

PLUMS FOR THE FAITHFUL

Some of the Patronage Which Governor Hastings Will Control.

NICE SALARIES ATTACHED

From Present Appointments It Will Not Be Very Difficult to Get Men Enough to Occupy These Positions of Public Trust.

By the United Press.

Harrisburg, Nov. 11. It is the belief of close observers that when General Hastings becomes governor the offices at his disposal will not need to seek the men to any great extent. In fact, several men have already volunteered to fill each office, and the season of office-seeking is quite young yet.

According to the Patriot, the most important of these offices which General Hastings will have at his disposal is secretary of the commonwealth, the salary of which is $4,000 a year. Secretary Harris has made on an average of over $17,000 a year out of the office on salary and fees. The deputy secretary receives $2,500 a year; chief clerk, $2,200; corporation clerk, $2,200; other clerks, $1,400 each; one extra clerk, $1,500, and messenger, $1,100. It has always been the custom for the chief clerk of this department to serve as the clerk to the board of pardons, the salary of which is $500 a year.

Other Saug Berths. There are only a few appointments in the executive department. The most important is private secretary to the governor, who receives a salary of $2,500 and $500 additional as recorder of the board of pardons. The executive clerk receives $1,500 a year; assistant executive clerk, $1,300; messenger, $1,200; typewriter, $1,200; page, $300, and night watchman, $900. The janitor of this department is paid out of the treasury fund. Jacob Allen, a faithful old colored man has filled this place continuously for twenty-three years. He is a Republican and will likely be retained by the incoming governor.

The attorney general's office is worth $11,000 a year in salary and fees. The salary of the attorney general is $2,500, and $500 less than that of his deputy, who receives no fees unless by agreement of the attorney general to divide them as Attorney General Henshaw does with his deputy, James A. Stranahan. The law clerk of this department receives $2,200 a year and the stenographer $1,500. The adjutant general receives a salary of $2,500 a year and $200 additional for serving as a member of the military board. The chief clerk gets $1,800; two clerks, $1,400 each; two temporary clerks, $1,200 each; messenger, $900; messenger in the flag room, $600; keeper of state arsenal, $1,500; six assistants, $800. In addition the military board usually selects one of the clerks in the adjutant general's department for its secretary, a position which pays $400 a year.

Places Already Filled. There will be no changes in the department of public instruction until 1895, as the governor has no power to remove the state superintendent before the expiration of his term. The incumbent, Rev. Dr. Schaeffer, has over two years to serve. With the exception of two clerks and a messenger, the attaches of this department are hold-over Republicans. The salary of the state superintendent is $4,000 a year; two deputies, $1,800 each; three clerks each, $1,400, and a messenger, $900. The messenger is also messenger in the office of the secretary of the state board of agriculture at a salary of $300 a year.

State Librarian Eggle has over three years yet to serve. He was originally appointed by Governor Beaver, and it is thought he will not be disturbed by General Hastings. Some of his assistants will have to go to make room for Republicans. The salary of the state librarian is $2,500 a year; first assistant, $1,800; second assistant, $1,500; messenger, $1,000; eight watchmen, $800; three extra messengers, $1,200 each. The state librarian is also allowed a stenographer and typewriter, whose salary comes out of the contingent fund.

One of the most lucrative places in the gift of the governor is superintendent of banking, which pays $4,000 a year. The deputy superintendent gets $2,500; two clerks each $1,400. There are also three examiners in this department who are paid in fees. Another comfortable position with a large income which the governor-elect will have at his command is factory inspector, which pays $2,500 a year. There are also twelve deputies each of whom receive $1,200 a year and traveling expenses.

Take Your Choice. Among the other places which the incoming governor will control are dairy and food commissioner, which pays $2,000 a year; inspector of gas meters for the city of Pittsburg, $2,000; superintendent of public printing and binding, $2,000; clerk to the superintendent, $500; harbor master, Philadelphia, $2,500; health officer, Philadelphia, $2,500; and others of less importance. One of the best paying offices at the disposal of the governor is that of insurance commissioner, which is worth about $8,000 a year in salary and fees. The deputy insurance commissioner is paid $1,200 a year; two clerks each $1,400; an extra clerk the same amount; a stenographer, $1,200, and a messenger, $900. General Latta, the next secretary of internal affairs, will control a number of good appointments. With one exception the attaches of the internal affairs department are Republicans. The exception is Major Forster, a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars. The secretary of internal affairs receives $4,000 a year and $500 in addition for serving as a member of the board of pardons. It is likely that General Latta will be chosen secretary of the state medical council when he takes Colonel Stewart's place in the council. This position pays $300 a year.

