SWALLOWED A SWORD.

Fatal Experiment of a Professional While Practicing at Muskegon.

By the United Press. Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 28 .- Albert Heiling, a professional fire eater and sword swallower, recently with Lee's circus, swallowed an eighteen-inch sword at the opera house last night while practicing for the Elks minstrels, and will probably die. In order to do the work better Heiling locked himself in a room by himself and proceeded to put three swords down his throat. He put three swords down his throat. He had inserted one safely, but the second sword struck the end of the first, driving it below the palate into the stomach. Then he climbed a ladder and called for help over the transom. Helling afterward walked nine blocks to a doctor's office and then home.

An operation was performed by Drs. Denslow, Garber and Vanderlaan. Be-Heving the point to be at the base of the stomach, they made an incision there, but Helling had walked so far the sword had sunk into the lower portion of the abdomen, necessitating another incision. Heiling is 21 years old, and though he is strong, his recovery is doubtful.

other statement was that the free respir-nation of the poor showing made by the coal roads was to be found in the exist-ence of contracts with the independent operators by which the roads bought the former's coal at 60 per cent, of the tidewater price, thus making the freight rate but 40 per cent, or on the basis of 10 10 rate but 40 per cent., or, on the basis of 33.25 for stove at tide, only 31.30, the smaller sizes being even less. This is why the Lehigh and the Jersey Central dip so poorly, according to our Philadelphia con-temporary. This statement is so absurd as to be scarcely worthy of formal refutation, but it has appeared in several papers lately. If their agreement with the inde-pendent operators is what has kept the Lehigh Valley and Jersey Central from doing well why is it that the Reading which is comparatively free from this 'incubus' has not done well in its con business? On the other hand, why that the New York, Ontario and ern, which has a longer haul and handle no coal save what it buys on the 60 per cent, hasis from independent operators, makes a good showing? Its coal business than a third of the trade. Why did not the coal companies, controlled by the railroads and constituting more than twothirds of the trade, do well? Their advantage is the same as that of the independ-ent operators. As a matter of fact, we doubt whether the Lehigh Valley could complaining about the 60 per cent. agreement."
