UNSPEAKABLE TURK

Subject of Rev. Dr. McLeod's Address at Armenian Meeting.

POREIGN POLICY CRITICISED

The Reverend Speaker Said That He Was Convinced Turkey Would Not Have Answered England as She Did America in the Jewitt Matter.

Following is the text of the thoughtful but spirited address delivered by Rev. James McLeod, D. D., at the Armenian freeting in Elm Park church on Saturday night:

"The Unspeakable Turk!"--This characterization of the Turk is severe; but it is not too severe. Carlyle hit the nail on the head and elinched it; and, hence, "The Unspeakable Turk" will stick as long as the Turk continues to be "unspeakable." We have met this evening to be stored to the control of the total carlot. It is no pleasant duty that we are called upon to discharge, but it is a duty which against it, escaped the punishment it so richly deserves. But, although the Turk is a past master in the art of evasion and denial, the time is not far of the world.

It is not yet twenty years since Turkey assumed an air of injured innocence, and stoutly denied her guilt, when she was charged with the BulIf Armenia is to remain a part of the garian atrocities. But the whole world knows that she was guilty; and the penalty she then paid for her cruel crimes was the subdivision of a part of her territory. It was far too light a punishment. That would have been a punishment. That would have been a good time to carve up Turkey, and divide it among the adjoining Christian nations; and if England had lifted up her voice, at that time, as she ought to have done; if she had used her power against Turkey, as she should have done, she could have put an end to Turkish tyranny, and Turkish injustice, and Turkish atrocities for ever.

Begeonsfield's Course of Action.

Beaconsfield's Course of Action. But Beaconsfield was prime minister of England then, and his sympathies were with the Turks instead of the Christians. If, at that time, the prime minister had been Gladstone instead of Beaconsfield we would not be here tonight, to utter an indignant protest against the massacres of the Christians of Armenia. History is repeating itself. of Armenia. History is repeating itself. The Turk of today is no improvement upon the Turk of 1876. The Armenian atrocities are quite as barbarous and quite as brutal as were the Bulgarian atrocities. The cynical sneers and odious jokes of Disraeli when he acted as an analogist for the Turk in Bulas an apologist for the Turk in Bul-garia, find a parallel in the sneers and denials of those who are now acting, as if they were the subsidized agents and apologists for the Turk in Armenia. If an English Jew and his Tory ad-mirers could not deceive Christendom then neither can a Spanish Jew and then neither can a Spanish Jew and his Tory sympathizers deceive Chris-tendom now. Although Disraeli sneered and joked, said that the Bul-garian atrocities were only "coffee-house babble," yet he could not sup-press the hot indignation of Christian England. The whole nation, under the lead of the immortal Gladstone, rose up as one man and denounced the Turk aration and reform. Not only was the heart of England stirred to its depths, but all Christendom was thrilled as the Grand Old Man, day after day, poured out his flery indignation up the head of "The Unspeakable Turk.

He demanded in the name of justice, in the name of humanity, in the name of England, and in the name of Christendom that the Ottoman reign in Christendom that the Ottoman reign in Bulgaria must stop, and that, hence-forth, Bulgaria as well as Bosnia and Montenegro and Herzegovina must be put beyond the reach of Turkish typut beyond the reach of Turkish ty-ranny. This demand was, in a measure, conceded by the treaty of Berlin. But the character of the Turk was not changed. The leopard kept his spots. The Turk was still a Turk—the same in his brutal nature, the same in his envenomed feelings, and the same in his murderous hatred toward Christians—and this fad accounts for the Armenian atrocities.

The brazen impudence of the sublime porte, you must have noticed only a few days ago, in requesting England to repudiate the utterance of Mr. Glad-stone in respect of the Armenian atroci-But England has not complied with that request. England knows the Turk, and England knows that Gladstone has told the truth, and that he has voiced the feelings of the English nation.

He Is a Merciful Man.

Mr. Gladstone's opposition to the Turk is easily explained. Mr. Gladstone is a merciful man and full of tenderness, but the tender mercles of the Turk are cruelty. Mr. Gladstone believes in civil and religious liberty; the Turk believes in civil and religious slavery. Gladstone loves peace; the Turk delights in war, Gladstone believes in progress; the Turk has no use for progress. There is no such need as progress in his social or political dictionary. But "above and beyond and before all also Mr (Dadstone on Chatham square, "On the yond and before all else, Mr. Gladstone is a Christian," and as in the case of the Bulgarian atrocities, so, now, he sees the great anti-Christian power standing where it ought not, in one of the fairest provinces of Christendom, and stained with the record of odious cruelty, practiced through long centuries, on its defenceless subjects, who have been worshippers of Jesus Christ. This is the key to the secret of his opposition to Turkish tyranny. He has told the truth about Turkey, and he is not going to recant, nor will England ask him to apologize to Turkey.