The salary of the present secretary of internal affairs is $4,000 a year. The next secretary will receive $4,000, as provided by the act of 1893 increasing the salaries of certain state officials and employees, including the auditor general, who will hereafter receive $4,000. The deputy secretary of internal affairs receives $2,200 a year, exclusive of $200 for acting as secretary of the board of pardons. Next deputy secretary the most important position in this department is chief of the bureau of industrial statistics, who receives $2,500 a year. This appointment is made

ASSASSIN LAY IN AMBUSH

Following His Revolting Crime Joe Buskeen Eludes Arrest and Gains a Start of Seven or Eight Hours--Another Added to Our List of Murders.

By the United Press.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Senator Don Cameron has returned to Washington feeling quite comfortable over the snug majority the Pennsylvania Republicans gave on Tuesday last. In view of the frequent mention of Senator Cameron's name in connection with the nomination for the presidency, a reporter of the New York Sun proceeded to sound the senator on that subject. He declares positively that he has no presidential aspirations and never had "the bee in his bonnet," notwithstanding all the good-natured statements to the contrary. He says he would like to see Tom Reed elected president, for he believes he would make an admirable executive.

He considers Mr. Reed the strongest eastern man yet named, and he realizes that Harrison and McKinley are both in the field for the nomination. He says ex-President Harrison is as much a candidate now as he was two years ago. His work in the recent campaign showed that, and the enthusiasm he arouses wherever he appeared indicates that he still has many warm admirers in the Republican party.

TAUBENECK FEELS GOOD.

Populists Say It Is the Greatest Victory They Ever Won.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The Populists are beginning to crow over the election and to claim that the result is the greatest victory the People's party has ever won. They claim to have doubled their vote and effected the break-up of the solid south, and at the same time to have made the Populist party the only silver party in the United States. H. E. Taubeneck, the chairman of the national Populist party, indorses all these claims. He says that the party in the south and west will unite and make silver the only issue in 1896, and he thinks it is an issue upon which the Populists will win.

SALT FOR HIS WOUNDS.

Congressman Richards Given a Bag of Chestnuts by Democratic Soldiers.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The Democratic soldiers here purchased a bushel of chestnuts and sent them to Congressman Richards, at New Philadelphia, the defeated Democratic candidate. They did this because he referred to the petition of the soldiers, asking for the appointment of L. R. Kramer to the Wooster postoffice, as having no words to say to them, and called them "old chestnuts."

Beaten Populist Candidate Is Now Dying from Disappointment.

Redfield, S. D., Nov. 11.—Judge Isaac Howe, the Populist candidate for governor in the late campaign, is lying ill at his home here, with small hope for his recovery. The excitement and fatigue of the campaign were more than he could endure, and the tremendous majority against him is doubtless also a grievous disappointment.

Utah's two senators will decide the political complexion of the next senate, no one seems to know how Utah will go.

Reed, Harrison and McKinley are regarded as the axemen of the three leading candidates for presidential honors in 1896.

John Donovan, of Bay county, will constitute the Democratic party in Michigan's next legislature. He has 29 plurality.

For the first time in the history of Wayne county, O., every Republican on the state, district and county tickets received majorities and the county is Republican.

A revised count of the vote in the Sixteenth Illinois district elects Plais E. Downing (Dem.) by 57 majority over John L. Binaker (Rep.). This makes the Illinois delegation stand Republicans 21, Democrats 1.

It is reported that Attorney General Olney contemplates resigning, because the druggeries and responsibilities of the office are wearing on him. Congressman W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, is spoken of as his successor.

Senator John Sherman frankly admits he was greatly surprised at the dimensions of the avalanche. He attributes the result to a general protest against the Democratic administration by the American people, who are intelligent enough to know that the public business has not been conducted properly during the two years the Democrats have had control of the government.

ASSASSIN LAY IN AMBUSH

Following His Revolting Crime Joe Buskeen Eludes Arrest and Gains a Start of Seven or Eight Hours--Another Added to Our List of Murders.

By the United Press.

A foul and cold-blooded murder was committed last evening on "Bunker Hill," a section of Dunmore borough populated by Italians and situated near what is known as the old No. 8 plane. The murdered man was an Italian and his slayer, who has escaped arrest, is of the same nationality. Rather than murder, the crime was assassination, and the two Italian witnesses of the revolting act were too drunk after their effort to throw any light on the affair, and at an early hour this morning were laying in a bestial stupor in the Dunmore lockup.

The name of the escaped murderer is Joe Buskeen. He is about 25 years of age, 5 ft. 10 in. in height, of slender build, has a light colored, heavy, sandy mustache, curled at the ends, and is thought to be clad in a blue suit of clothes. Francis Combert, the dead man, was married and conducted a small store on "Bunker Hill." Both men worked a section hands on the Erie and Wyoming Valley railroad.

