MR. SMITH'S SENSATION

It Made Its Appearance Again in Common Pleas Court.

METHOD OF DRAWING JURORS

Present System is Contrary to Law, Mr. Smith Says—Jury Finally Secured but Did Not Have to Pass in Case, as a Nonsuit Was Granted.

John W. Simonton, president judge of the Dauphin county courts, came up from Harrisburg yesterday afternoon to assist the local judges in trying cases on this week's common pleas trial list.

The jury to try the case was drawn from the main court room, and when Deputy Prothonotary Myron Kassing began to call the names of the jurors Attorney Cornelius Smith sprang one of his little sensations by objecting.

He said that the law specifically states that a disinterested person shall draw the names of the jurors and as they are announced the prothonotary or his representative shall record the names.

Judge Archbald, without passing upon the merits of the point raised, directed Court Messenger M. F. McAndrew to draw the names of the jurors from the box and Mr. Kassing recorded them.

Mr. Smith was alone in conducting the case for the plaintiff and the defendant company was represented by ex-Judge W. H. Jessup, Attorney E. N. Willard and Attorney M. I. Corbett.

Mr. Smith rested with the testimony of Mr. Moore, reserving the right to call later a witness who was in Carbondale yesterday afternoon.

Ex-Judge Kennedey called the court to grant a compulsory nonsuit on the ground that negligence on the part of the defendant company had not been shown.

Attorney Smith opposed the motion for a nonsuit. He said the company was compelled to provide a safe place to work in the connections. This tank into which Kennedy fell was so dangerous, in Mr. Smith's opinion, that according to the mine laws, it ought not only have been safely covered but guarded as well.

Judge Simonton refused to endorse Mr. Smith's line of reasoning and ordered a nonsuit on the ground that Kennedy had no occasion in the performance of duties assigned to him to go on the cover of the tank.

After the list of jurors was called yesterday morning upon the opening of the third week of the March term of common pleas court, the case of James W. Welsh, executor, against the Dwellings House Insurance company was put on trial before Judge Archbald in the main court room.

MEETING OF REFORMERS

Citizens' League Adopts a Constitution for Its Guidance.

THE WORK IT PROPOSES TO DO

Will Try to Prevent Nomination of Doubtful Characters for Office and Will Give Their Moral and Financial Support to Officers Who Enforce Laws.

A public meeting was held at the Al-bright Memorial library last night for the purpose of adopting a constitution of the Citizens' league, which was recently organized.

E. S. Williams was elected chairman of the meeting and the secretary, D. L. Morgan, read a report from the committee on constitution recommending the adoption of a constitution.

OUR JUDGES AFFIRMED.

Decisions Handed Down by the Supreme Court.

Decisions in seven Lackawanna county cases were handed down by the supreme court at Philadelphia yesterday, and in all of them the decisions of the local judges were sustained.
