ARCHBALD.

Colonel Homer B. Sprague, formerly professor in Cornell university, delivered the first of a course of six lectures on Shakespeare in the graded school building Wednesday evening under the auspices of Archbald University extension center. It is a pleasure to say that he was greeted by a large and appreclative audience, and it is a satisfaction to know that the assemblage was delighted with both the speaker and his theme.
The lecture was devoted chiefly to the youth of the great author and the mo-tives that moulded his subsequent career. Colonel Sprague cannot be classed among those who regard Shakespeare as a myth, nor yet of that circle who consider him a mystery. He believes him to have been gifted with genius little less than miraculous and a comprehension so vast that he is easily entitled to his high position among the greatest masters of human speech. He does not accept Ben Johnson's estimate of Shakespeare's attainments, because his works belie the statement that he "knew little Latin and less Greek." Colonel Sprague thinks he was well grounded in Latin because of his extensive use of words in their root sense. That he had more than a fair knowlnight on the early manhood and mar-riage of Shakespeare. His next lecture will be on Wednesday, Nov. 7.

you haven't read it."

"I'll take that bet," said Captain King, and the two put up their money.

Then Captain King pulled out one of his visiting cards and handed it to the agent, saying: "I am Captain Charles King the author of that hook and I King, the author of that book, and I read it in manuscript and in proof." "Gee whillikins!" gasped the agent, with a low, sad whistle, and he went off and didn't bother that party any more.

Tom Buckley was working on the spring round-up in the employ of one of the large cattle outfits in Southern Montana. While riding through a clump of bushes one day hunting cattle a full-grown, silver-tip bear suddenly arose and confronted him. The only weapon at hand was his lariat, and with visions of juicy bear steak for the boys at supper around the mess wagon that night, and a fine rug for the pretty school-marm, he quickly loosened his rope and threw it. A few turns over the saddle-horn, at the same time spur-ring his horse, and the shock came. It was very severe, for, unluckily, the bear's foreleg as well as his head was through the loop of the rope. Tom was about to drop the rope like a hot cake when the horse suddenly put his head down and started bucking in true broncho style. Thomas didn't last long. He suffered when he struck the ground, but he didn't linger in the vicinity to ascertain the extent of his injuries. He started for the top of a butte close at hand, and although an indifferent sprinter, he managed to make very fair time. Locking back from his position of comparatively safety he could see that both animals had become entangled in the rope and were having it out in great style, making frantic efforts to free themselves. The rope finally part-ed and away they went in opposite di-rections; or as he expressed it, "They quit the country, hitting only the high