They had been drinking. During yesterday Buskeen, Combert, Tony Ritch and John Embriel participated in a drunken carousal in Dunmore, and while returning to "Bunker Hill" engaged in a quarrel at 6:30 o'clock which resulted in the murder of Combert near the railroad car shops. In the scuffle which ensued Combert's hat was knocked over into the water and the quartette had a general fight. Buskeen separated from the others and started toward the highway that runs up the hillside toward the railroad shops. About ten minutes later Combert and his two companions started along the same route.

When the trio reached a turn in the pathway about two rods below the Erie and Wyoming tracks a shot was fired and Combert fell upon the bank skirting the upper side of the path. A bullet had pierced his chest almost in its center and in a line with the heart. As Combert fell Buskeen sprang from the bushes and in the presence of his two fellow-countrymen fired another bullet into his victim's prostrate body.

Rich and Embriel made no attempt to detain Buskeen until he had run a short distance back and along the pathway, and when they started toward him the assassin halted them with his weapon and then ran to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western tracks and disappeared in the direction of Elmhurst. These particulars were gleaned chiefly from James Eilon, a watchman at the car shops across the brook, and from Italians who appeared on the scene shortly after the shooting and claim to have obtained their information from the two witnesses, who were for the moment sobored sufficiently to realize what was happening.

Murderer Had a Good Start. The Dunmore police and Justice of the Peace Scott were notified at once, but not until after 3 o'clock was a description of the murderer flashed over the wires from the Erie and Wyoming depot. Even then the description was given wrong and the error was not rectified until nearly midnight. Sheriff Fahney was given but meagre information of the crime shortly after it happened and he did not receive even a few details until several hours later. In the meanwhile County Detective Shea could not be located and at an early hour this morning the murderer had had a start of seven or eight hours.

Justice of the Peace Scott impounded the following coroner's jury which viewed Combert's body: P. C. Langan, Michael Finnerty, Patrick McHale, Frank Pettersall, Martin Gallagher and Mr. Beardon. At 10:30 o'clock the remains were taken to the establishment of Undertaker Letchworth to await an inquest by Coroner Kelley today. In the dead man's pockets were found a watch and chain, a small knife with the blade open and a little over one dollar in coin. When he left home earlier in the day he had over $25 on his person.

IS A TOUGH CHARACTER.

Buskeen, the murderer, has often been under arrest for fighting and petty crime, and has been considered a very tough character. He is married and childless. Combert's wife became quite ill after being told of her husband's violent death.

This is the sixth murder among the foreign element within the county within a few months. The most recent killing was that done by Merlo, who escaped to Italy after shooting down a fellow countryman in Old Forge in daylight, and in the presence of a hundred spectators. Previously in Taylor a man received a slash from a knife, the wound extending from the left shoulder down and across the bowels to a point over the right hip, the cut almost disemboweling him. At Archbold, two murders occurred recently. Last winter, on Blair avenue, this city, a Polisher named Tomalinus, while engaged in a brawl, was killed by a blow from an axe.

FUNERAL OF RUSSIAN CZAR

The Imposing Ceremonies at Moscow Yesterday.

STREETS PAVED FOR PARADE

Two and One-Half Miles of Cobble Pavement Laid in One Night--Grand Funeral Procession--Solemn Services in Iberian Chapel.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Nov. 11. The imperial party, with the body of Alexander III, arrived here today. Although thousands were busy all night putting the city in mourning for the late czar, the streets at daybreak looked as if some great festival was to be celebrated. But for the heavy folds of black which hung high and low on all walls, a person would have thought that the crowds thronging every corner and open space had come to celebrate a national holiday rather than to lament the death of a powerful monarch. Such ceaseless universal activity and such enormous numbers of peasants, tourists and soldiers had not been seen here since the coronation of Alexander III, more than ten years ago.

Ten thousand men worked all night to complete the paving of the city. More than a thousand were employed in paving with cobblestones the streets through which the body was to pass. They laid two and a half miles of cobble pavement and scattered over it layers of sand to smother the rattling of carriages and the clatter of cavalry.

The train with the body arrived at 10:40 o'clock. Czar Nicholas II was saluted as soon as he alighted by the Grand Duke Sergius, the metropolitan of Moscow, and Kolorada, the highest clergyman among the orthodox of the east. The procession was then formed in groups and the generals, who had removed the pall, bore the coffin slowly to the funeral car in the station yard. Then, amid the tolling of a thousand bells, the head of the huge column moved slowly toward the Red Gate.

FIEND AND A STILETTO.

Andrew Juka Stabs His Wife Eight Times While the Woman Was Begging for Mercy and Struggling for Life.

