BURNS THE POET HONORED

Annual Banquet of the Caledonian Club at the Westminster.

PRaises OF THE BARD OF AYR

Many Eloquent Speakers in Beautiful Language Told of the Merits of Scotland and Her Immortal Poet—These Who Attended the Banquet.

Patriotic songs of rugged Caledonia assembled once more around the festive board for the great object of the Scotchman's calendar, to commemorate the birth and perpetuate the un-fading memory of the greatest of their country's poets, Robert Burns. Every year at the close of the year that follows but lovely country travels all parts of the earth in the name of the immortal Burns, and by increasing numbers in every corner and part of the globe.

Over 125 years ago, Robert Burns has left behind him monuments which will never fade. In truth, the genius of Scotland, his writing and exquisite poems are held almost sacred by the Highland laddies and the sentiments depicted the plain and common life of the shepherd upon Scotland's rugged brows bring back to the memory of those who find in the charms of the homes of their youth and the days of their happy childhood. No wonder, then, that the representatives of the Caledonians in Scranton should be enthusiastic in revering and honoring the memory of one who occupied an essential part in the history of their country and nation.

Those Who Attended.

The following sat around the supper table: Chief John Simpson, Mr. Lewis, John M. Harris, Miss Matie Evans, Miss Anna Russell, Thomas Russell, Mr. and Mrs. David Spruks, Dr. and Mrs. Stein, Alex. Dunn, Jr., Miss Julia Allen, David Fuhrman, Miss Jennina Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. Scott Inghis, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. James Williams, Mrs. George A. O'Toole, Nelson Teets, T. Owen Charles, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. George, Graham, Alex. Brown and F. C. Hand.

Letter from Burns.

During the banquet a letter in the handwriting of Robert Burns was read by Dr. Stein, of Scranton. The letter was dated "Edinburgh, June 16, 1793," and referred to family matters. The letter was written in a legible hand and was well preserved. At the conclusion of the banquet at 12 o'clock Rev. James McLeod returned thanks in appropriate terms, after which Miss Julia Allen played a pianoforte overture preparatory to the speeches of the evening. Chief John Simpson acted as toastmaster and in his introductory remarks referred to the life history of Robert Burns in eulogistic terms. Mr. David Spruks sang "Bonnie Sweet Bonnie" and gave an effective interpretation of this favorite Scotch ballad, which so delighted the company that an encore was demanded.

Ex-Chief James Moir responded to "The Memory of Burns," and said that he could not do justice to the memory of the great poet, whose name meant Scotland condensed into a personality. They were met, not to lament over his shortcomings, to rejoice over his aspirations. Burns appeared at a time when poets were at a low ebb. Self-cultured, lively imagination, endowed with common sense, and all these blended with a gift of music made the ploughman poet the greatest lyric poet of modern times. His words created a revolution in the world of poetry. His sympathy was unbounded. Some of the eminent critics were of the opinion that his power of words was inferior to his poetic power, but Burns, nevertheless, was a scholar of his times. Captain Moir concluded by quoting several extracts from the works of the poet.

Attorney J. E. Strang responded to the toast, "The President of the United States," and said that they assembled to do honor to the memory of a man, who, possessing great genius as a poet, partook in part of the frailties of human nature, which created in him a power they had never seen. In meeting together to honor such a man as Burns they were in reality honoring themselves. Scotland had many eminent writers in prose and verse yet the people had but one poet, the subject of their meeting that evening. The Scotch were a sturdy and hard-working people whose advent to this land was always welcome and if all those who arrived in this country were their equal in industry they would be equally welcome and the problem of emigration would soon be solved. Mr. Serage paid a warm tribute to the good qualities of the emigrants from Scotland and trusted that the time was not far distant when the presidency of the United States would be occupied by a representative of this nationality. While speaking on this subject he denounced the unjust criticism passed upon the president of the United States and his chief officers.

They sat still, as far as possible, discourage all such criticism, as it tended to weaken the authority and influence of the executive. In this country it is unfortunately the case that all citizens imagine themselves to be political bosses, and these 70,000,000 political bosses desired to show the president how to rule the country. Grover Cleveland, the present chief magistrate, was a clean and honest politician and, although they differed as to his official acts, they should respect the president, their political differences, and the present incumbent many years of useful labor for the benefit of the nation as a whole.

Miss Jennina Jones gave a thrilling rendition of "The Garden Martyr" and "The Land of the Living."

