SCENES AT BROOKLYN STRIKE

Battalions of the Thirteenth Regiment Encounter Obstacles on Hicks Street. Sad Fate of a Curious Roofer. A Reign of Terror.

By the United Press.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 23 .- Blood was shed in starting cars on the Hicks street line of the Atlantic avenue system afternoon. Preparations were this tlement for them. made to open the line shortly after noon, Two battallons of the Thirteenth regiment were ordered to protect the route of the Hicks street cars. The first car was started from the Butler street stables at 2.26 p. m. It was car No. 156. On the front platform was a special policeman, and on the rear Officer Sward was on duty. Colonel men were locked up. Austen deployed his men over several blocks in the nighborhood where he anticipated trouble. The Second battailon got a hot reception in the region about Hicks and Harrison streets. Stones, bottles and other missiles were thrown at them from windows They were taunted and ridiculed by people who stood on the doorsteps, and in at least one instance a revolver was pointed at them from a window. The first car itself was not attacked, but the militiamen themselves were the targets. Finally they ordered that all windows be closed and the sidewalks and doorways cleared. The people in the windows did not obey. There was a crack of a rifle and a piece of brownunion stone was chipped from a house front at the side of the window. The window was closed. People across the way leaned out over the heads of the troops and threw things. Crack, crack, spoke the guns and bullets whizzed past several heads. The police rushed into the house at 419 Hicks street and ar-
