NOTABLE PUBLIC BUILDINGS

The Chateau Frontenac is an Excellent Hotel, but It Looks More Like an Imposing Sixteenth Century Castle.
Other Interesting Structures.

Special Correspondence of The Tribune.

Quebec, Dec. 8.--Next to the fortifications the public buildings of Quebec interest the visitor; though not numerous, nor any of them striking in architectural beauty, they are all unique in design and many are costly and imposing structures, the most prominent among them are the Chateau Frontenac, the new parliament building, postoffice and court house. All are worthy of special mention.

The Chateau Frontenac, alluded to in a former letter, stands on a historic spot of more than ordinary interest to the tourist--the site of old Chateau St.
Louis--the vice-regal residence of the governor general of Canada, for the last 200 years. The site and the hotel are worthy of each other, being located within "the historic walls of the only walled city of America." It is a massive, shapely edifice, occupying a commanding position on the eastern extremity of Dufferin terrace. It is seven stories high, fire proof, and cost nearly one million dollars. It is built of Scotch brick and gray stone in the sixteenth century style of architecture. Over the main entrance is a stone found in the walls of the old chateau, when that was being torn down, and bears the date of 1647.

Like an Ancient Castle.

The stone and brick from which it is built is found in the immediate vicinity of Quebec. The structure is skillfully planned and peculiarly adapted to its location. It has numerous curvilinear, turrets and towers. Even its gray stone and dull brick harmonize well with the sober, quaint architecture of the old fortress city. The interior is luxurious, while the exterior blends with its surroundings most beautifully. Of its 175 rooms, nearly all face the magnificent stretch of river, sky and far-off mountains.

Faith Fenton, describing it, says:
"The rooms are bow-shaped, crescentshaped, circular, acute-angled, obtuseangled, triangular, hexagonal, everything except right-angle. It might be called a horse-shoe hotel, for thus it is shaped, having as many interior curves and corners as outer ones. The interior is so constructed that all the offices, service rooms, even the main entrance hall, with its pillared gateway, look out upon the inner curve and court, leaving every bit of the outer circle that faces the magnificent views, to be devoted to the parlors and guest rooms." It is elegant and artistically furnished; the furniture is chiefly oak, of Canadian and English design, the antique prevailing. Handsome brass bedsteads, oak furniture and cozy upholstery are found in each room. It is carpeted throughout with Axminster and Wilton, mainly in crimson and moss greens. The rooms are large and well lighted, and all contain hot and cold water, and the majority bath conveniences. We were shown through the entire structure, even to the fourth, fifth and sixth stories, and to our surprise, found them as roomy and as desirable as the lower flights; in fact, the higher one climbs the wider and grander the panorama of river, mountain and sky that unfolds to the view.
It is truly the most unique, commodious and convenient hotel we have ever seen, and unlike anything found in the United States. It was named after one of Quebec's most illustrious French governors, Count de Frontenac, whose chateau occupied the site, in 1690, on which this hotel now stands. I should mention that its rates are $3.50 $5 per day, and under the efficient management of Frank H. Stanton, the Frontenac in all respects--excellence of cuisine, table furnishings and polite attention to the tourist--is equal to the palatial hotels of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco. I should add that in close proximity to the terrace are three other unpreten-tious, but good hotels, with cheaper rates--the St. Louis, Florence and Russell House. The new Florence is of modern structure.

The Governor's Garden.

This is a public park, located a little in rear of the Chateau Frontenac, and containing about three acres. It is a pleasant retreat and adorned by one of Quebec's most interesting memorials to a double-faceted column, decked with military trophies, sixty-five feet high, erected in 1827 and 1828 to the memory of the two illustrious English and French generals, Wolfe and Montcalm, in joint honor. For four generations have vanquisher and vanquished laid silent in the grave, but their names are kept alive and linked together in history. Mounted in this park are several large smooth-bore cannon and in the lower garden is a battery which commands the harbor.

Terrace Promenade and Illuminations.

A stroll on the Terrace by night watching the lights spring out in Lower Town and Point Levis is enjoyable in the extreme. The Terrace is the favorite promenade of the citizens and tourists, and presents an attractive scene in the late afternoon or on pleasant Sundays. The view from the Frontenac balcony on a summer evening when the terrace is thronged with a thousand promenaders and when the city is dotted with electric lights, and Point Levis is sprinkled with its bright lights and the Lower Town has illuminated its narrow streets and its long dormer windows, and the lively murmur of business is heard and the eye can discern the lights and shadows of the outgoing and incoming vessels
marvelous animation and splendor. Especially attractive is the view as seen from the opposite shore on approaching the city at night--as was our experience. The electric lights which encircle the fortress, shining in the distance through the evening haze, make Quebec truly the most wonderful of cities "set on a hill which cannot be hid." The Citadel band, or those of the visiting war-vessels, play regularly in pleasant weather upon the terrace stand to the delight of the guests of the Frontenac and citizens of both Upper and Lower Town. The band of the English man-of-war, Tourmaline--composing thirty pieces--is playing "God
randum.

The Quebec Postoffice.