Chairman Thomas Russell responded to the toast of "Scotland, the Land of Our Birth," during which he remarked that such meetings inspired him with more patriotism for Bonnie Scotland. Not only was it the land of their birth, but the land of John Knox, the land of Wallace, the land of Thomas Carlyle, of William Ewart Gladstone, and Lord Rosebery, and last, but not least, the land of Robert Burns, the hero of the Scotchman's birthday company. Mr. Russell said he had trusted that if any one present had not been through the wild beauties of Caledonia he argued that one of the treats on earth had been lost. After describing at some length a tour in the Highlands, the speaker dwelt on the characteristics of Scotland as shown in their great achievements in this country and Canada, where they occupied positions of the greatest responsibility and importance. He contended that the songs of a country had much to do with the molding of the character of the people, and in this result they had but to refer to the noble deities and great thoughts expressed in the poems of Robert Burns. Scotland was best known for "The Cottar's Saturday Night" and "A Man's a Man for a' that." He then gave several interesting selections from Burns' work to prove his contention. Chairman L. McMillan gave "Scotland Yet." Mr. McMillan has a powerful voice and his song was well received.

Chairman Dr. James Stein, in an eloquent speech, responded to "America, the Land of Our Adoption," during which he gave a graphic account of the progress of the country. The origin of the population of America was a question not yet solved, but the proofs are in the bones of the prehistoric discovery of the skeletons in Florida, the Mississippi Valley and other places, and formed an interesting study for the people of the country. America had, however, progressed until she has spread her arms to welcome all into her fold. There is no nobler, more successful and prosperous at home, and respected and honored abroad, and this had been attained by indomitable pluck, energy and industry. America has no titles, no privileged classes or aristocracy, no nobles, no lords, no dukes, no earls having worthless titles, which were used for exonerating of taxes; true, that their higher classes may not be so highly polished as those of other countries, but the American people had a more manly character than any other nation. The Scotchmen had proved of great assistance in building up this great country by their progressive habits and thrift. He therefore urged his Scotch compatriots that while true to the traditions of their dear old country, they should in their bearing and conduct be true to the laws and usages of this country.

Sturdiest People in the World.

A rigorous climate, simple taste, rugged amusements, and plain living, are the characteristics of the Scotch people. "As proud as a Scot" is an old proverb, and so far as it indicates pride of country, it is a true one. Scotch manhood is as native to the soil of Caledonia as is the thistle, and who shall say that the thistle has not its uses? The Scotchman is patriotic. He clings tenaciously to the ties and associations of his youth. No matter how distant he may be in other countries of the world may have been, he returns to his own home with keener delight in its simplest pleasures than in all the luxuries of the East.

We commemorate tonight the memory of Robert Burns. Burns was pre-eminently Scotland's bard. In him was crystallized a personality that represented the Scotchman's soul. The rugged elements in the Scotch character. We may be better able to appreciate the true worth to Scotland, and the life history of Robert Burns, if we take the measurement of their contemporary in one of the sister isles. It should be remembered that the Scotch land that in an age so cramped, in an atmosphere so artificial, that a gentleman lived and thought and felt and worked out his own life by the name of the Duke. In two men Robert Burns and Walter Scott, are realized the great possibilities of Scotch manhood.

Education in Scotland.

Education in Scotland was never circumscribed by conditions of wealth. The philosophers and educators of Scotland have always addressed themselves to the people as well as to the learned classes. This condition of education is not prevalent in so large a degree among the nations of continental Europe. The history of Germany, particularly in philosophical subjects, the most powerful intellect in the world, has turned the language of the people to its use and has succeeded in making it so difficult, so subtle and so full of inversions, as to be unintelligible to the average understanding. The comprehensive mind of the Scotch philosopher does not go so far; it meets with an opposing force and halts in the field of common sense. There is nothing every day of it, and it is not a practical motive. In its broad sense, the question suggests itself to the thinkers, will the particular movement lessen the burdens of mankind.

She founded the only system of philosophy which has found expression in the English language, namely the Scotch school of philosophy. In the development of which some of the greatest minds in the history of education have been engaged, men like Reid, Stewart, and Hutcheson. The speaker also dwelt on the bravery of the Scotch, their eloquence and business tact, and closed with an eloquent tribute to the memory of the late Dr. McComb, of Princeton, who was Dr. Harris' said, the embodiment of all the elements of genuine Scotch manhood. Chairman Lindsay McMillan sang "Scots Wha Hae," the great song of the Caledonia, after which S. G. Kerr responded to the toast of "The City of Scranton." In the absence of Mayor Connel, after which Miss Julia Allen recited a Scotch poem in a most effective manner. Ex-Chief James B. Sheehy responded to the toast of "The Caledonian Club of Scranton." The concluding toasts were "The Press," responded to by M. F. O'Toole, and the "Lassies," responded to by ex-Chief John Ross. The evening was brought to a close by a grand chorus of singing by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" in the most hearty manner by the company.
