TUNKHANNOCK MURDER CASE. Weaving the Net of Evidence About Fred Wall.

NINA SHOOK'S DAMAGING STORY. She Hears Conversation of a Peculiar Character—Detective Richmond Gives His Experience—Physicists and Others Testify.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Tunkhannock, April 11.—When court was called this morning Abram Ide again took the stand and the defense resumed the cross-examination. For two hours or more the witness underwent a terrible battering in the effort to break down his testimony. It was a trying ordeal and the witness was worried and nervous. Though, in some unimportant details he crossed himself, he stood up to the main facts and the audience were inclined to believe that he was telling the truth.

Nina Tells Her Story.

Nina Shook—I worked at the Stevens home in January, 1894. Bert Pratt, Alva Pratt and Mr. Buchanan were stopping there during court. Fred Wall was about the hotel on the night of the 8th. I noticed him and Pratt going out and in several times. Next day they were all there. I was sweeping in the dining room and hall, next the bar room. They came in between 10 and 11, and I heard them say "if they search us they won't find anything, not even a jackknife." He came in several days after, when Mr. Stevens had discharged him, and wanted some dinner. I gave it to him. While eating he said something about their suspecting him of the murder. I said, "if you know anything about it, why don't you tell?" He said "I don't want to hang myself."

A Hawshaw Interviewed.

W. H. Richmond, detective—Live at Pittston. First saw Fred Wall on Nov. 26 last. We went to LaGrange together. Saw Fred first coming into town in a buggy and many by the name of Jordan pointed him out to me. I was made acquainted with him in McGee's hotel. We went down to Wall's hotel and they refused leaving him in there. Said they didn't want him around. Went to Keefer House and the Stevens House and had drinks all night and I could trust him. I told him I wanted to be sure. Told him to hold up his right hand to God and swear, and he did so. Then I told him that I came from Providence, R. I., where I and my partner were robbing a shoemaker, and the shoemaker carried and surprised us and we were obliged to take his life; that I came here with $2,600, which I had up in the bank. I said my partner was still writing to me and I wanted somebody I could trust to help me out. He said he could prove he was all right by Byron Ayers. I asked him what he could prove; said I wanted a partner who had been through the mill. Said he could prove by Byron Ayers that he had been through the mill. I asked him who he had killed and he said "if they get hold of me they would hang me." Can't say if he told me the man's name or not, but said he was a man who came down to court from Nicholson. We planned to get my money from the bank and I asked him where we should go with it, and he said Canada would be a good place. Witness told of some more unimportant details, and said that he then made the arrest. The court closed with his testimony still unfinished. V. H. L.
