a motive for John Wilkes Booth's assassination of President Lincoln, and that the motive was revenge. A strange story, now told for the first time, shows that these surmises were well founded, and that Booth's horrid crime was not simply the work of a madman, but was committed because of the execution under military law of his friend, Captain Beall, of the Confederate army.

The story is secured from Dr. George A. Foote, of Warrenton, N. C., a well known physician who was in the Confederate service as a surgeon, and who was for a long time a prisoner at Fort Columbus, New York. Here is the narrative just as given by Dr. Foote, who was interviewed here: Captain Beall was a noted Confederate officer, and was so quick and so secret in his movements that he was a terror to the Federal commanders in and near New York. He figured in the famous St. Albans' raid in 1864, and his exploits at that time gave him a name sort of romantic sound in the South, while he caused consternation among the enemy by his daring. But he was caught in the act of deserting, and his active work had drawn away from General Grant's Army of the Potomac 20,000 men to quell the border troubles of Beall and his followers had caused.

Beall was tried by court martial in prison at Fort Columbus, and sentenced to be hanged as a spy, though it was contended his defense was that he was no spy, but a brave and open foe. Efforts to save his life were made by many persons, among them the distinguished Major Andrew, of Massachusetts, but all were to no purpose. John Wilkes Booth had been a college room-mate of Beall, and they were in every way the most devoted of friends.

Booth tried in every possible manner to secure Beall's escape from prison. He was in New York almost constantly in the winter of 1864, and kept in communication with Beall and his friends in some mysterious way while he tried to secure his pardon or escape.

Plans for Beall's Escape. Dr. Foote occupied a cell adjoining Beall's and with him Booth and his friends were in regular communication. Dr. Foote agreeing to render any assistance in his power. The plan at first agreed on was that Dr. Foote should endeavor to chloroform the guard at night, and that if Beall could succeed the way for escape was open. A boat or skiff being in readiness to receive Beall and carry him across the river. Dr. Foote was carefully hidden in approaching Beall's cell too closely, and this arousing suspicion, the guard was doubled that very night, which caused delay. The next plan was that a crowd of bold men should pass into the barracks, or prison, over the guard of five or six and pass Beall through. To this plan some of the outer guard had agreed, having been bribed with gold.

But in some way news of this plan leaked out in New York city the afternoon or evening before the night when the daring attempt was to be made. This prevented any possibility of escape, and President Lincoln or General Dix had Beall executed without delay.

As soon as Booth discovered through other means, who he had been in the plot of all that went on, and who was himself informed by one of the guards, he had also been bribed, that there was no chance of escape for Captain Beall, he went to his room and on his knees implored President Lincoln and Secretary Seward to pardon or at least respite Beall.

Mr. Lincoln agreed to respite, and Booth at once telegraphed the joyful news to Beall's mother, who was in Brooklyn, N. Y. But that very night the prison commandant received a telegram which informed Beall that he was to be hanged at 10 o'clock. This order was executed, and Beall was hanged within thirty yards of Surgeon Foote's prison window, and inside Fort Columbus, and not at Johnson's Island, as has frequently been reported.

Booth, for what he termed the perfidy of President Lincoln toward himself and his friend Beall, at once swore to avenge his friend's death by killing both Lincoln and Seward. He did not intend to shoot Lincoln in the theater, but the contemplated opportunity did not offer itself elsewhere. But for the fact that Booth's spur caught in the curtain that fatal night he would have escaped, at least for a time. The war had nothing to do with the assassination of the president. It was due simply and solely to revenge intensified by Booth's love and admiration for his friend.

Booth Becomes Insane. Booth went to New York the morning of Beall's execution, and being so grievously disappointed at what occurred he became measurably an insane man, to use Dr. Foote's words. Dr. Foote had not the faintest idea of Booth's plan to assassinate the president. The plan was known to only one man, and to him Booth revealed it only an hour before the assassination. The man to whom thus confided his purpose, he begged him not to carry it out, and finding that Booth was not to be turned from it left the city before the horrid tragedy occurred.

Captain Beall was a graduate of the University of Virginia, and was a man of most remarkable personal magnetism and high soldierly bearing, and none was more gallant. He had many sympathizers, who rendered him great assistance. He was an ardent lover of the Southern cause, and Booth was absolutely devoted to him. Dr. Foote repeats the statement that neither the war nor its results had anything to do with the assassination of President Lincoln, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The war was over before the great tragedy occurred, and Booth knew it could not help matters.

Had Beall been pardoned, or simply imprisoned, Mr. Lincoln would not have been killed. There is certainly no connection with this matter was as Beall's friend, and he was in no wise a party to the assassination. He is a man of high standing, and was every way a field officer, he was yet publicly complimented in a special order by his general for acts of heroism in battle.

A STORY ABOUT CURTIN.

Harry Hall Quotes a Reminiscence of the War Governor.

One of the speakers who is with the Hastings party and who tomorrow night will address a rousing Republican rally at West Pittston is Harry Hall, Washington correspondent of the Pittsburg Times. Not long before Governor Curtin's death Mr. Hall passed very pleasant days with the great war governor at the latter's home in Bellefonte. Some charming reminiscences were the result. Here is one of them: After the state election in October had made Andrew G. Curtin governor by about 30,000 majority, he went east on a stumping tour, and was everywhere greeted with the greatest enthusiasm. At Boston he spoke in Faneuil hall and carried his audience with him. The speaker's words and his speech were the talk of the city.

"The next day," said the governor, "I went into the barber shop of the Parker House to get shaved. There was a man in the next chair to me, and he and the barber were talking of the coming presidential election, and agreeing that Lincoln was sure to be elected. "And" said the barber, "they say he's an awful homey man."

"Yes," said the other, "but he's handsome compared with the man they've just elected governor of Pennsylvania."

"What," cried the barber, "that man Curtin who spoke here last night?" "Yes," replied the man in the chair. "That man Curtin is the homeliest mortal that ever walked the face of the earth. Why, he's a sight."

"I looked at him out of the corner of my eye," said the governor, "and saw he was a stranger to me. I tell you I felt pretty queer until I was shaved, and then I got out of there quick. That afternoon I found an envelope in my box with complimentary tickets to one of the leading theaters. Thinking some friend had sent them, and having no appointment for that night, I got a little party together and went to the theater. When the star of the evening came on the stage there was great applause, and I recognized in him the man who had proclaimed my homeliness in the barber shop. It was poor Billy Florence, and invertebrate practices with the man the actor came into the box and was introduced to me, and there began a friendship that ended only with his untimely death."

VERY HARDENED GIRL.

A Sad Police Case from the Lowest Human Strata.

Nelle Connors, one of the lowest of the fallen, and but 21 years of age, and a well known patron of the police stations, is again in the police net. She is a white woman, but was found in the company of three colored men at 1 o'clock yesterday morning on Scranton street near the Lackawanna and Bloomsburg tracks.

Patrolman Gurrell had to solicit the aid of a citizen in conveying her to the West Side station house.

After being placed in a cell she tore her clothing into strips so that she might not be taken to police court. She was furnished garments after becoming partially sobered, but in court was scarcely in a proper condition for a hearing and was remanded. She spent all of yesterday smoking cigarettes, at intervals swallowing medicine prescribed by the police surgeon to prevent delirium tremens. Her previous arrest was while consorting with Hungarians.
