His Repartee Did't Win.

From the Detroit Free Press.

The woman had been cleaning house and when she was tired enough to feel like throwing her best parlor chair at any visitor who might come, a book peddler presented himself.

"Madam," he began, "I have here—"

"Stop right there," she interrupted, "have you a mother?"

"I used to have, madam."

"Have you a wife?"

"Yes, madam, and I'm trying to make a living for her, ain't I have here—"

"Stop there!" she interrupted again.

"If a man came to her when she was as dead tired as I am and made matters worse by trying to sell her a book, what would you want her to do to him?"

"I should want her to buy his book as soon as she could and get rid of him, madam."

"Well," she snapped, "I'm glad I'm not your wife. Now you get out of this, quick, or she won't have as poor an excuse for a husband as she already has," and he stood not upon the order of his going.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH SIDE

Attempt Made to Tap the Tilt of Patrick Donnelly's Hotel.

BURGLAR CAUGHT IN THE ACT

He Is Given a Sound Beating and Kicked Out of Doors—Sunday Y. W. C. A. Services and Other Association Men Stop—Death in Miller Family.

Few men possess the temerity evinced by a young man named Peter Sullivan, about 21 years of age, who attempted to burglarize the hotel of Patrick Donnelly, on Bech street, yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. At 8 o'clock in the morning Sullivan first went into Donnelly's hotel. His actions were suspicious and he did not remain long. About 10 o'clock Mr. Donnelly left the hotel and went to the next house. In a few minutes he returned to the barroom of the hotel. When he entered he saw Sullivan behind the bar industriously rifling the cash drawer and he rushed quickly and grappled with him. In the encounter Mr. Donnelly threw Sullivan to the floor and held him there by the throat. Three dollars and a half in silver fell to the floor, and as that appeared to be all in Sullivan's possession Mr. Donnelly then kicked him out of doors. When the robber got to the street he commenced to throw stones at the windows and Mr. Donnelly had to fire two shots to scare him away.

He left behind a pair of overalls and a drilling jacket and a memorandum book fell from his pocket. The book had on the cover the compliments of Miller Bros., wholesale merchants, of Dwight, Ill. Sullivan told Mr. Donnelly on his first visit that he was a steam fitter in search of work. It has been learned that he arrived in Scranton but a few weeks ago and is staying with a family on Pittston avenue. He has relatives on the South Side.

Y. W. C. A. Notes.