I have seen no demand or request from the sublime porte asking the United States to repudiate the utterances of any of our great men touching the Armenian atrocities. I am not pre-pared to say that if such a demand were made, it would not be compiled with immediately. Certainly, we have no reason, as a nation, to be proud of our attitude toward this burning question. Our request that Mr. Jewett, one of our consuls, be allowed to accompany atrocities has been indignantly refused. A reply to that refusal, accompanied by three or four of our ironclads, would have been a fitting response, and it would have been hailed with delight by the whole Christian world. We have been told that it is both inex-pedient and impossible for the United States to interfere in the eastern question. It may be inexpedient so far as making a declaration of war is con-cerned. But, surely, it is neither inex-pedient nor impossible for the United States to join hands and hearts—say with England, and Germany and Russia, and use all its moral power, all its diplomatic skill. in the interests of humanity, and say in a way that Turkey will understand that her barbarous butcheries of Christians must stop. The United States can appoint consuls to Turkey—as many as she pleases—and the United States is abundantly able to protect her consuls in any part of the world.

Jewett Espisode Discussed.

I am not well versed in political diplo-macy, but I think I know enough about it to warrant me in saying that if our president or secretary of state, when the sultan refused our request, had in-duced Mr. Jewett to go to Sassoun and duced Mr. Jewett to go to Sassoun and investigate the reported Turkish out-rages, Mr. Jewett would have gone, and he would have been protected, too, and our president and state, by issuing that order to our consul, would have won the applause of the whole civilized world. But, as matters stand, the Turk is on top, and our diplomatic secretary of state has meekly swallowed his insult. Would meetly swantowed his insult. Would England's foreign secretary—the Earl of Kimberly—or Lord Rosebery, or Gladstone, if he were now prime min-ister, have allowed Turkey to insult England after that fashion? Not much;

even Turkey knows it.

even Turkey knows it.

We are told not to speak evil of dignities, and we must not do it. Yet an occasion may, once in a while, arise when we may be justified in imitating Michael, the archangel, who, in the case of a celebrated dispute, refused to speakable." We have met this evening to protest against the outrages and atrocities which the Turks have imflicted upon the Armenian Christians. It is no pleasant duty that we are called the case of a celebrated dispute, refused to bring against his infernal opponent a railing accusation, but he did say: The Lord rebuke thee! That was a right-ecus rebuke, and that same rebute. It is no pleasant duty that we are called upon to discharge, but it is a duty which we owe to ourselves, to our country, to our persecuted fellow-Christians, and to our God.

The recent Turkish massacres of Armenian Christians are so horrible and so infernal that they have aroused the indignation of the whole Christian world They cry to heaven for vengeance, and that these cries against humanity will be avenged, and that, sooner or later, the Turks will reap a righteous retribution, we need not have the slightest doubt. Thus far, the sublace of his carried the gratitude of his country, and he could have cited high authority in explanation, and in justification of his action. Perhaps it is not yet too late for this great Christian nation to do something to lift the burden of shame and vice and suffering from those oppressed people—our fellow Christians—who have been trodden down and cruelty persecuted whenever Ottoman tyranny and cruelty have thosen to assert themselves.

The Armenian Christians must be protected in their God given rights, and it will be to the everlasting credit of the United States if she will have a distant when he will be unmasked, and when, in all his hideous deprayity, he will be, once more, exposed to the gaze is sounded, I would like to have it ap-

If Armenia is to remain a part of the Turkish dominion, then two or three things must be demanded, and they must be granted.

First-Armenia must have a Christian governor. He must be, in large measure, independent of the sublime porte. To this end, he must be a gover-nor who will be appointed by and with the consent of the Christian nations the powers who are parties to the treaty of Berlin. Such a governor would be independent of the orders which might issue, from time to time, from Constantinople. Second-There must be such a re organization of the courts of justice in Turkey that a Christian and a Turk will stand on an equal footing before the law. At present, the Christian has no chance of escape from his Turkish accusers.

Third—The system of esplonage and of taxation of Christians is insufferable, and it must be stopped. The Turk must, henceforth, recognize the fact that Armenian Christians have a right to life, liberty, and the pursult of happiness. Those three reforms, at least, must be granted if Armenia is to remain a part of the Turkish empire. But there is an infinitely better way to dispose of these Armenian atroci-ties, and of all other questions which affect Christians who are Turkish sub-jects. What is this better way? It is this: Blot the name of Turkey off the map of the world! Divide the Turkish territory among those Christian na-tions who are willing to take it! Drive out the Turks, bag and baggage, from the lands they have desolated and from the people whom they have despoiled! The Turk, as a ruler, has disgraced the civilized world long enough, and the time has come when Christendom ought to dispose of the Turkish question once and for ever,

IN LOCAL THEATERS.