The Postoffice, an imposing stone building with its old French quatrains and quaint figures, is an attraction to the curious visitor. It occupies the site of the Grand Place of the early French Town, on which encamped the Huron tribe of Indians under shelter of the fortress. In its front wall is a figure of a dog, carved in the stone and glided, under which is this unique inscription:

.....
I am a dog, gnawing a bone.
While I gnaw I take my repose.
The time will come, though not yet,
When I will bite him who now bites me.

This lampoon was aimed at the intendant Pigot by M. Philibert, a merchant who had suffered wrong from him, but was afterward avenged in the intendant's assassination by an officer of the garrison.

The Public Gardens.

We visited the Public gardens and Market place, and found them both interesting. Market Square is near the center of the Upper Town, on the site of the Jesuit college, which has recently been torn down, and its place remains drearily empty. A quaint sight awaits the visitor. On one side is the Basilica. Near it, on the curb-stones, are old peasant women, hovering over baskets of maybe belated fruit and vegetables; also peddlers of household goods and utensils. On the upper side is a row of quaint stone houses, inns and shops. Here are seen blue-eyed old citizens and peasants sitting in their doorways smoking and curiously gazing upon the shoppers and passers-by; while the open space is filled with vehicles of every description loaded with produce of the Province. On the lower side are the modern buildings and fine stores of the Rue Fabrique, and on the opposite is the long row of calleches with the hardy little French horses munching their oats from a leather-headed bag, while their drivers wait for a stray American to wander in, and for whom they make a wild, though good-natured rush, when he is lost sight of amidst the uproar. Be it to their credit, they do not understand each other, and after a choice is made, each "carter" returns to his place on the curb-stone, gazing upon the successful driver with a well out of sight.
Chief among the figures passing through are the spiritual fathers of the city in the ecclesiastical dress. Here, too, is the red-coated English soldier and the neat, little, polite French policeman in blue uniform and flaring havelocks, besides the proud sailor in the man-of-war, and the waist-faced habitant in his quaint attire. No such combination can be found outside of Quebec.

TUNKHANNOCK.

Dr. U. E. Dornise is home from Jefferson college, Philadelphia, for the holiday vacation.

Witnesses were called yesterday to testify in the case of S. M. Williams vs.
Mrs. S. M. Williams and John Collins, but the matter was finally adjourned without anything being done. The action brought is on account of alleged improper relations, divorce, etc.
Trouble has been brewing in the graded school at Lemon for some time through a misunderstanding between the principal teacher, Frank Vangorder, and various other people in the district, including some of the directors. The climax was reached Thursday night, when a special meeting of the directors was called and a lively debate ensued, in which two or three Tunkhannock lawyers took part. It was finally settled by the teacher resigning his position. The board will meet Saturday to hire a teacher to fill the vacancy.

Mrs. Jerry Murphy was arrested yesterday at the instance of J. and Mrs.
Al Harding on the charge of kidnapping a child. The child belonged to Mrs. Murphy, but being poor and somewhat unbalanced mentally, the poormasters legally bound the child over to the Hardings. They being dissolute and immoral in character, Mrs. Murphy took the child away. When brought before Esquire Drake she waived a hearing and gave bail in the sum of $200 for appearance at court. She still has custody of the child, and the courts will probably be called upon to decide whether the Hardings are proper people to be entrusted with it.

I. E. Wescott, of Nicholson township, was arrested by Detective W. H. Richmond and brought before Esquire Kutz yesterday morning, charged with complicity in the Waterman murder. By consent of the district attorney he was allowed to enter bail in the sum of $500, and was discharged.

The Lehigh Valley is having a heavy westward traffic these days.

Robert R. Little and Albert Miller were visitors to Scranton yesterday.

Mrs. J. A. Sittler and Mrs. E. N.
Stone returned from Philadelphia yesterday.

Among the Christmas Day weddings will be that of George Wilson, station agent for the Lehigh Valley at Wyat-tstown, to Miss Jessie Robinson, of For-kston.

Miss Edie Reynolds, assistant at the prothonotary's office, is quite an expert typewriter.

Attorney F. F. Drake is out again after an attack of the quinsy.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Reynolds have returned from their vacation.

George Grow, of Eaton township, was reported very low with typhoid fever yesterday morning, and his death was hourly expected. The trouble is believed to have been brought on by drinking water from an old well on the premises, his wife having only just recovered from the same disease when he was stricken down.

S. D. Streeter is expected home from Cornell university today.

A dispatch was received here Thursday night stating that Morris Dupue, of Lake Winola, was dead. Later another came saying he was still alive, but very low.

Colonel E. S. Handrick is home from Ohio.

The county commissioners are holding under advisement the matter of re-indexing the deed books at the recorder's office. The indexing hitherto, ever since the county was formed, has been very crude, and, in many instances, improperly done, and the consequence is that the books are almost worthless. To re-index them properly is an intricate and laborious job, and one that will be expensive. It should not be entrusted to green hands.

Dr. E. H. Hill read an essay before the meeting of the Homeopathic Medical society at Wilkes-Barre Thursday on the cactus family, and presented each of the members present with an ounce of the tincture of cactus, prepared by himself. He distills it from the blossoms of the night-blooming cactus.
