At a late hour on Thursday night, William Oakley, of Price street, who suddenly left his home on Sunday morning last, put in an appearance on the West Side. His family and friends had been anxiously waiting to hear from him, and some expected that foul play had been done. Mr. Oakley resumed his duties at Mears' store yesterday morning, where he was reside in the future. seen by a Tribune reporter. When asked concerning his recent whereabouts he smilled and made no answer. Mr. Oakley's story to his fellow-employers and others is that he boarded a coal train to go to Rendham Sunday morning and shortly before he arrived at his distination he was seized by a railway official and taken to Wilkes Barre, where he was placed in jail for stealing a ride on cars. As soon as he was released from custody he returned home. During his five days absence his wife and family worried a great deal. Letters were sent to several rela-

Mum Social on Ninth Street.

The members of the Simpson Methodfst Episcopal church choir and a few of their friends spent a very enjoyable evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Knauss, of Ninth street, Thursday evening. The event was a mum party. Each one was expected to come "mum" and stay so until 9 o'clock when a prize was given to one who had not spoken. The winner was Mrs. Frank Beck. The time was passed with games and music until 11 o'clock when a bountious repast was served by Mrs. Knauss, Harry Edwards and Isaac

But there are safe and distinct methods of gauging the "greatness" of the two men without mak-ing an odious comparison of their works. The lecturer lays great stress upon the services rendered by Scott in recalling the customs and practices of the by-gone centuries as he presumed they existed in the wilds of Caledonia. It is exceedingly doubtful, if his descriptions were correct. probably they were mere fiction, but granted that they were absolutely faithful reproductions, then I ask what practical enefit is derived from the description of the lives of the Scottish knights and their boors? What assistance does it give in solving the great problems of the present day? Their paltry actions were buried in the obscurity of ages and their being brought forth to the light of day served but little practical purpose to any one, ex-cept, perhaps, those persons possessed of a norbid craving for fantastic tales of a for-

In the large room about 150 railroaders were assembled listening to Mr. McKenna's dissertation on the technicalities of the "Air Brake," In the social room, on the same floor, 40 railroaders were crowded around the tables striving for the championship of various games and filling the room with the odor of Clark & Downstairs, in the reading Snover. room, 26 railroaders were digesting The Tribune's railroad notes and other ar-Altogether, about 220 men were ticles. in the building when the ladies of the Auxiliary society came in to hold their regular meeting, and Secretary Pear sall's hair began to turn gray. He is such a gallant man that he instantly resolved that the ladies must be a commodated, even if the lecture should "bust." After some deliberation the room where Clark & Snover predominated was divided and the ladles seated behind a temporized partition. Considerable inconvenience is frequently fell by the members, and taking into consideration the excellent work accomplished by the association, it is certainly a reflection upon the five wealthy local railroad companies that they are so tardy in providing a place more suitable for the requirements of their employes and of more credit to themselves and the city.
