J. W. DeWitt is home from Lacey.

Yesterday being a legal holiday the postoffice was closed except at stated hours, as is customary on such occasions. During the day an old former-looking man came along and essayed to enter. Bumping against the door, he drew back and gazed wrathfully at the notice in the window for a few moments and then freed his mind.

"It won't be more'n three years 'fore these dod gasted black Republicans 'll pass laws to make every day a holiday." And then he passed on, entirely ignoring the fact that a Democratic congress and executive had already made such a law superfluous.

Hon. E. J. Jordan has gone to Washington to hear the benediction pronounced.

The death of Mrs. S. H. Harrington occurred at Riverside, Ill., on Wednesday, and the funeral took place yesterday. The immediate cause of death was dropsy, although she had suffered from a complication of other diseases. She was a bright, vivacious lady and had many friends in this county, her native place and where she used to come back and spend her summers.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrington had a very pleasant home at Riverside, a suburb of Chicago, and with their two bright, robust children about them, seemed to be well conditioned to enjoy life for many years to come had not death crept into the household.

Miller, the photographer, will make a flashlight view of the audience at the patriotic entertainment Monday evening for the benefit of J. W. Reynolds post, grand army of the Republic. Other features of the evening's program will be living pictures, grand marches, May pole dances, and an address by Comrade R. V. Kennedy. The occasion promises to be of an interesting one and the cause is worthy of support. The admission fees are 25 and 50 cents.