By the United Press.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 11.—One of the most brutal crimes on record in Luzerne county, and there has been many of them within the past two months, took place at Hazleton on Saturday. The perpetrator of the deed is Andrew Juka, his wife, Annie, being the victim. The scene where the tragedy occurred is a small house, one story high, located on Harrison street, on the outskirts of the city. From what can be learned, Juka left his wife several months ago, and has since lived with a friend in Hazleton. His wife had been living ever since they parted with her daughter, Mrs. Tara.

With a rope on which was a neatly prepared noose and a stiletto, he called at the residence of his son-in-law on Friday night. On Saturday morning he appeared to be rather pleasant and talked until the son-in-law, Tara, had gone to work. An hour later he made an attack upon his wife, Annie. He put the rope around her neck while she was alone in a room and managed to get it around the ceiling joist, but he found the latter too low and his attempt to hang her failed. In the meantime his wife fell upon her knees and begged in a most piteous manner to spare her life.

His daughter, the only other person in the house, heard the cries and ran to her mother's assistance, but this only enraged the brute all the more, and he began to again attack his wife with the sharp instrument.

The woman fought hard for her life, but the demon drove the dagger into her eight times in various parts of her body. The woman finally sank exhausted to the floor and her daughter, terror-stricken, fled to the neighbors, quite a distance away, for assistance.

The brute then fled from the house and ran up the mountain side and disappeared. Neighbors soon appeared at the house, and the unfortunate woman was at once removed to a more comfortable home. She is still alive tonight, but it is the opinion that she will not recover.

Constables are on the murderer's trail. Should he be brought back to the district of Luzerne, formerly in Hazleton, he will, in all probability, be lynched, as the indignation is at fever heat.

MR. WATTERSON'S OPINION

Holds President Cleveland Responsible for Democratic Defeat.

NOT CONSISTENT ON TARIFF

Intimates That the President Perched Upon the Wings of Every Honest Tariff Reformer--Bill Wilson Swallowed Too Much Advice.

By the United Press.

Cincinnati, Nov. 11. The Tribune will tomorrow publish a sensational but characteristic interview with Henry Watterson at Louisville. Its chief features follow:

"Who is to blame for Tuesday's defeat?" Colonel Watterson was asked.

"Why, Cleveland, of course," said Mr. Watterson. "More than any other man on earth. It's all his fault."

"And what's to become of the Democratic party?"

"I don't know. I am not certain whether we've got any Democratic party or not. One thing is certain. Tariff reform has got to go down to the dogs and start over."

"Do you mean that the Democrats must abandon the issue?"

"No, on the contrary. If I could make the platform in 1896 I would merely repeat in yet stronger language the platform of 1892. But a tariff for revenue only must be advocated hereafter only by men who are honest enough to keep their promises and brave enough to put the principle into law when the people have given them power. The Wilson bill was not a Democratic measure either before it left the hands of its author, or after it had been mangled and distorted by the senate. I am sorry for the fate that overtook William Wilson last Tuesday, but I cannot regret the thought that he accomplished his own defeat by listening to the counsels of others less courageous than he, and not daring to stand firmly for the pledges of his party."

Cleveland as a Reformer. "Grover Cleveland was never a consistent tariff reformer. When he became president of the United States it took him three years to find a policy, and then he ran away from it as soon as he was caught. In 1887, when he wrote that first famous message, he got so scared about it that ten days later he published an interview in the New York Herald, taking the backbone out of the whole thing. Then he sent Gorman and Scott to the St. Louis convention in 1888 with a cut and dried platform that made the most miserable and cowardly straddle on the tariff question ever invented."

"Look how Cleveland acted in 1892. William S. Vilas went to Chicago as the personal representative of this man who pretended to be the great pioneer, the John the Baptist of tariff reform. And what did they try to do? They tried to ram a protectionist essay down the throats of self-respecting Democrats. They stole a plank out of the Republican platform and wanted a Democratic convention to indorse it. Finally, when he was elected president despite this apostasy to the principles of his party, Cleveland deliberately sat on the wings of every honest and able advocate of low tariff, and forced the wretched Wilson bill upon the party, with all its labyrinth of trouble."

"To this action of a Democratic president may be chiefly ascribed the demoralized condition of the Democratic party."

"Now, who shall the Democrats nominate in 1896?"

"Oh, my Lord, man," said, "don't talk about that. What I am afraid of is the possible fact that it may make very little difference. A strong effort will be made in the next Democratic national convention to send the tariff issue to the rear and raise the strange banner of free silver. This may split the party in a thousand pieces, or destroy it altogether."

"Could the Democrats win upon the issue of free silver?"

"Never. It would be a fatal step for the party to take. Yet we must be prepared to see the attempt made to commit Democracy to that financial heresy. Our only hope is to stand by our guns and stick to the demand for constitutional tariff."