A new musical farce-comedy called by the peculiar title of "Hot Tomales" will be presented at the Academy of Music on Thursday evening by a clever company, headed by the great comedians, Conroy and Fox. "Hot Tomales" signifies nothing as applied to the play, unless it is meant to designate a hot concoction, rich in wit, warm with humor and so well spiced with bright and catchy music that it stirs the appetite for more and better things, which are well supplied in the acting of the principals, Conroy and Fox, and that eleverest and most inimitable of Irish comedlennes, Miss St. George Hussey,

"On the Bowery," the scenic drama of New York life, written by R. N. Stephens and produced by Managers Davis and Keough with great pictorial dis-play, is a play of rapid action. The first act passes on one night and the events of the remaining four acts all occur on the night immediately follow The first act contains a burglary, ing. an attempted elopement, a false ac cusation and a sensational escape. The second act shows the furthering of a scoundrelly plot to destroy a woman and an exciting fight, in which a numof policeman participate, and of which the outcome enables the hero and Steve Brodle to go to the aid of the endangered woman. The third act presents a violent attempt to drown the woman in the East river, and the thrilling jump of Steve Brodie from Brookcidents on Chatham square, "On the Bowery" is announced to appear at the Academy of Music on Friday evening.

FIRST DAY OF THE TERM

Three Judges Presiding in Common Pleas Court.

CASES HEARD DURING THE DAY

Suit of S. B. Mott Against C. P. Jadwin Again on Trial-James O'Horo After Damages from the City of Scienton.

January term of common pleas court, which will continue in session for the coming three weeks, opened yesterday, Judge Gunster presiding in the main court room, Judge McPherson, of Harrisburg, in No. 2, and Judge Edwards in No. 3. The most interesting matter called for the attention of the court and jury was the assumpsit suit of S. B. Mott, as signee of the Hyde Park bank, against C. P. Jadwin. This case was called before Judge McPherson at 1.30 in the af ternoon and at adjournment the evidence of the plaintiff was all in and the defendant's side of the case was opened.

The incidents of the case are so well known as to render any recital of the details superfluous. The case was called on May 28, 1894, and tried before Judge Schuyler, of Easton. A verdict of $1,416.37 was rendered which was for the full amount of the claim with interest from 1885, the year the suit was first brought. On July 30 of last year Judge Schuyler heard arguments for a new trial and on the same day granted it. Attorneys John F. Scragg and Edward Merrifield appeared yesterday for the plaintiff and Attorneys C. Comegys and W. Gaylord Thomas for the defendant.

Suit About Wages. Judge Gunster presided at the trial of the suit for wages of the Elk Hill Coal and Iron company, defendant, and Patrick Swift, of Richmondale, plaintiff. Swift claims there is a balance due him for work done at the mines of the company in Richmondale, and the company alleges that the balance is in their favor, that Swift's family traded more than his wages and those of his son, in groceries and provisions and other incidental expenses, such as rent, fuel, etc. The case was given to the jury at adjournment.

In court room No. 3 Judge Edwards heard another wage suit, that of Charles Patchen against Levi Snyder. It was a trivial one, but the jury had SCHANK not agreed upon a verdict at adjournment, although they retired to deliberate early in the day.

A little while before adjournment the respass suit of James O'Horo against the city of Scranton was called before SCHANK Judge Edwards. The suit is for the seizure of the plaintiff's land on North SCHANK Washington avenue growing out of the opening of that thoroughfare, City Solicitor J. H. Torrey appeared for the city and H. M. Hannah for the plain-

In the wage suit of H. E. Riker against Adeline F. Smith a voluntary non-suit was taken. A compulsory non-suit was ordered in the appeal suit of Frank Savino against J. Flanaghan, Savino not appearing when the case was called. By agreement a verdict for the amount of the goods specified in the declaration was taken in the in-terpleader suit of Joseph Gluck against Marvin Pierce.

Disposition of Other Cases. Other cases on the list were disposed of as follows: Margaret Hughes vs. Delaware and Hudson Railroad company, trespass, continued; B. A. Welch vs. Allen Cigar Manufacturing company, interpleader, continued; Eagle Cigar manufactory vs. Allen Cigar Manufacturing company, interpleader, continued; Peter Cerini vs. Roche & Fadden, replevin, continued; Jackson Merryweather vs. city of Scranton, trespass, continued; C. L. Rice vs. Fidelity and Casualty company of New York, trespass, continued; Catherine Campbell, adminstratrix, vs. William Cougher, judgment opened, settled amicably; J. H. Gunster, assignee, vs. George A. Jessup and others, assumpsit, centinued; M. F. and M. E. Handley, vs. Mary Barrett, ejectment, continued; Thomas Monaghan vs. Borough of Blakely, trespass, continued; Thomas O'Nelll vs. city of Carbondale, trespass, continued; Morris and Essex Mutual Coal company vs. Delaware, Lacka-wanna and Western Railroad company, trespass, continued; William Marcy vs Hillside Coal and Iron company, eject ment, continued; Edward Toner vs. Central Railroad of New Jersey, trespass, settled off list.
