NEWS OF THIS VICINITY

PITTSTON.

Yesterday was a typical November day. The sun shone at intervals only to be as suddenly lost sight of by drifts of snowflakes that veered in turn from the north, south, east and west. Despite its disagreeableness, however, large crowds professed the principal thoroughfares of the town. The young miss with her new winter wrap and the young man decked in the latest patterns of the tailors' art was none the less conspicuous. The several churches were well attended throughout the day, especially the evening services.

THACKERAY'S LOVE OF BOYS.

One Who as a Youth Knew the Great Writer Remembers His Experiences.

My earliest recollections of Thackeray date from the spring of 1847, a period that time to spend a few days with him at the end of the Easter holidays before going back to Eton. He was then living with his two girls in the hospitable white brick house 18 Young street, Kensington, which I can never pass unmoved. His handsome old mother and dear old stepfather, Major Carmichael Smyth, who had been governor of Addiscombe, and in some respects was the original of Colonel Newcome, were also living with him.

He was then but at the dawn of his fame. "Vanity Fair" begun in January, 1847, was completed in July, 1848. "Pendennis" came out in 1848-9. I well remember the first numbers of the former in their yellow paper covers, and the illustrations in vignettes from his own pencil. It was in 1850 that his long connection with Punch came to an end.

I recollect being astonished and amused at the same time by his interest in the ideal, which were constantly being brought to him on their foxwood blocks before being printed off. In these visits, which took place every year till 1852, when I went to Oxford, I instinctively felt that he was far greater than any one whom I had ever met. And looking back after an interval of forty years, I feel that I was not wrong, and that there was something in his mind and character larger and more spacious, more liberal, with less admixture of anything petty or unreal or affected than I had been my fortune ever to meet.

One was naturally attracted by his fine, lofty figure, his bright eyes, his kindly, pitying, amusing smiles, and his cheery greeting. There was nothing in the least deterrent or formidable in him--and most boys are quick to see if they are regarded as bores by their elders. Mrs. Leslie Stephen well says, "His kindly feeling for the cause, his lightness of touch, his recommendation of the great duty of administering 'tips'--a duty which he took care to discharge effectually in his own person."

I can bear witness to the truth of this from my own experience. I never visited, rarely saw, him at this time without having a sovereign alighted into my hand on leaving him. On one occasion after I had my pocket picked in an omnibus he emptied the whole of his purse into my hands. The exact amount, at this distant date, I do not remember, but it was much more than I had lost.

On these delightful visits he would spare no pains in taking me to places of amusement--the play or the pantomime--sometimes after an excellent dinner at the Garrick club, where I remember his checking some one in the act of blurring out an oath, the utterance of which he would not tolerate in his presence. "Chronicle of St. George."

There is a doubt of the validity of the election recently held whereby the vote for a city charter carried, and it is understood steps have already been taken by the saloon and brewery men to ascertain the fact. The question raised, it is understood, is that the question was not properly submitted to the voters.

At a meeting of the school board held Friday evening, the following teachers were engaged to teach the winter term of night school: Jennie Crowley, Anna Crowley, Anna Gwynn, Laura Morris, Miss Barnes, Messrs. Egan, Bryden and Lynott were appointed a committee to place the teachers.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Jed Hitchner and Miss Kate Hastie, to take place at the latter's home on Thursday evening, Nov. 22.

There is a fire at an early hour yesterday morning destroyed a frame dwelling and its contents on Elizabeth street belonging to Mr. Conway. So rapidly did the flames envelope the structure that Mr. Conway and his family barely escaped with their lives. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

The funeral of M. J. Hogan occurred yesterday afternoon and was attended with military ceremonies. Company C, of which he was a member, and Company H turned out to do honor to his memory. The remains were borne to St. John's church where the office for the dead was said. At the close of the services the remains were taken to Market Street cemetery and interred in the family plot. When the casket was lowered into the ground the military fired three volleys over the grave.

The news of the death of Charles Allen, as noted in The Tribune Saturday morning, while expected, was a terrible shock to his relatives and friends, particularly to his poor mother, who all along had hoped her only support would be spared to comfort her declining years. When the news reached her that her son had departed this life her grief can well be imagined. Arrangements for the funeral have been made to take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the family residence on Scallow street.

The school directors of the borough as a token of respect have ordered the schools to be closed today and the flag on the high school building to be displayed at half mast. The board as a body will attend the funeral.

The Republicans of the lower end of the county tendered Congressman-elect John Leisenring a serenade and reception at his home in Upper Lehigh Saturday night. Large delegations of Republicans from Wilkes-Barre and this place attended and participated in the festivities, which consisted of an ox roast and speech making.

The case of the borough treasurer, Mr. J. Langan, against Councilman J. H. Tighe, which was set down for trial Friday, was postponed. Mr. Tighe says this makes the seventh time the case has been postponed without his consent.

The many friends in this place of Dr. P. J. Gibbons were pleased to learn of his success as narrated in The Tribune. The story of his wonderful discovery was read with avidity, and the fact of him being a former resident of this place made the story all the more interesting.

Marriage Customs

In Java the bride washes the groom's feet as a token of subjection.

In Hungary, at one time, the groom gave the bride a kick for the same purpose during the wedding ceremony.

Horseback weddings, where groom and bride ride at full speed away from their pursuing attendants, are still somewhat seen in Tartary.

Among the Borneo head hunters a young man, in offering marriage to a young woman, had to present her with the head of a man killed by himself.

Tournefort says "that among Greek rustics today the bride and groom run the gauntlet of young folks of their acquaintances, who kick and cuff them as they pass
