THE ANNA DICKINSON CASE

Plaintiff Subjected to a Searching Cross-Examination.

WENT OVER HER LIFE HISTORY

Examination Entitled by Sharp Retorts and Hits of Repartee—Remarks Made by Attorney Ferris in Opening the Case for the Defendants.

Miss Anna E. Dickinson's suit for $50,000 damages now being tried in the United States circuit court before Judge Acheson and a jury in court room No. 2 at the court house is one of the most important events in legal circles in the history of Lackawanna county's court. Miss Dickinson, the celebrated woman whose name is familiar in almost every state of the union, with the assistance of her counsel, Attorney McLain, of Wilkes-Barre, and ex-Judge Dalley, of New York, is endeavoring to convince a court and jury that Dr. U. Jackson and Holman and others of Pittston, on February 25, 1891, by force and against her will, removed her to the Danville insane asylum, while she was in her right mind and capable of managing her own affairs and that by reason of such confinement she has sustained damages to the amount specified.

Isaac Block, of Tioga county, was called as the first witness yesterday morning. What he had to say was of not much account. Miss Dickinson, herself, was called to the stand by her attorneys and asked to state what arrangements for lecturing had been interrupted by her incarceration in the asylum. Major Warren objected and the court sustained it. Then the witness was given the opportunity of the defense for cross-examination, which Major Warren conducted.

Something of her history.
She was born on Oct. 28, 1812, and branched out as a public lecturer at the age of 21 years. From 1833 until 1875 she had as many as 1,000 applications a year for lectures, but would deliver only 150 a year and received for each a sum ranging between $100 and $1,000. She could lecture on any subject, but had very pronounced views and feared that she would be sure to give offense to some of her hearers.

Major Warren carried on a most exhaustive examination and questioned her closely concerning the incidents of her life up to the time of her incarceration. The impromptu bits of repartee that frequently passed between him and her caused many a smile in the court, and Judge Acheson exhibited signs of mirth as well as the audience. She was asked if she had not often made use of opprobrious epithets to the servant, a young lady named Martha Brown. She replied that she did not recall Miss Brown a har, and that the term properly characterized her. She did not use profane language in the presence of Mr. Hall, of Pittston. Her health was good and she slept unusually well. She was not in the habit of going out on promenade or in public places not suitably dressed. She did not remember going out clad in a light wrapper, a red straw hat and a thin shawl.

She Was Not Complimentary.
In answer to the question whether the defendants had acted as gentlemen when they called to take her away, she replied that they demanded of herself more like house-breakers, kidnapers and ruffians. She denied that on the train she wanted to send messages to Jay Gould, ex-Governor Pattison, Whitehall Reid, and other distinguished gentlemen. She allowed a reporter of the New York Herald to interview her after her liberation, and he used no stenographic notes, but wrote up an interview with her from hearsay.
During the campaign of 1888 she received for her services on the lecture platform in the interests of the Republican party a sum of $5,000, and a hundred dollars short of $5,000. Mrs. Jessie Winterstein, of Danville, Mrs. Sallie Ackley, of New York, and Mrs. Louise McDonald, of Wilkes-Barre, were the next witnesses examined, and testified as to Miss Dickinson's health, appearance and general conduct. That closed the case in chief for the plaintiff.

A few minutes before 5 o'clock Attorney Ferris, of West Pittston, opened for the defense. He referred to the nobleness of an institution designed in such elaborate manner as the Danville asylum, and said that the defendants were actuated by the most worthy motives in incarcerating her. The defense would show, he said, that Miss Dickinson was not in her right mind previous to her incarceration. That she exhibited an undue fatality for men, threw kisses at men in public places, used to go out riding and applied the whip to the horse so that the whip had to be taken from her.

