

The MOONSHINER'S DREAM.

By MATT CRIM. Author of the Adventures of a Fair Rebel.

Gray daylight was shining along the eastern horizon when they at last reached home. Al carried his sweetheart over the threshold into the room.

"Oh, me; oh, me; Eph, an' Eddy an' now her too." On the bed the sick child tossed and moaned.

"I wants my pa; I wants my pa." That gray wintry morning found the revenue officers and their prisoner far on the way to Atlanta, and at nightfall Ephraim White was lodged in jail.

Who gave that alarm on the mountain? He felt again the thrill it sent through him when it pierced the silence of the night.

"I'd like to 'a' tuck a hand agin 'em for a few minutes," he muttered to himself, grimly. "I low they'd 'a' ben something like a wreck, too."

How his nameless spirit, bred in the wild fastnesses of the mountains, chafed and raged during the ensuing week. A weight of anxiety hung upon him.

He had never before been separate from his wife and child for so long a time. What would Eddy think of the long absence and would they dare explain its meaning to him?

watching for him day after day. He had never been robust and full of healthy animal spirits like other children and the father's heart had yearned over him from his birth.

"Oh, duum, duum, ef you have tu break jail tu git here." Lizzy prayed in conclusion. "Mebby they'll let you out, if they know he's so sick."

"No, I reckon I will go ef I have tu pull down every brick in this jail house. Eddy sick an' me not there tu take keer o' him. He'll me Almighty God, he'll me."

and he looked up and saw his child with outstretched arms. "Pa, oh, pa!" "Yes, honey. Yes, yes, I'm comin'."

"Yes, honey, yes; yes, comin'," he cried, leaping out on the cold floor. But the vision had fled. Nothing more than blank darkness met his gaze.

"Yes, honey, yes; yes, comin'," he muttered again and wrenched the bars like a mad man. He never could have told himself how they were loosened and torn out.

WANT TO BE FIRST.

That is the Way With the Average Individual in a Crowd. Some twenty thousand people assembled to fight for the doubtful honor of being the first to cross the new Tower bridge on the morning on which it was opened to the public.

I remember what a rush there was when Holborn viaduct was thrown open, and I have in my possession a photo of the first omnibus that was driven over it. The omnibus was one Thomas Grayson, who was presented by his passengers with a gold-mounted whip in honor of the event.

Weak Women and all mothers who are nursing babies derive great benefit from Scott's Emulsion. This preparation serves two purposes. It gives vital strength to mothers and also enriches their milk and thus makes their babies thrive.