Actions She Is Charged with.
That she made purchases of large quantities of intoxicants at wholesale liquor stores; and, in fact, did many things which were absolutely inadmissible. One at her dressmaker's she fell upon the floor and rolled about and threw her feet up in the air in an indecent manner. Her sister another time found her tearing up telegram blanks at the Pittston depot, and could not get her home until she had sent a striking message to some distinguished person. She once ran half naked through the streets after the servant, and again she stabbed her sister with a scissors on the hand.
These things, Mr. Ferris said, coming from such a woman as Anna Dickinson were unequalled evidences of insanity. The case will be resumed at 9:30 this morning, a half hour earlier.

Mrs. Duggan Tells of the Laziest Man She Ever Met.

HE MAKES HIS CHILDREN BEG

Murray Loofs in the House Himself and Smokes His Pipe—Case of the Stock-ert Family of Moltke Avenue. Live with the Chickens.

A busy evening was spent by the Board of Associated Charities last night under the presidency of J. R. Cohen, F. J. Kelley, chairman of the child-saving committee, reported that representatives of the committee had called at the residence of Kate Moharan, on Tenth street, who had been charged with keeping a "brock easy," and against whom true bills had been returned by the grand jury for selling liquor without a license, and for selling liquor to minors.

The three children were respectively attired when the committee was present, and there was not sufficient indications of neglect to warrant any action on their part. The committee also visited the residence of Mrs. Stockert, on Moltke avenue, who had received relief from the poor board. The members found a large quantity of groceries of all kinds in a back room, and articles of clothing, comprising a variety of shoes, garters, rubbers, etc., sufficient to satisfy them that the family was not in need of clothing or food. The chickens occupied one of the best rooms in the house, the next room being occupied by an elderly broker who worked regularly at the mills. The board discussed the case at some length, and it was decided to request the poor board to direct their local physician to attend one of the children whose eyesight was affected, and that the board of health be requested to direct their sanitary officer to visit the house with a view to compelling the parties to abate the nuisances.

MR. TORBET IS COMING.

Board of Trade Men Will Talk About Tin Plate with Him.

Constant indications are being given of the development of the tin plate industry in this country, and from a report by Secretary J. J. Jetté, of the Association of Tin and Sheet Iron Manufacturers, there are now 152 mills in operation and under construction, and fifty-eight projected. Pennsylvania leads with 56 mills in operation; Indiana, 41; Ohio, 37; Virginia and West Virginia, 10; Missouri, 8; Maryland, 8; Illinois, 2. In Illinois 20 mills are projected; in Indiana, 14; Pennsylvania, 13; Maryland, 6; Ohio, 5. The capacity of mills built and building is given at 4,390,000 boxes annually. If those projected are built, it is expected in a few days, when the members of the manufacturing committee will make strenuous efforts to complete the arrangements for the organization of the new industry.

Good Standard Brands of Cigars.

The following letter was received by Mr. Price today from Mr. Mercereau referring to his recent purchase of Cigars. The Cigars also arrived this morning, and are being unpacked today.
Dear Sir:—I ship today the cigars as per your order of recent date, which is being sent you by the largest shipment of cigars ever consigned to Scranton.
I assure you that the cigars which the cigars were sold you is below the actual cost of manufacture.
The cigars are good standard brands, and my object of selling them to you at the price was to reduce my immense stock of cigars during the season in order to keep my workmen employed.
You are enabled to sell them at retail far below wholesale prices.
Awaiting your future valued orders, I remain,
Yours very truly,
E. C. MERCEURAU.

Relief for Rheumatism.

"This information," said a well known physician to a correspondent of the Telegram, "is of great value to people suffering from rheumatism in any form."
"The rheumatism is caused by acidity of the blood. It should never be neglected. This remedy, as I know by long practice, is very efficacious and it is as simple as it is powerful."
"Here it is," he added, "When a rheumatic twinge is experienced, the patient should buy a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and take one teaspoonful in milk or water to suit the notion of the bowels, three times a day, and continue daily until the last vestige of the malady has disappeared. That's all, but if taken as I have prescribed, it will save many doctors' bills, to say nothing of pains, aches and swellings. I've never known it to fail."—Albany, N. Y., Telegram.
